Summary and Review.

OUR latest advices by the Overland Mail are, from Bombay, June 7; Allahabad and Madras, June 5; Calcutta, June 4.

ALL general news on the weather and famine received by the mail just arrived will be considered flat and stale after perusal of the telegram in to-day's Times, dated Calcutta, June 30, from which we learn the following particulars:—

Public anxiety is relieved by the latest meteorological report, the barometer rising over the whole of India, except in Assam, Behar, and Madras. Moderate rain has fallen in Bombay and the Central Provinces. Assam has had two inches of rainfall and Bareilly one inch. Copious showers have fallen in Bengal. There seems at present no reason for believing that the rainfall will prove other than an average one.

In Madras, however, the Government deem the general prospects not improved. Prices still continue rising. The total number on relief works is 135,935, an increase of 10,130; on gratuitous relief 71,578, a decrease of 4,053. In Mysore locusts continue to do damage. In the western districts prices are slightly rising. In the eastern districts the total number on relief works is 40,833, on gratuitous relief 12,205. The mortuary returns in the North-West Provinces show the number of deaths for the year ended April, 1878, to have been 157,326, against 78,408 in the previous year.

THE Bombay Gazette is happy to say that the cholera and small-pox epidemic at Morar has almost entirely disappeared. It remarks that among the victims of cholera died the person who was so well-known as the champion shot in India for three years in succession—Sergeant Bryon, 62nd Regiment.

IN the Malta telegram of the Times Correspondent we read that the following appeared in General Orders on the 20th instant:—

His Royal Highness the Field-Marshal Commander-in-Chief desires to express, through his Excellency the Governor, to the forces under his command, his unqualified approval of the appearance of the troops composing the garrison of Malta and of the Indian Expeditionary Force.

With regard to the garrison of Malta his Royal Highness is highly satisfied with its efficiency and general bearing, and has to express his satisfaction at the appearance of the Royal Malta Fencible Artillery officially inspected by him for the first time.

With reference to the Indian Expeditionary Force, his Royal Highness cannot speak too highly of their thorough soldier-like qualities, both on parade and when on duty. Their uniform good conduct and smartness reflect the greatest credit on all ranks.

Their steadiness under arms and at drill, and the excellent condition of their camps leave nothing to be desired. His Royal Highness will have great pleasure in acquainting her Majesty the Queen with the satisfactory condition of the forces and the gratification he has himself experienced in having had an opportunity of making himself personally acquainted with the troops of her Majesty's Indian Empire. His Royal Highness compliments Lieutenant-General Sir J. Airey, K.C.B., Major-General Ross, C.B., Brigadier-Generals J. Watson, C.B., V.C., and H. T. Macpherson, C.B., V.C., on the care and attention they have bestowed on the troops under their command, and desires that they will convey to the officers commanding corps his appreciation of the manner in which they have carried out their responsible duties.

NOTHING can well be more gratifying in its way than the telegram received by the Viceroy from the Duke of Cambridge at Malta, which we learn to have been couched in these words:—"Having completed the inspection of the Indian forces here assembled, I beg to congratulate you and the Indian armies on the admirable appearance and efficiency of all the troops. Their health is excellent and their conduct admirable."

THE heat, says a Calcutta paper, on the 1st and 2nd June was the most oppressive that has been felt in Calcutta for some years, and it has been attended with most fatal results in the shape of deaths from heat apoplexy, the deaths of no less than four ship captains on Sunday night having been reported at Bankshall. These are, Captain J. S. Cox, of the Duke of Sutherland; Captain Casey, of the Great Victoria; Captain R. Siney, of the Paladin; and Captain Grossell, of the Saint Mirren.

SIR STEUART BAYLEY was to have left Simla on the 7th of June, taking over the Commissionership of Assam from Colonel Keatinge at Calcutta on the 24th. He would then proceed to Darjiling, to see Sir Ashley Eden in reference to certain public questions now before the Government of India.

It is stated in the Pioneer that two Sepoys of the 4th Punjab Infantry had been stabbed in Bannu Cantonment by a Bannuchi fanatic—one fatally. A third Sepoy, a Punjabi Musalman, had been wounded in arresting the assassin, who was to be dealt with summarily under the Murderous Outrages Act. The assassin is a resident of British territory.

THE Daily News understands that Lord Northbrook is about to present to the House of Lords an important petition from the inhabitants of Calcutta, giving expression to the feeling, which they say is prevalent throughout the country, that by making necessary, judicious, and vigorous retrenchments, and by a fair and equitable adjustment of military charges payable by England and India respectively, a considerable saving might be effected, which would render unnecessary the new taxation lately imposed. This petition has received a great number of influential signatures. Mr. Fawcett is also to present to the House of Commons, on the occasion of the introduction of the Indian Budget, petitions to a similar effect, and also numerous signed, from Bengal and Madras. While the petitioners in the former presidency go very fully into questions of expenditure, the Madras petitioners more particularly endeavour to show the one-sided nature of the Act recently introduced.

WE are told that the Secretary of State has sanctioned an arrangement by which officers of the army in India may accumulate three months' privilege leave and spend it in England on full pay, and we make no doubt that the intelligence has been very acceptable to the service. But experience teaches us that subalterns should avail themselves of the boon exceptionally, and after mature consideration only, and it is the subaltern who will, in all probability, be the more ready to return to his belongings and first loves.

It is affirmed that the cultivation of the poppy in the Nepal Terai is increasing; and that amongst the many questions under consideration by Government is one relating to the export of opium from Nepal through British territory, under passes granted to traders by the Punjab authorities. Last year it appears that the purchase of Nepal opium was sanctioned at prices on the same scale as those given to cultivators in British territory. We have a strong impression that this privilege of exporting the drug under favourable conditions, was not very long since much sought after by one or more Native States that could be named.

ADMIRAL SIR WILLIAM HALL, whose death we regret to see recorded this last week, was well known, nearly forty years ago, as Commander of the Nemesis, a steamer which joined the China Expeditionary Force on the 25th November, 1840, and whose appearance at that time, almost under the very windows of Government House, Macao, astonished the Portuguese authorities as much as the Chinese themselves. The Nemesis, when light, and with her sliding keel up, drew only four feet of water, and by the facility with which she could run into creeks and close into shallow shores was an invaluable adjunct to the British fleet then in the China seas. Between three and four months after her first arrival she performed the dashing exploit of forcing the passage up the Canton river towards Second Bar; the briefest notice of which service Captain Elliot, the plenipotentiary of the occasion, declared "unsuitable," if it "failed to mention the admirable steadiness and ability displayed by Mr. William H. Hall, R.N., Commander of the Nemesis, in the navigation of that extraordinary vessel."

THE Globe remarks on the great difficulty of obtaining trustworthy statistics on the subject of the mortality caused by Indian famines; adding that, a short time ago, an Irish member loosely estimated the number of deaths due to the late calamity at some millions, but that this was no more than a random guess. Finally, it assumes that the famine has increased the average rate of mortality by considerably more than 100 per cent. over an immense breadth of thickly-populated territory. But India is not alone in suffering from this kind of visitation. Accounts from China present a sadder and more appalling picture. In the House, on Thursday, in reply to Mr. Rathbone's question on this subject, Mr. Bourke stated that recent despatches had been received, which would eventually be placed on the table. Meanwhile, "he did not think it desirable to state the nature of the details, which were very lamentable; an awful mortality had happened."

THERE is something very mysterious in the following notice, which appears in the Times of the 28th inst.:—Orders have been received at Portsmouth for the Euphrates, Indian troopship, to be got ready to sail at once for Malta, and it is said that the Crocodile is to follow. The purpose of these confidential instructions has caused considerable conjecture, but it is probable that the destination of the Euphrates will not be made known to the officers until she arrives at Malta. On the one hand it is stated that the trooper is to be employed in transporting horses and artillery into the Black Sea, while on the other it is reported that she is intended to bring some of the Indian army from Malta to England.

At a meeting of the East India Association, held at the Westminster Palace Hotel on Wednesday last, Mr. George Foggo, formerly of the Legislative Council in Bombay, read a paper on the "Employment of Indian Troops in Europe." The subject is an interesting one, and it is no doubt profitable to elicit the opinions of experienced, thinking men on a problem now under solution of much importance in its bearing upon our future military and political strength in Europe. But the views of the lecturer, who looks upon the formation of the little Malta camp as prejudicial to Indian interests, were clearly not those of the majority of his hearers, some of whom were warm and enthusiastic supporters of the Government measure. Generals Sir Le Grand Jacob and Sir George Malcolm, Colonel Arbuthnot, Mr. Tayler, Mr. Dutt, Mirza Pir Bakhsh, and others were among the speakers.

WE have quoted in the present number of the Mail the greater part of an article in the Pioneer, which might have been usefully laid before the above-mentioned meeting as suggestive of lines of argument appropriate to the occasion, and to this we invite the attention of our readers. But we may here separately notice the final paragraph, which, though omitted in the extract, involves a consideration of special moment. It treats of perhaps the most serious objection put forward by prognosticators of ill, who condemn the recent movement of sipahis to the West, and answers the question—will not the effect of service, and successful service, against an European enemy be to give the native soldier an overweening and unhealthy idea of his own worth? The following is the view expressed:—"A little reflection will show that such service will be the last thing in the world to generate contempt of the power of England. From the time he embarks until the time he returns the Sepoy must feel himself to be utterly helpless without his officers and without the care of Government. Whether he is employed in Egypt or in Asia Minor, or kept to garrison Malta, he will feel that he is absolutely dependent on the Government he serves for every necessary of life. He will have no familiar bania, no handy bazar, to supply his customary wants, no family, no friends. If he does help to win in the field, he will not know how it was done, or how the arrangements which secured success were made. From first to last he must feel himself the instrument of a Government whose strength and the extent of whose resources he but faintly appreciated before. If the whole army could be put through the same experiences, it would be pure gain." This is all very well, so far as it goes, but the picture is incomplete; it is one side, and the pleasanter one, and only in such light can we acknowledge its skill and truthfulness.

A TELEGRAM dated Singapore, May 25, reports a collision between the outward-bound mail P. and O. steamer Achdive and the Dutch steamer Voorwaards at Penang. Both vessels were seriously damaged. The mails, passengers, and treasure were transferred to the Achilles, which was to leave on the above day for China. The same telegram gives us the latest intelligence from Acheen that the Dutch troops have made a successful attack upon Segli. Their loss was three killed and seventeen wounded. There has also been some fighting at Edie and Loang, but the losses were insignificant.

THE story of the frenzy of a Baluch sipahi, at Haidarabad in Sind, "who, after shooting his mistress, whom he believed unfaithful, quietly left the barracks in the early morning with one-hundred rounds of ammunition and deliberately shot every person he met," is not so curious, perhaps, as many would, on first hearing, suppose. It is certainly an extreme case, and the fact that he was shot by an officer with a revolver, after killing six persons and dangerously wounding four others, enhances the dramatic horror of the narrative. But the particular frame of mind which leads to an outburst of this description is hardly an abnormal condition for Pathans, Malays, and other types of untamed and untrained characters with whom officers are thrown in the course of their Indian career. Not long ago we observed, in a published telegram from the Straits, that "while Colonel Hall was inspecting the Artillery a Malay ran a-muck and wounded several people before he was killed."

AMONG the later items of intelligence which have reached us by telegraph and anticipated the mail, the Panjab Frontier re-organisation scheme is stated to be in course of settlement on the basis of the Secretary of State's despatch. It is believed, however, that the most important of the Viceroy's suggestions have been adopted, but the amended scheme has not yet been officially published. The question of the cession of Berar has, for the present at all events, been settled. It is stated that Sir Salar Jung has accepted the decisions of the Government, and the question is not again to be mooted till the Nizam arrives at his majority.

AN Alexandria telegram of the 26th June announces the settlement of the claims against the Dairah; that is to say, only some minor claims remain, which are to be settled in a few days. The Committee of Inquiry into Revenue has been busy taking oral testimony; and during the last two days has examined delegates of the Bondholders' Committee. The sales of Government property to settle various claims continue daily. The Khediv was to return to Cairo in a few days.

THE Karachi Beacon considers that a prediction which it made some months ago, regarding the trade between Sind and the neighbouring States of Kalat (including Bala), has been fulfilled in the most satisfactory manner. Their impression had been derived from Major Sandeman's view on the subject expressed after a tour in Buluchistan; views which that officer entertained in consequence of personal communications with the local chiefs, and which were confirmed by the results of the British occupation of Kwetta. We are told that now, "every day, in Kandahar, Kafilas of camels, numbering from 50 to 170, are either arriving from or leaving for the Khan's territories and Khurasan. Merchants from all parts of Kalat and Kandahar may be seen riding their camels about Karachi, with mounted attendants, making their bargains and loading their animals with goods in exchange for the merchandise they have brought with them. These native traders spend some months on the road on each journey and stop a few months in Karachi. They ride the Arabian dromedary (the hair of which is deep brown and long), a much better looking animal than the ordinary camel, used merely as a beast of burden. Apparently well-to-do and good Musalmans, at the hour of evening prayer they dismount, tie their camels to the gate of any convenient compound they happen to be passing, and quietly walking inside, throw down the praying cloth and repeat the evening prayer, without the remotest notion that they are trespassing. These are the men who can now pursue their trade without fear, and they are doing their utmost, apparently, to add to their business."

MANY of our readers will thank the Times for the particulars which it gives of the Maharaja of Johore, who has quite recently arrived in England, and whose title otherwise bids fair to confound him with chiefs of Rajputana or Central India. He is, it appears, "the grandson of one of the Malay princes by whom the island of Singapur and its dependencies were ceded to the British Government in 1824." The cession, as well as that of Malacca and other settlements, was, it will be remembered, provided for by treaty with the Government of the Netherlands, to whom we gave up at the same time all British possessions in Sumatra; the object of the changes being to recognise the principles of Free Trade, and to separate Dutch territory from our own. Mr. Canning had a high notion of the value of Singapur which, according to the annals of the period, had been pointed out to him as the unum necessarium, or one thing requisite to make the British Empire in India complete. "It completely commanded the Straits of Malacca, which was a most important channel of navigation." The final union was, without doubt, of great advantage to us.

To revert, however, to the Maharaja himself. We are reminded that he first visited England in 1866, "shortly after his accession to the sovereignty of Johore, and the object he had in view then, as now, was not to seek the redress of grievances, but simply to improve his acquaintance with the English people. On his first visit he was invested with the order of Knighthood of the Star of India, in acknowledgment of important public services rendered to the British Government in the Straits of Malacca by his predecessors and himself; and only last year he was further distinguished by the bestowal of the Order of the Grand Cross of St. Michael and St. George, having done conspicuous service to our Government during the disturbances in Perak. He is popular with his own subjects, who include, besides Malays, about 100,000 Chinese, and he is well known for the hospitality he extends to European visitors to his country." A telegram from Naples of June 15 acquainted us with the Maharaja's return to Europe with one Unghoo Haji Muhammad, English and Malay private secretaries, and four servants. He is now on this side of the Channel, and we learn that, in proof of his loyalty, he has had a portrait of her Majesty, painted by Mr. Taverner Knott, to take back to Government House, Singapore.

SUCH is the perversity of human nature that we often know little of, and seldom trouble ourselves about things with which it is natural we should be well acquainted, and which are ever at hand, and available to us. How many Londoners, for instance, have never visited the Tower, Thames Tunnel, or Monument; how many excellent geographers, and travellers of repute, to whom Asiatic steppes, African deserts and Polar regions are familiar studies, have never thought about the Cotswold and Chiltern hills, and are haply ignorant of the sources of the Dee and Derwent. Again, how many children or descendants of a Colonel Newcome are there, to whom the sipahi of India has been a means of maintenance and perhaps distinction, who have no more correct an idea of his reality than he himself has of High Art or the Renaissance! At the present moment a change has come over the public taste, and the appearance of our neglected Indian subject in Western Europe has caused quite a sensation in his favour. The sipahi has actually become an object of attraction to fastidious London. He is to be looked at as the newest wax figure at Madame Tussaud's; he is to be scrutinised as the latest importation to the Zoological Gardens. Else, what means this advertisement which day after day greets the reader of the morning paper?—

BRITISH TROOPS AT MALTA.—Cook's Special Return Tickets (first class), Southampton to Malta and back, by Peninsular and Oriental mail steamers, good for three months, £25. For full particulars of above apply to Thos. Cook and Son, Chief-office, Ludgate-circus.

As the investment is inexpensive, and there is no question of patent or copyright, let us hope that the strange conceit will bring substantial profit.

THE recent visit of the late Mr. Charles Mathews to India renders appropriate an expression of regret in this paper that one so accomplished should have passed away from the stage of life as from the professional boards. Among the many actors left to us, there is, perhaps, not one who could be named as a fitting successor to the late comedian in character such as those he represented so frequently in "Patter versus Clatter," "Cool as a Cucumber," and "My Awful Dad." His Puff and Sir Fretful Plagiary in the "Critic" was a double impersonation of remarkable skill; but those who saw Charles Mathews only in the later period of his career can form little conception of the brilliancy and "verve" of his earlier days.

WANT of space prevents the insertion of interesting evidence on the murder of the lamented Mr. Cooper. This is contained in a letter from two missionaries at Bhamo, which we purpose reproducing in our next issue.

TELEGRAMS TO THE TIMES.

The following is from a telegram to the Times, dated Calcutta, June 23:—The season up to this has proved most abnormal, and considerable anxiety is experienced lest the prevailing atmospheric disturbance should indicate a partial failure of the rains. An important note by the Government meteorologist was published yesterday in the Gazette. His conclusions are: First that the persistent and excessive pressure over Northern India at present tends to diminish the barometric gradient between Southern Asia and the mid-Indian Ocean. If this be not compensated for by increased pressure over the area south of India, then the monsoon current will be below its average strength. Second, there appear no strongly marked abnormal variations of pressure over Northern India. In consequence of this, it is probable that the rainfall will be much more equally distributed than last year. Third, comparing the present year with 1865, it is probable that the heavy rainfall during the cold weather, more especially in May, will slightly retard the advent of the monsoon in Upper India.

In connection with the famine a painful case is reported from Bellary. A child aged seven years was convicted of murder. The Judge stated that the tale was a sad one of want and misery in the house. The child's little sister, the deceased, was at the point of death from lack of nourishment, and the mother was prostrated by fever and unable to feed it. At last, distracted by its crying, the unfortunate woman suddenly put the child into the arms of the accused, who, by the mother's directions, took it out and threw it into a well. The Judge recommended a free pardon. It is only by recording these individual instances of suffering when brought prominently forward, as in the present case, that we can, even in the slightest measure, realise the terrible ordeal through which the people of Southern India have been, and still are, passing. It certainly rather perplexes ordinary understandings to conceive in this case how on the facts stated, this poor infant could, under any possibility, have been convicted; but the ways of Indian justice are often strangely inscrutable to the uninitiated.

The last Gazette contains an important report on the irrigation works in Bengal for 1876-77. The total capital invested by the State in Bengal on irrigation works up to the close of 1876-77 amounted to rupees 44,123,640. The expenditure for the year was rupees 3,393,328, and the working expenses exceeded the revenue by rupees 268,200. The total balance against canals on account of unpaid and working expenses to the end of the year was rupees 1,365,045; interest charges for the year, 1,912,094 rupees; total interest charges up to the end of the year, rupees 9,656,938; total accumulated debt of account, interest, and loss, rupees 2,180,294 for 1876-77; and total up to the close of the year, rupees 11,021,983; receipts from all sources, rupees 329,760; capital sunk up to the close of the year on canal operations, rupees 43,320,903; on abandoned schemes and those under consideration, rupees 802,737. The gross revenue for the year (rupees 329,760) exceeds the previous year by rupees 99,326. Owing, however, to the increase (rupees 68,470) in the working expenditure, the net increase is reduced to rupees 30,856. The total accumulated debt for interest and loss on working is upwards of one million sterling. Notwithstanding the increase in revenue, there is a considerable decrease in the area irrigated, which was 116,074 acres in 1875-76, but has fallen to 98,802 in 1876-77; this is attributable to the falling off in the areas on the Midnapore and Sone Canals area. The Orissa system shows a marked increase. The results of the irrigation works in Bengal tend to discourage the prospects of providing against famine by prosecuting throughout India vast irrigation schemes. The burden of taxation in normal years would infinitely exceed the economic advantages likely to accrue in abnormal famine years.

This day's paper contains the following, dated Calcutta, June 30:—At the request of the Famine Commission, the Government has consented to send a sanitary commissioner to investigate the causes of the mortality recently reported in the North-West Provinces. The first fruits of the work of the Famine Commission are published in the last issue of the Gazette in the form of a most elaborate circular, containing a numerous series of minute interrogatories on almost every conceivable branch of the subject of relief and the prevention of famine. The Governments of Madras and Bombay and certain provinces in Bengal are requested to take the necessary steps to supply the desired information. The circular is divided into four chapters, the first on the condition of the country and the people, the second on relief during the earliest stages of distress, the third on the relief of famine, and the fourth on the prevention of famine. It is officially announced that the late famine has involved Mysore in a debt of 900,000 rupees.

The Vernacular Press Act has undergone certain modifications, applying to Hyderabad and certain specified districts. It is stated that the proprietor of a Poona paper, the Kiran, has been summoned before the Collector for publishing articles on the Indian expeditionary force hostile to the Government. After a warning he was discharged without further punishment.

A political concession, most important in principle, has lately been granted to the natives by the Government. A memorial was presented by certain Parsees, requesting permission to form a Volunteer corps. To this the Viceroy has replied that though he deemed it undesirable to permit separate corps, nevertheless, if any natives, Parsees or others, understanding the English language, inclined to adopt the uniform, and willing and able to perform the duties of the position, desired to be enrolled among the European members of Volunteer corps, he would be glad to see them so enrolled.

Odds and Ends.

It is said that Mr. J. Watts Smyth, at present Officiating Judge in the Panjab Chief Court, will be confirmed in that appointment, v. Mr. Scarlett Campbell, retired.

ALLEN'S INDIAN MAIL,

MONDAY, July 1, 1878.

GENERAL KAUFMANN AND THE HINDUS.

THE Indian papers have republished a remarkable order by General Kaufmann, which, however much it may gratify the Mahammadan population of Turkistan, will not be so agreeable to the Hindu Banya or trader, against whom its provisions are especially directed. In fact, we should not be surprised if it were to nip in the bud that almost reckless enterprise which carries into Eastern Persia, Central Asia, and Africa, far beyond the limits of their native land, these Sind and Punjab merchants, or their agents, in search of profit, at one time fairly earned, at another the result of usury. Of course the Banya will succumb, or has ere this succumbed, to the blow; and his fall will be hailed with satisfaction by those who regard him in his character of a money-lender, thriving upon the misery and poverty of his victims. Such is the light in which he appears to many Englishmen in India, who know him only in his connections with the zamindar or raiyat; and it will, therefore, among our own countrymen, require a more than commonly strong anti-Russian bias to throw blame upon General Kaufmann for the action he has taken on behalf of the indebted Muslim of Turkistan. He comes forward ostensibly to rescue the simple-minded, impoverished Uzbek peasant from the snare of the comparatively wealthy foreigner who is fattening on him; and the cause is provocative of sympathy. But few of us know the Banya in his reality, that is, the Banya who, usually residing at Shikarpur, the frontier commercial town of Upper Sind, goes forth from time to time to sojourn in a strange land, willingly undergoing exile and isolation among men of another creed, idol-haters and idol-breakers, with whom he has no sentiment in common.

In the days of Alexander Burnes and his fellow-explorers, and again in the period of the Indian Sipahi Mutinies, when a loyal and friendly feeling on the part of our mercantile classes was of no small value, there were certain merchants of Sind whose advice and assistance were continually sought by the authorities. These men were shrewd, intelligent, enterprising, full of faith in the honour and prestige of the British name, and far more ready to throw in their lot with our officers than to trust to Afghan or British intrigue. Their agents, passing through the Passes, settled at Kandahar and Herat, or penetrated into Bukhara and Samarkand, Yazd and Karman; in some cases not returning for ten or twenty years; with respect to family ties, forgetting and forgotten—but retaining enough of their Hinduism to induce others to follow in their track. Heretofore it may be presumed that the Russian rule was more protective to their interests and favourable to their claims than that of a Muhammadan Power—Persia for instance. But things have now changed. The well-being of the British subject would give way to that of the Russian Mohammedan of Turkistan.

The treatment of the Hindu in Persia is that of a settler in the land, under a heavy yoke of disability. But with all his complaints and endurances he comes and goes much as ever, and easily accommodates himself to the caprices of a local Governor, not worse, perhaps, than those whom his forefathers had known in India. English officers have passed through Yazd and Karman in 1865-66 and 1870-71, and given us their experiences of these men. The Perso-Baluch Commission was at the latter city at Christmas, 1870 and, wanting money for Government Bills, applied to the Hindus. It was offered at the rate of 220 kirans for 100 rupees instead of the usual 250; if, therefore, 2,000 rupees were required, it would be represented by 4,400 kirans (i.e., tumans 440) instead of 5,000 (tumans 500). Valuing the tuman (10 kirans) at eight shillings, this would be £176 for £200, or 12 per cent., on a bill which might be cashed within a few weeks. Yet, with all this usurious dealing and disregard of securing the good opinion of officers deputed by the State whose subjects they loudly professed themselves to be, these men were like children in their anxiety to make known the many grievances from which they suffered under the Local Government. It was even alleged that they were stopped by sentries from coming to the Sahibs; but it appeared that the Governor, on hearing the case, had removed the restriction; and they certainly managed to effect an entrance into the grounds of the “Bagh-i-Nishat” where the Mission was lodged, and to tender their good wishes and bring presents, such as cakes, dried fruits, or sugar.

As regards the Hindu in Central Asia, Vambéry and Schuyler are good recent authorities. The first mentions there are some five hundred in Bukhara. “They form,” he says, “no families, and scattered throughout the capital and provinces, they have in some wonderful manner got all the management of money into their hands, there being no market, not even a village where the Hindu is not ready to act as usurer. Bowing with the deepest submissiveness, like the Armenian in Turkey, he nevertheless all the time fleeces the Usbek in fearful fashion; and as the pious Kadi for the most part carries on business in common with the worshipper of Vishnu, it is rarely that the victim escapes.” Schuyler is less hard upon his man. In his instructive chapter on Tashkand, he mentions that three of the Caravanserais in that city “are occupied almost exclusively by Hindus, of whom there are large numbers in every considerable town of Central Asia, there being some 140 in Tashkand alone.” He adds that “they come chiefly from Shikarpur, and although engaging in many kinds of commerce, devote themselves pre-eminently to money-lending and usury.” It should be understood that the number of Hindus in the towns of Central Asia are far greater than those in the Persian cities we have mentioned, where they sometimes fall as low as 20 or 10. The Parsis, or original inhabitants of Persia, fire-worshippers and disciples of Zoroaster, are diminishing considerably; there was a great exodus of them during the recent famine.

Independently of the more immediate reasons which have induced the Russian Governor of Turkistan to issue the restrictive order to which we refer—and the present state of affairs in Europe may not be without its influence on the local question—we are doubtful of the wisdom of a policy tending to exclude from Central Asia traders whose presence might be turned to excellent account. But the fiat has gone forth, and we shall watch the result with interest. We re-publish from the Bombay Press, in to-day's issue, the document which has elicited the observations now recorded.

TASHKAND GENERAL ORDER.

The following is a literal translation of a General Order issued by General Kauffmann from Tashkend, as given in the Turki edition of the Turkistan Gazette, dated 1st January, 1878: It is not found in the Russian edition of the same Gazette:—

"Whereas the Hindus illegally secure large amounts of interest by lending money to the people of Turkistan on leases of property; and whereas the inhabitants of the country, who are traders or cultivators of land, will be reduced to poverty and be ruined if this illicit practice is allowed to continue; and whereas innumerable pieces of land have come under the proprietorial possession of the Hindus because of the penury of the cultivators and their encumbrance under large debts; the Governor-General's attention has been directed to put a stop to the losses thus sustained by the people, and the following orders, containing a number of Articles, are recorded on the subject:—

"Article I. No person of the Hindu class can purchase land or house property in the Turkistan dominions, (and) no subject of Turkistan is at liberty to receive loans of money from, and to transfer land or house property in an illegal manner, to Hindus.

"Article II. Any Hindu who has come into proprietorial possession of any land, whether by succession, mortgage or open purchase, should sell that property in the hands of the people of the country within six months.

"Article III. The Hindus are prohibited to obtain possession of land belonging to any person, either by lease or purchase.

"Article IV. The Mahomedan subjects of Turkistan are prohibited to sell any land or house property to Hindus through indebtedness, notwithstanding such a course may be warranted by the provisions of law (the rule is illegal even when a Hindu is placed in possession of the property by an agreement between the parties).

"Article V. If a Mahomedan be indebted to a Hindu and might have transferred any of his immovable property to his creditor in connection with the debt, he can now repurchase the property by paying through the authorities one-third of the price to the Hindu.

"Article VI. Mahomedans indebted for sums of money to the Hindus were formerly placed in confinement until such time as they repaid the amounts of their debts. This practice has been prohibited for the future.

"Article VII. The following articles belonging to the people of Turkistan will not be sold (under attachment) for debts due by them to the Hindu creditors:—Apparel for daily wearing; household articles in daily use; implements of trade; implements used in the cultivation of land; grain preserved as seed for growing; articles cooked for eating or consumption; cattle used in the cultivation of land; and domestic animals which are useful to a family, and the fodder and grass which be sufficient (or kept) for their eating. These articles of which the sale is prohibited are not only exempted (from attachment) for debts due to Hindus, but the implements used in cultivation and the attachment or sale of the implements of trade and seed grains is prohibited throughout Turkistan. Some Mohammedan traders of Turkistan give sums of money to Hindus, and through them lend the amounts under a disguise and under the name of the Hindus, and reap profits of their money by thus privately receiving interest from cultivators of land and innumerable pieces of lands belonging to cultivators have come under the possession of the creditors on account of the indebtedness of the owners. The cultivators residing in Turkistan, who are thus indebted, are hereby permitted to procure the redemption of their lands and house property by taking account of the produce of the mortgaged and leased lands for the past years from the mortgagees and the lessees, and paying them the balance or differences of the price. But if they desire to sell their lands and houses, they should arrange among themselves to transfer the property to their own countrymen."

ENGINEERS IN INDIA.—Some time ago we (Pioneer) announced that the Secretary of State had agreed to extend certain privileges relating to pensions already enjoyed by Cooper's Hill men, to Stanley and other engineers in service of the Government of India. There has, as yet, been no official notices on the subject in the Gazette, and correspondents have been writing to ask us what is the explanation of the delay. We can only repeat that we are absolutely certain of the fact we stated, that the Secretary of State has, in a despatch to the Government out here, given his consent to the arrangement described. It remains of course for the Government of India to do its part, and in carrying out concessions of this nature financial difficulties may sometimes stand in the way. But in this case the justice of the concession made is so clear,—the injustice of stultifying it would be so great,—that we cannot suppose the beneficiaries likely to be disappointed in the long run.

Notices of Books.

The Persian Manual. By Captain H. Wilberforce Clarke, Royal Engineers. Allen and Co. 1878.

The great success and proved utility of Forbes' "Hindustani Manual" has induced Captain Clarke to prepare, on a similar basis, a manual for the Persian language. No time need be spent on demonstrating the advantages of such books, as the point has long been decided by the public; and but little need be said of the desirability of having such a manual for the language of Persia. The commerce of Persia, it is true, is not great, and we can scarcely suppose that any large number of merchants and traders are anxious to become acquainted with Persian; but the noble literature and ancient glories of the land of the sun have given such pre-eminence to this language that it is more or less current from the confines of Asiatic Turkey to the Bay of Bengal. It is thus seen that Persian covers districts of much importance—of so much importance, indeed, that there must be no inconsiderable number of people who would gladly acquire some colloquial knowledge of it, provided that such knowledge could be obtained without interference with other pursuits. To such Captain Clarke's book will certainly be welcome, for it is both simple and thorough; and as it is printed in the Roman character no time need be lost in preliminary efforts at deciphering symbols.

Besides local dialects there are two well marked kinds of Persian, one of which may be termed classical, the other practical. Classical Persian is, of course, the language of literature, and is justly regarded as the model of correctness and elegance. Practical Persian differs in many respects from the standard form of speech, both in pronunciation and in the words in common use, changes chiefly brought about by intermixture with other tongues. Captain Clarke has kept to the idiom and vocabulary of the classical form of Persian, while recognising the common method of pronunciation; and this is certainly the most convenient course he could have pursued.

The distinguishing peculiarity of Captain Clarke's book is this,—he is not satisfied with giving a solitary rendering of the English sentences; and he does so, as he tells us, that many ways of expressing one idea may be presented to the reader. Diligent students will, no doubt, by this means, be able to acquire a rather extensive knowledge of Persian constructions, but it is open to question whether it is wise to present so much at once to the beginner. However, by simply disregarding the alternative phrases the learner will save himself from confusion.

The author calls attention to the printing, and it was right that he should do so, for considerable care has been taken to lighten the learner's labour by the resources of typography. Compound expressions of all kinds have been carefully linked together by hyphens, and hyphens also clearly indicate the various inflexional prefixes and adjuncts. Those who know Persian will understand how much a tyro's progress may be facilitated by such contrivances.

The "Persian Manual," is, therefore, a carefully prepared and useful book, containing about 3,000 classified sentences, for which about 8,000 Persian equivalents are given. The Dialogues are of more value to residents in India than to travellers in Persia, a disadvantage inevitably resulting from the fact of their being originally written for Hindustani; but an admirably prepared set of tables of Persian weights, measures, &c., at the end of the book will enable the learner to substitute any required term in the course of the Exercises. Perhaps officers in the Civil Service of India are those who most feel the need of a Persian Manual; for it is necessary to have a colloquial knowledge of Persian in order to pass the higher examinations in that language. Endless study of classical works will never confer this knowledge; nothing but absolute contact with natives, aided by such a book as this Manual, can enable an Englishman to speak Persian with ease and correctness.

NATIVE OPINION.

There are always to be found persons who, without being actual alarmists or mischief-makers, are more prone to believe in evil than in good. The craving after excitement, natural in these days to most men, is probably at the bottom of this mental disease. Hence more examples of it are found in India, perhaps, than elsewhere. There are so many men condemned to almost solitary confinement in dismal out-stations. There are so few opportunities of discussing and correcting our own opinions. Life at times even to the most zealous seems such a dismal monotone that even the advent of a calamity is better than nothing. Rumours of disaffection and speculations on the probable success of rebellion are not weighed; they are welcomed, and accepted with faith. The brace of Englishmen condemned to rust in the routine of some miserable out-station revel in the idea that they are sitting on a mine. The faith tones their nerves and braces their ink-sodden brain. They persuade themselves that there is much excitement abroad. The miserable natives, whose whole thoughts are occupied just now in keeping body and soul together, are supposed to be watching the Eastern Question. The local Rajah, who at a pinch could muster fifty matchlocks, has received an agent from one of the feudatories. The feudatory evidently wishes to know which side this mighty potentate will take. Officials and others of notable loyalty are sent for, and questioned as to this pregnant event. But there is good reason to believe that native opinion generally was at no time more thoroughly convinced of our power than it is now, and never was more loyal.

Of the spirit of the army it is superfluous to speak. War is of course a great evil. But for many reasons, and without any lightness of heart, it may be said that worse things might happen to the English Empire generally than war at the present time. If the troops sent from India find active service, and fight side by side with British regiments, a great deal will have been done to make the natives of India one people with us. They regard it as a mark of confidence and honour that they are allowed to share the labours of the Imperial army. They are eager, many of them, to wipe out the tarnish which the Mutiny cast on the name of the "Sepoy." And this feeling extends to many who are not in the army. There can be no doubt that the more intelligent and educated natives are beginning to identify themselves with England. The visit of the Prince of Wales, and the assumption by the Queen of the Imperial title, have not been without some effect in this direction.

Passing over the army, the people with whom we have to reckon may be divided into four classes: (1) The feudatories; (2) the educated English-speaking native, and those who are in constant contact with Englishmen; (3) the educated native who mixes little with the English; (4) the mass of the people. As to the feudatories, there can be no doubt of their loyalty. If possible, they would no doubt give active help. But their power in this respect is much over-estimated. Their troops fulfil the duties of police as well as of soldiers. Without English officers and a thorough English organisation they could not take the field, at any rate in Europe. It would be easier for many reasons to raise fresh regiments. The idea that we run any risk from the forces of the tributaries, or that any of the princes have the smallest desire of attempting to act against us, is not to be entertained. What they would do, supposing we were to leave India, or in the case of a thorough ruin and break-up of the English Empire, it is hard to say. It would be a case then of saave qui peut, and each would try to get as much as he could out of the fire.

It is from the English-speaking natives and those who come most in contact with Englishmen that most will be heard in disparagement of England's power, and expressive of apprehension of the result of a war. Such men will talk glibly of the smallness of our army, the magnitude of the other European Powers, and the want of able generals and officers in England. It will almost invariably be found that the opinions of this class on this, as on most matters, are mere distorted echoes of English views. The education of our schools seems to take the nerves out of native intellect, and to leave in it nothing but the power of assimilation not always intelligent. In Keshub Chunder Sen and all those Bengali reformers there is nothing, so far as we can see, but an imitation of certain phases of European thought. Half the so-called disloyalty of the native press is an attempt to copy the free speech of English writers. The insolence of the Babu, so offensive sometimes, is purely inoffensive in spirit, and is his idea of an independent carriage. So it is with the fears expressed by some of the more Anglicised natives as to Russia's power and her near advance. It is nothing but the reflection of the views of English Russophobists, or the results of conversations with some of ourselves. The soundest guide to native opinion is the view taken by those natives who have been educated enough to understand politics and to think, but who see little or nothing of Englishmen. Such men are to be found among the larger zemindars, and merchants in the smaller centres of trade. These men, as a rule, know all about the war, and watch it with considerable interest. One or two in a circle will take a newspaper, and at the larger cities they will even make arrangements to get the telegrams.

They have a more or less rough notion of the geography of the places involved. Their general opinion is that England is bound to fight, and they have no misgivings as to her power. Dilligence is often caused by a consciousness of weakness which is not observed by others, or is to them obscured by other qualities. We are apt to think of England as a small island. But to the native of India, England is the country that holds his people in her grasp and rules their fate. Apart from their belief in her power, the educated native has no desire to see the rule of England shaken or subverted. He is beginning to think of himself as the fellow-subject, not as the subject of Englishmen. He remembers too well what was meant by the eclipse of the British Government in 1857. He has little wish to repeat the experience. Some little irritation there may be regarding recent taxation. But it is no more than must be caused by a fresh impost. It is really insignificant from a political point of view. Among the merchants there is some apprehension lest the expenses of the expeditionary force should be charged to India, and thus fresh taxation be rendered necessary. But any intention of committing the meanness of such an act has been disclaimed by the Ministry, and no doubt the disclaimer will become known. The fact that this expedition will not be a burden on India should be published officially without delay.

In discussing public opinion in India, the great mistake generally made is in attributing to the people any thought or opinion at all. As a mass, they know nothing of Turkey or of Russia, or in fact of anything. The only thing to be apprehended is their intense ignorance, which renders them liable to be imposed on. The tribe of Baluchis or Iranis, who lately invaded the Banda district and other places, found it possible to raise supplies by representing themselves to be the remains of the Sultan's army fleeing before the Russians. In out-of-the-way places the noisy drums and guns of a marriage procession will sometimes cause a panic, and make the villagers take to flight. Time and the spread of education are the only remedy for this kind of thing, and how slow they are may be gathered from the panic which lately drove the whole of a Scotch district within doors, in consequence of a report that six lions were marching down to devastate the parish. But to speak of the people here as being excited about the Russian war in the same sense that we speak of the English public being so excited, is to misapprehend their present condition and nature. The only thing to be said about Indian public opinion in this sense is, that there is no such thing. To the question what do the people think about the war and England's position, the only answer is they don't think about it at all. They do not even know as much as Kinglake's Pasnia in "Eothen." They know that there are a few "sahibs" about the district, and that if they break the law they are pretty sure to be punished, and that the Sarkar insists on the revenue being paid and peace preserved. All they desire is to be allowed to follow their avocations without fear or molestation. This liberty they amply enjoy. Other ambition have they none.

[We readily republish so sensible and well-reasoned an article from a paper of such deserved reputation as the Pioneer.—Ed. Allen's Indian Mail.]

Bengal, Upper India, &c.

BHARTPUR.—The Maharaja of Bhartpur is actively engaged in recruiting his army, which numbers 10,000 men, of whom 5,000 are said to be excellent soldiers trained after the European fashion. No trained sipahi gets leave of absence even for twenty-four hours.

SIR STEWART BAYLEY will leave Simla on June 7, and take over the Commissionership of Assam from Colonel Keatinge at Calcutta on the 24th. He will then proceed to Darjeeling, to see Sir J. Ashley Eden in reference to certain public questions now before the Government of India, and finally proceed to Assam, if possible, via Rungpore and Doobree.

RAJPUTANA DUST-STORMS.—It is reported from Jodhpur that for several days before the 20th May there had been high winds and dust-storms, which culminated on that day in a violent hurricane, during which several houses and many trees were blown down in the city. Four inches of rain fell, which has done much good to the surrounding country, where it was much wanted.

POSTAGE RATES.—People sufficiently burdened with home correspondence to count its cost will be glad to learn that a proposition to reduce the rates of overland postage from six and five annas to four and a-half annas and three is before the Postal Congress now sitting at Paris. This reduction, which will no doubt be established, promises to cost the Indian Post Office revenue £20,000 per annum.

LEATHER AND LITERATURE.—A European boot-maker at Mussoorie has been airing his literary skill through the medium of a handbill, which is worth quoting, from its fearless originality. He informs the ladies and gentlemen of Dehra Doon, Mussoorie, and Landour, "that he has commenced his business as boot-maker; and begs to solicit their kind patronage which will be made of Cawnpore material, but on the English style with good English lemp and wax."

LIEUTENANT-COLONEL C. W. FLETCHER, second in command, is expected to succeed to the command of the 7th Bengal Cavalry, vacant by the death of Colonel Brownlow. Lieutenant-Col. Fletcher served throughout the defence of the Residency at Lucknow from the 13th of July, 1857, till its final relief by Lord Clyde in November. He was severely wounded, shot through the left arm, and lost the use of his left hand, whilst on duty as look-out officer on the top of the Residency on the 18th August, 1857.

EFFECTS OF FAMINE.—The condition of the people in the Agra division seems to be frightful, if we are to believe a covenanted official who writes to a Calcutta paper:—"The sight of the poor creatures was very sickening. Out of the dissecting-room I have never seen more perfect specimens of skeletons. At every station, too, along the Rajpootana line, innumerable living corpses cry bitterly for food at the approach of trains."

ACCIDENT.—It is reported from Masauri that Lieutenant Porteous, when out shooting near Gona, about five days' march from Masauri, had fallen down a precipice, breaking his arm in two places, as well as some of his ribs, and injuring his hip. Dr. Harrison from the Landour, depot, had gone out to his assistance.

HORSE ARTILLERY AND GUNS.—We (Englishman) would draw the attention of our very able Deputy-Adjutant-General of Artillery to the fact that, though horse artillery guns are very good guns in their way, they are not the armament of field batteries; and that in case of an officer commanding a battery being ordered on foreign service, he should not have to wander from Peshawur to Calcutta asking, "Where are my waggons?"

WHEAT.—To show the falling off in the wheat trade of Calcutta this year as compared with last it is enough to remark that during the first four weeks of April only 700 tons were exported, though freights by the Suez Canal were only 17s. 6d. per ton, whereas last year 15,500 tons were exported in the month with freights at £3. 10s. per ton. The receipts of the East Indian Railway for the month show a decrease under the head of wheat, as compared with those for April last year, of Rs. 3,80,000.

ARAKAN HILL TRACTS.—We learn that Captain Hughes, the Superintendent of the Arakan Hill Tracts, is about to write a book upon the resources and natural productions of these tracts. No one would be found so competent to undertake the task, as Captain Hughes has devoted some years to this especial subject, and his annual reports have shown how thoroughly acquainted he has made himself with the whole country and its resources. The Captain, we learn, on the 10th of March last, held a durbar of the chiefs of some of the native tribes, whose feuds with one another have long been a source of annoyance to the more peacefully disposed tribes as Tsance. There were present all the late belligerent chiefs of the Peng and Lemroo river tribes, against whom an expedition was organised in April last. They killed a cow, and on its blood took an oath promising to desist from all hostilities in future. This is thought to show that they are beginning to have some confidence in our Government.

FATAL ACCIDENT.—We regret to record the sad and untimely death of Mr. V. B. Patterson, Assistant Engineer of the R. and I. V. S. Railway, who was killed by the ballast train, at noon, on the 15th May, in the vicinity of his bungalow, a distance of twelve miles from Promé. It would appear that the ballast train was approaching a station platform, when the deceased jumped on to a ridge of loose bricks, lying parallel to, and close to the rail, with a view of stepping on to the engine; but this fragile platform gave way, and caused him to miss the engine and fall near one of the waggons, which crushed him between the axle-box guard and the ballast outside of the rails, the train being in motion at the time. When the train was stopped, and the body extricated, it was found that life was extinct, as the neck and jaw were broken, breast severely bruised, and both legs fractured. The body was brought into Promé shortly afterwards by the ballast train, and deposited in the Hospital, where a police inquiry was held as to the cause of the accident. His remains were removed on the following day to the Promé Cemetery, followed by the officials present at the Station. For the past three years he was employed on the railway of this province, and was considered an able and energetic engineer; this, coupled with a kind and courteous demeanour, won for him great esteem from the officers and subordinates of the department, who will deeply feel his loss. Mr. Patterson was quite a young man, hardly more than twenty-five years at the time of his death.—Rangoon Times.

Madras.

COLONEL CADELL, C.B., the Inspector-General of Ordnance and Magazines, and Captain Taylor, R.N.R., Superintendent of Marine, left Madras on Thursday in the Asia, for the purpose of visiting Coconada and Vizagapatam, and selecting sites at those ports for batteries.

CINCHONA.—The Secretary of State has acknowledged from the Madras Government the receipt of 577 bales of cinchona bark per s.s. Malwa. The bark realised a net sum of £19,965. 10s. in the home markets. The renewed crown bark, which sold for 15s. 8d. in 1877, realised in some cases 11s. 10d. in 1878; the mossed crown sold for 11s. 7d. in 1877; and 8s. 1d. in 1878; whilst the branch crown, which brought 5s. 7d. in 1877, sold generally for 4s. 1d. in 1878.

DECREASE OF CULTIVATION IN BELLARY.—The extent of land cultivated up to February is 1,669,749 acres, or nearly 58 per cent. of the average cultivation (2,896,278 acres) during the same period in the three years ending 1875-76. The decrease appears in all the taluqs. The collections up to the month show a falling-off of Rs. 13,24,378, or 67 per cent. as compared with the average collections, which is spread over all the taluqs.—Madras Athenæum.

FORESTS IN MADRAS.—According to the report of Lieutenant-Colonel Biddome, on his recent tour of inspection of the Anamally Forest in Madras, it appears that the working of the forest, during the last half of the year 1877, has not been satisfactory in a financial sense. Since the year 1869-70, when fair profits were realised, there has been a deficit every year, except 1871-72 and 1873-74. In 1876-77 the expenditure was Rs. 47,533 against a revenue of only Rs. 8,491. According to Colonel Biddome's report considerable reform is required in the management of the forest.

THE COOLY TRAFFIC TO CEYLON.—A special steamer has been engaged for the cooly service between Tuticorin and Colombo. As she only draws 8ft. of water, at Tuticorin she will be able to steam within half a mile of the jetty, while at Colombo she will be able to get almost alongside the quay. She has powerful engines, and is expected to perform the journey between Colombo and Tuticorin easily in twelve hours. It is probable that she will leave Colombo every Monday and Thursday, and Tuticorin every Tuesday and Friday.—Madras Mail.

MADRAS DEFENCES.—The Marine and Military authorities at Madras have had several consultations as to how the big guns sent down in the Chanda are to be landed, but have not as yet been able to hit upon a satisfactory plan. It has been finally decided that they are to be taken on to Bombay, landed there and forwarded by rail, which might have been done in the first instance from Calcutta, instead of sending them on a voyage round India.

THE DOG AND THE COBRA.—Captain Elliston, B.S.C., writing to the Madras Mail, from Palmanair, says:—"Did you ever know of a dog killing a cobra and not suffering for the deed? A dog of mine, a cross between a pug and a terrier, killed a cobra measuring exactly five feet long. Hearing the dog bark, I rushed up and saw it in a thick jungle, with a cobra on end, looking at it. The cobra struck several times at it, but the dog rushed in, and seizing the cobra just behind the hood brought it out of the jungle nearly dead. I finished it off with a stick. Were it not that four of my chuprassies witnessed the above, I should have some compunction about telling the tale."

REGULATION MESSAGES.—His Excellency the Commander-in-Chief of Madras, Sir Neville Chamberlain, in addition to his onerous and responsible duties, is often called upon to assist in and perform duties which, to say the least, are quite incompatible with his office as Chief of the Madras Army. The most recent instance which we have heard is that of a pensioned sipahis of one of her Majesty's infantry regiments, who, in a lengthened petition deploring his "unsuccessful attempts" to form a matrimonial alliance with any of the fair daughters of Ind, "respectfully solicits his Excellency will be pleased to recommend him a wife, for which act of mercy he shall in duty bound ever pray." His Excellency, however, "declined to comply with the petitioner's request."

THE TRADE OF MADRAS.—In the month of April the total value of goods imported into Madras by sea was Rs. 44,28,449, including specie valued at Rs. 2,44,160. Thus the quantity of cotton twist, grey, imported into Madras was 568,765 lbs., valued at Rs. 3,39,479; dyed twist 264,740 lbs., valued at Rs. 3,11,170; gold thread, 42,176 ozs., valued at Rs. 11,98,875; grain, valued at Rs. 16,99,678 for 304,176 cwt.; haberdashery, Rs. 31,408 for 102 cases; metals, Rs. 85,526 for 279 tons; piece goods, cotton and linen, 167,048 pieces, valued at Rs. 7,51,557; raw silk, Rs. 1,05,000 for 19,150 lbs.; timber, Rs. 30,630 for 115 tons; malt liquors, Rs. 23,444 for 14,059 gallons; spirits, Rs. 1,33,801 for 10,281 gallons. The total value of goods imported in April, 1877, was Rs. 54,45,647. The value of exports in the month was only Rs. 16,10,294, against Rs. 29,08,141 in the corresponding month last year. In the month the value of coffee shipped was Rs. 2,01,170 for 6,706 cwt.; cotton, Rs. 55,740 for 2,488 cwt.; hides and skins, 25,273 corges, valued at Rs. 5,69,864; horns, Rs. 7,799 for 53 cwt.; indigo, Rs. 4,56,050 for 1,922 cwt.; piece goods, cotton, Rs. 83,519 and Rs. 11,550 for woollens. There were no bees' wax, saltpetre, spices, sugar, or jaggery, exported. The shipments of coffee were much larger last month than they were in April, 1877.—Madras Standard.

DETENTION OF A TROOP SPECIAL.—A Committee of Inquiry, consisting of the Quartermaster-General, the Officer Commanding H.M.'s 43rd Regiment of Foot, now garrisoning Fort Saint George, Mr. H. E. Church, Traffic Manager, Madras Railway, and Mr. S. Baily, Assistant Traffic Manager, assembled at Fort Saint George on April 29 to inquire into the cause of the detention, by some hours, to the Troop Special conveying H. M.'s 43rd Regiment from Bellary to Madras on March 23. It would appear the Committee find the railway authorities to blame, and consequently the station-master at Bellary has been reduced. The station-master's fault, a correspondent informs us, consisted in having allowed two waggons to have been overloaded with the regimental kit. The carriage examiner, Bellary station, objected to the overloading of the waggons in question, but, notwithstanding his repeated remonstrances, the station-master permitted the waggons to run. The waggons consequently ran hot between the Veerapore and Gundacul stations, and as it was found unsafe to run these waggons on with the train, others had to be sent for from the nearest station. The waggons having sustained serious injury, it was considered unsafe to run them back; they were consequently thrown off the line. The guard, too, in charge of the Troop Special, remonstrated with the station-master in regard to his overloading the two waggons without avail, and refused to start the train till such time as the station-master took upon himself the risk and responsibility.

STATION TALK.

BAGHDAD, April 22.—I left Karbala at half-past three in the afternoon, riding a splendid Arab mare which the Mujtahid Abdul Kasim kindly sent for me. The rest of the party rode on the donkeys of the country. To the edge of the marsh, where we were to take a boat, there is a hard road, the only one I have seen hitherto in this country. An hour's ride brought us to the margin of what is at present a vast lake, extending in every direction as far as the eye can reach. A few months hence, when the waters of the Euphrates, which have overflowed the country, shall be evaporated, there will be a marsh-breeding fever, where there is now a fresh-water sea, which we shall take hours in traversing. Abdul Karim kindly undertook to accompany me during the remainder of my pilgrimage, and he negotiated the hiring of a pretty large vessel from the Arabs. She was at least thirty-five feet long and six feet in the beams; she had a mast of portentous length and a proportionate square sail. Compared to the usual Arab skiffs, about four feet six long, made of reeds and covered with bitumen, our vessel was a leviathan of the deep, and carried the whole party, soldiers and all, without crowding. The surface of the water for many a mile was covered with little white flowerets resembling daisies, which had their roots three or four feet down in the muddy bottom. Grass and reeds also showed above the surface, and in some places retarded the progress of the boat. A couple of Arabs shoved the boat along with stout bamboos, on the tops of which were balls of bitumen that served to rest the chest upon when pushing. The wind was from the south, so the sail was useless, as we were going nearly due south. Little islands rose amidst the waste of shallow water, and on each of them was perched a little encampment of Arabs. When the waters recede the islanders feed their cattle on the coarse herbage of the marsh. If the Euphrates send sufficient water to inundate the islands, the little skiffs save the population from drowning. A great deal of fish is caught by the Arabs in these waters. We bought some of large size for a few piastres. During the night the south wind became so strong that the boat had to stop for a couple of hours. At sunrise we were still some miles from the Hindrah Canal. Birs Nimrud, the supposed tower of Babel, was conspicuous above the level of the horizon to the east, though at a great distance. At eight o'clock we entered the Hindrah Canal, a broad and rapid stream which carries off nearly half the waters of the Euphrates, and either pours them over the face of the country, forming great marshes, or leads them into the Sea of Najaf. It is popularly supposed that the Hindrah Canal was made half a century ago by Afzul Khan, and some other wealthy natives of Lucknow. The name "Hindrah," I was told, when passing into the stream, commemorated the fact that Afzul Khan was a native of India. But the late Mr. George Smith found a cuneiform inscription which showed that this stream existed thousands of years ago, and that on its banks dwelt a tribe of Arabs called the "Hinduwan," whence its name. The Hinduwans paid tribute to the King of Assyria. It is very doubtful whether the "canal" is a canal at all. It seems to be a river. Afzul Khan and other Hindis endeavoured to divert its waters from Kufa, whence it makes a detour, to enter the Sea of Najaf on the eastward, thirty miles to the south, to the city of Najaf, situated on the north shore of the sea and some four miles from Kufa. Great cuttings were made through the limestone rock which forms the northern cliffs of the Sea of Najaf, but the attempt to divert the waters of the Hindrah Canal to the town of Najaf failed, although large sums of money were expendent upon it. The stream is very swift, flowing south-west, and is about eight or nine feet deep when the Euphrates is full. It is thought that the Euphrates shows a tendency to forsake its old bed from Musaiyib onward to Hillah (Babylon), and to come in full violence through the Hindrah Canal and through the Sea of Najaf to the southern outlet—also called the Hindrah—either regaining its old bed some sixty miles south of the sea, or else cutting a new channel for itself to the Persian Gulf, westward of the Shat-el-Arab. The Euphrates is no longer content with its banks; it quits them or breaks them down now almost every season. Even now its waters are finding their way into the Tigris close to Bagdad. Yet last year a large sum was spent—or was said to be spent—upon repairing a breach in the banks, through which it is now deluging the country. . . . The south wind continuing, the boat was towed along by an Arab, who walked or ran along the brink over the grass, on which flocks and herds grazed. At ten o'clock we passed Kifl, where the prophet Ezekiel lies buried. His tomb is visited by thousands of Jews, and Mohammedans as well. In some years 20,000 pilgrims encamp on the plain around the little town, where the synagogue with its blue dome rises a conspicuous object for many a league around. At half-past four o'clock we reached Kufa, the site of a city once the greatest in the land, but now little more than a village in the midst of ruins. We proceeded without a moment's delay to secure donkeys to take us to Najaf, lying an hour's journey to the westward. A quarter of an hour from Kufa we came upon the high embankments of a great canal, now dry. Crossing this we had a view of Najaf, some three miles off, built on a rising ground, and the gilded dome of Meshed Ali flashing back the rays of the declining sun. Small houses of refuge with low narrow doors that would allow a pilgrim and his ass to enter, and would keep out any mounted Arab that wished to spear him, are dotted over the plain. Wells have also been dug for the refreshment of the weary. It is the tradition that the Caliph Ali, the cousin and son-in-law of the Prophet, when dying, directed that his body should be placed on a camel, and that wherever the animal rested his remains should be interred. The camel went on to the site of Najaf, near the northern shore of the sea, and there lay down. Meshed Ali has been for twelve centuries one of the greatest shrines of the Muslims, and it is visited yearly by the devout in scores of thousands.

When we arrived at the town I found that it was surrounded by a deep and broad ditch, and a lofty wall with bastions, in very good condition, the brickwork for the most part looking as if very recently constructed. Upon entering the great gateway we found ourselves in a spacious market-place which seemed clean and well swept. The streets and bazars were not quite so narrow or so cracked as those of Karbala and the other towns I have recently seen, and they are infinitely cleaner and more wholesome. The place has about 12,000 inhabitants and has a thriving well-to-do air. I sent the kawas to the Mujtahed, Syud Bahru-l-Ulum ("the Sea of Learning") the chief of the Shi'ah community, with letters which Colonel Nixon and others had kindly given me for him. A message came back that we were to go to his house, and that as soon as he returned from prayers at the mosque he would see us there. We proceeded to his house, where tea was served in the Persian style in pretty little glass vases. I then made a rapid perambulation of the town. The gates were all shut, so I could not go outside to get a look at the Sea of Najaf from the shore. But I got on the walls, and from one of the highest bastions had a splendid view of this secluded miniature sea. Its waters are saltish, though the waters of the Euphrates flow freely into it. Cliffs a couple of hundred feet high surround it apparently on all sides, for the shore line is visible to a great distance far away to the south. It is about sixty miles long from north to south, and on an average more than twenty miles in breadth. About twenty-five miles from Najaf it narrows considerably, but soon spreads out again as broad as before. It is into the southern basin that the Hindrah Canal flows. The efforts of Afzul Khan were directed to the diversion of the canal so as to make it fall into the northern basin of the sea at Najaf. The Hindrah flows out of the sea at its southern extremity. Najaf is built on an elevated ridge of limestone about 150 feet above the level of the sea. The southern breeze comes to it from the Najd and over the sea, and is, at all events in the month of April, delightfully cool and exhilarating. The air here is quite different from that of Karbala and the great tracts of land on both sides of the Euphrates. The people of the place to whom I spoke themselves mentioned this fact.

Miscellaneous.

MORE GRATIFICATIONS.—The Sheristadar of Gondul has been convicted of taking illegal gratifications, and has been sentenced to fifteen months' imprisonment and a fine of Rs. 1,000.

SLOW MAILS.—A correspondent of the Times of India writes—"The mail arrangements to Ceylon are as bad as ever. I have just posted a letter to Ceylon, and am told it will be kept here till Monday week!"

EXPENSIVE ECONOMY.—Indian municipalities will soon become proverbial for their reckless extravagance. The town of Karachi is lighted with kerosene oil, so the municipal authorities, in order to do a good stroke of business, ordered 2,500 casks of oil direct from America. With freight and other charges the cost is nearly Rs. 18 per cask, when the same oil can be purchased in Karachi or Bombay at from 8 to 9 rupees a cask.—Englishman.

COTTON IN BOMBAY.—With regard to the cotton manufacturing industry in the Bombay Presidency, the average number of hands employed daily in the Bombay Mills is now 24,610, and in the Mofussil 5,500. The largest establishment in Bombay is the New Dhurumsey Poonjabhoy Spinning and Weaving Company, which employs daily 3,215 hands, consumes 11,606 candies of cotton every day, and has engines of 505-horse power. The second is the Manockji Petit Manufacturing Company, with 2,000 hands, consuming 8,200 candies, and engines of 260-horse power. There is no cotton mill in Bombay employing less than 400 hands, or consuming less than 1,500 candies, or having a smaller horse-power than 60.

BOMBAY GUNS.—On the evening of the 3rd June (Monday) an attempt was made to move the two 18-ton guns from the top of the Appollo Bunder to Malabar Point. Shortly after passing the Church Gate Station the wheels of the carriages sank into a soft part of the road, and, in spite of all the efforts of the traction engine that was drawing them, there they remained. On Tuesday evening at seven o'clock two traction engines were attached to one of the guns, and by means of their united exertions it was dragged out of its hole and taken on its journey. On the following Wednesday evening, by the aid of a traction engine, bullocks, and a detachment of soldiers, an 18-ton gun was taken from the Queen's road to Malabar point.

KALAT NEWS.—Major Sandeman, agent in Baluchistan to the Governor-General, arrived at Kwetta some little time ago. We (Beacon) mentioned lately that Major Sandeman was in close conference at Simla with the Lieutenant-Governor of the Punjab, the subject matter of deliberation being, we believe, the absorption of Sind into the country of the Five Rivers. The result of the conference has yet to transpire. Major Sandeman visited Kalat on his way to Kwetta, and had an interview, of course, with the Khan, who sent a Sardar of note and some followers a distance from Kalat to meet Major Sandeman, and escort him to the residence of the Khan. Kalat and the whole of Baluchistan are described to be in a state of tranquillity; the Sardars are on good terms with the Khan; and the people have settled down quietly to the peaceful pursuits of husbandry.

H. H. AGHA ALI SHAH.—The following characteristic paragraph appears in one of the Puna papers:—"Agha Ali Shah, eldest son of H. H. Aga Khan, is a courageous sportsman, whose exploits deserve the eulogium of the public generally, and the commendation of shikaris in particular. On the 25th ult. this sporting character bagged a tiger on the Kurkulla ghaut, which measured ten feet in length, followed up by a similar achievement of pluck on the 27th, when he bagged two brutes of the same species on the Toran ghat—a male and female—measuring respectively eleven and nine feet in length. His sporting proclivities not feeling satiated, he was venturesome enough to place himself again on the field of bravado on the 9th current, when his endeavours to don the plumes of a "shikari bold" were crowned with success on the Karl ghat, where he was fortunate enough to bag another ferocious-looking beast, measuring thirteen feet in length, who to all intents and purposes was lying in a disabled state, till one of the followers or beaters, in his eagerness to ascertain whether or not life was quite extinct, approached him rather too closely and got his leg fearfully lacerated from the claws of the beast, who certainly intended to make use of them whilst a spark of life lasted; but another bullet put the hook and eye on him, and sent him to the regions below."

DEATH-RATE IN THE SOUTHERN DEKHAN.—In the statements contained in the Englishman the other day regarding destitution in the Southern Dekhan there was one question which it was not thought needful to raise. Optimists assert that the greater part of the heavy death-rate in the year ending July, 1877, in those districts, and the deserted habitations may be due to emigration. That possibility had been considered, but the supposition was put aside as untenable. In the first place, if the missing villagers had been alive and tolerably well (and this is the theory) at the time when the kharif crops were harvested in Sholapur and Kaladghii, they would have come back to their native villages, either to claim some share in the harvest, such as it was, or to get employed by their well-to-do friends as labourers. But none of them came, and the ruined huts remained tenantless. Further and more conclusive evidence derived from instances of former emigrations is afforded by the fact that none of the missing third of the population have returned to report where the rest have taken refuge. In all former emigrations there have always been some who returned. Not so on the present occasion. There is, besides, the general consideration, that the Dekhan raiyat hates the very notion of going out of his district; he regards emigration much in the same opprobrious manner as English decent working-people regard the alternative of "going on tramp." There is no escaping from the painful conclusion regarding these villages of the Bombay Dekhan, that in the twelve months ending July 1877 more than one-third of the population died off. Then those ugly figures of sixteen deaths to one birth in the same villages since that period proclaim the hideous destitution of the people.

STATION TALK.

TRINCOMALEE, May 20.—H.M.'s armour-plated frigate Shannon, which is on her way to join the China Squadron, arrived here from Aden yesterday morning. She began to coal immediately on her arrival, and will proceed on her voyage as soon as all the coal is on board, which will most probably be on the 22nd or 23rd instant.
The Shannon is one of our newest ironclads. She belonged to the Channel Squadron. While at Malta she received orders to proceed to China without delay. Her tonnage is more than 5,500, and her armament consists of two eighteen-ton and six twelve ton guns, besides some small ones. She is plated with ten-inch armour, and is, I believe, fitted with electric lights and the Whitehead torpedo apparatus. At present we have quite a young fleet here. It consists of H.M. ships Shannon, Daphne, and Lynce. The two latter are awaiting orders from the Admiral. Since writing my last letter to you I have found out that there were seventeen, and not fourteen lives lost in the native schooner which went down off Pigeon Island. None of the bodies have been recovered yet.

KANDY, May 24.—That respectable personage, the oldest inhabitant, declares he never remembered Kandy to have been crowded as it is at the present moment. Both morning and evening trains up from Colombo and in from Gampola yesterday were crowded with first-class passengers, official and unofficial. Where everyone found shelter for the night passes my understanding; but I believe a number of Burgher residents gave up their houses "for a consideration" sufficient to induce them to turn out. The Club and the Hotel were literally crammed, and I am told were obliged to send away many applicants for admission. Yesterday, the event was the Fancy Bazaar in aid of the improvements of St. Paul's.
It was held in the new District Court House, which was decorated for the occasion. Soon after the opening it was filled with visitors, who, to judge from the reported result, must have been liberal purchasers at the various stalls, at one of which as much as £38 was taken, and I believe the produce of the day's sales was close upon £200. It may be safely concluded, therefore, that all the requirements of the Church Committee will be fully met. We are fortunately having Queen's weather, which is much needed for the out-of-door ceremony this afternoon, of the inauguration of the Prince of Wales's Fountain, on which occasion the services of the Police Band will be put in requisition. It is said there will be 650 guests at the Birthday Ball to-night. How they are all to find standing room within the Pavilion is more than I can guess.—

Miscellaneous.

INDIAN COOLIES.—Rangoon, it seems, is one of the Eldorados of the Indian cooly. Something like 5,000 coolies return to the east yearly. Each man takes with him on an average Rs. 100; that is, a total sum of not less than Rs. 500,000 is taken from British Burma by these coolies to India annually.

WARNING TO INTENDING EMIGRANTS.—Some time ago we warned our home readers, especially those north of the Tweed, against encouraging young men to seek Ceylon as a field for their latent energies. For a long time the local supply of such has been far in excess of requirements, but despite our warnings the outward flow of unemployed youths has continued, until at length the number of young men seeking vainly for employment has assumed serious proportions. We are assured that one large employer has on his books applications from not fewer than two hundred young men, most of whom are entirely without means.
We lately heard of a very discreditable case in which a planter returning to Ceylon from leave had persuaded a young man at home to pay him, the planter, fifty pounds for the promise of a berth on arrival of £100 a year. The lad scraped the money for the fee and his passage out, only to find on arrival that the promise could not be fulfilled. Banff papers please copy!—

NEWS has reached India of the death of Captain Richard Lock-

CANARESE SCIENTIFIC DICTIONARY.—The librarian of the India Office has recently forwarded, to the Under-Secretary of State for India, a paper of remarks by Mr. Kittel, and a letter from Sir Walter Elliott, referring to a proposal to assist by a subvention of £1,000, to be spread over seven years, the publication of a scientific dictionary of the Canarese language, to be brought out by Mr.
Kittel, with the assistance of the Bible Missionary Society. Before forming any opinion as to the extent to which such a work is deserving of Government support, the Secretary of State refers to the Bombay and Madras Governments to know how far the need of it is felt for administrative purposes in the districts of the Madras Presidency, in which the Canarese language is spoken.—Indian Daily News.

THE COMMISSARIAT OF THE JOWAKI EXPEDITION.

Certain reflections having been made on the commissariat arrangements during the late Jowaki Expedition by the correspondence of some of our contemporaries, the Commander-in-Chief has published the following memorandum, not only vindicating the department, but expressing his own and Brig. Ross's satisfaction with the arrangements:—From the Quartermaster-General to the Secretary to the Govt. of India, Military Dept., April 23.

I am directed by H.E. the C. in C. to acknowledge receipt of your memorandum No. 1,299—Operations—Feb. 27, forwarding correspondence for the Commissariat General, regarding certain anonymous strictures on the Commissariat arrangements with the Peshawur Field Force, which have appeared in the public newspapers.

2. The C. in C. is glad to have this opportunity of recording, for the information of the Govt. of India, his complete satisfaction with the arrangements for the supply and transport of the troops in field, which have been made by the Commissariat Dept. throughout the late operations on the Peshawar Frontier.

3. H.E. is aware that the important services which were performed by the Department on this occasion were rendered under circumstances of unusual difficulty, owing to the destruction of the bridge at Attock, the bad weather, the nature of the country, and unavoidably short notice which could be given of the movements of the troops.

The Govt. of India have already been informed by the enclosure of this office of Feb. 11, that Brig. gen. Ross, who commanded the troops on the field, was perfectly satisfied with the manner in which the Commissariat officers attached to the force performed their duties.

BY THE RIGHT HON. THE COMMANDER-IN-CHIEF IN INDIA. (Adjutant Gen.'s Office, Head Quarters, Simla, May 30.)

BUCHANAN, Col. H. J., 9th foot, having been placed on half-pay on completion of his five years' tenure of com., was permitted to proceed to England in the troopship of March 28.

RAILWAY SCHOOL.—The Masauri Correspondent of the Pioneer had heard nothing more about the projected East Indian Railway School at Oak-grove; but he had been fortunate enough to obtain some particulars about the Sind, Punjab and Delhi Railway School. The Fairlawn estate was purchased in July, 1877, by the Company, and the School was opened in August, so it had not completed a full year. It is affiliated to the Lahore Railway School, being an offshoot of that institution. It is exclusively intended for the children of the Sind, Punjab and Delhi Railway Company's employes, European and Eurasian; the average number of boarders hitherto has been about twenty-eight. It is in contemplation to enlarge the present building as soon as possible, and to erect a separate school for girls, so that one hundred pupils may be accommodated. So far the school has been a decided success, and is of course highly appreciated by the railway employes, who are enabled by its means to give their children a sound rudimentary education, in a good climate, at most moderate charges—the board and tuition fees ranging from Rs. 9 to Rs. 15 per mensem only. How they manage to work it successfully at these rates is incomprehensible; particularly as the Lieutenant-Governor has, at the last moment, cancelled the grant-in-aid of Rs. 200 per mensem, which was strongly recommended by Major Holroyd, Director of Public Instruction for the Punjab. The grounds of the refusal were understood to be that the school is situated in the North-West Provinces, and not in the Punjab. It is, however, essentially a Punjab school, although it may have the misfortune to be located in Masauri, the despised but nevertheless healthiest hill station yet discovered. The example of the Punjab and Delhi Railway is about to be followed not only by the East Indian Railway, but also by sundry other of the State Railway lines, who purpose establishing similar schools for the children of their employes. All honour to the Company who set such a good example.

SEVERE STORMS AT AJMERE.—The recent storms in the Ajmere district have tested for the first time the strength and efficiency of the newly-opened permanent way between Ajmere and Beawur. No portion of the 32 miles has been injured, except the temporary diversion at Mangliawas, 15 miles from Ajmere—a diversion from the very nature of its position especially exposed to damage by storm and rain; and heavy rain on the night of the 19th instant damaged it. Measures were soon taken to fill in the earth cut away and things were so quickly mended that the up-train on the morning of the 20th was detained only an hour at Mangliawas. A second storm, on the night of the 21st, again damaged the diversion. Again active measures were taken to repair the breach, and communication was soon restored, though on this occasion the unmixd train was detained three hours and a quarter. It speaks well for the construction of the permanent-way that no other portion should have suffered damage.—Friend of India.

To be Lieut. Col.—Major R. T. Clarke.

To be Capt.—Lieut. R. S. Simpson.

BOMBAY MEDICAL ESTABLISHMENT.

To be Surgs. Major.—Surgs. W. Gray, D. E. Hughes, m.d., T. Holmsted, T. Cody and J. Raby.

Resignation of the Service.—Surg. A. J. Leggatt, from March 21, 1878.

The dates of promotion of the undermentioned officers should be as follows, and not as given in the London Gazette named:—

London Gazette of Aug. 31, 1877.—Lieut. col. J. S. D. Bolton, Bombay staff corps, of June 14, 1877. London Gazette of Oct. 26, 1877.—Brevet Capt. H. A. Graves, Bengal staff corps, of July 16, 1875.

The names of the undermentioned officers should be as follows, and not as given in the Gazettes named:—

London Gazette, of 29th June, 1877.—Major F. W. Grant, Bengal staff corps; Major H. F. H. Sewell, Madras staff corps; London Gazette, of 9th October, 1877.—Capt. J. A. Miley, Bengal staff corps; Lieut. Col. E. M. Noire, Madras staff corps; London Gazette of 26th October, 1877.—Major T. B. M. Glascock, Bengal staff corps; London Gazette of 19th March, 1878.—Brevet Major H. G. Pritchard, Madras staff corps.

Her Majesty has been pleased to approve of the following admissions to her Majesty's Indian staff corps made by the Governments in India:—

BENGAL STAFF CORPS.

BOMBAY STAFF CORPS.

To be Lieut.—Lieut. H. E. W. Beville, 83rd foot.

The date of rank of the undermentioned officers admitted to the Bengal staff corps should be as follows, and not as stated in the London Gazette of the 19th of March, 1878:—

Lieut. J. L. O'Brien, 1st batt., 11th foot, dated the 28th of February 1874; Lieut. H. L. Ramsay, 1st batt., 6th foot, dated the 28th of February, 1874.

BIRTHS.

BARNETT—At Bangalore, May 26, wife of Major J. H. M. Barnett, M.S.C., daughter.

BOWIE—At Madras, May 27, wife of Walter Bowie, daughter.

BURBIDGE—At Cawnpore, June 2, wife of J. G. Burbidge, station master, East Indian Railway, daughter.

CLINE—At Lucknow, May 30, wife of C. E. Cline, Oude and Rohilkund Railway, daughter.

CROSTHWAITE—At Allahabad, June 3, wife of R. J. Crosthwaite, C.S., son.

 FRECK—At Calcutta, May 27, wife of D. Freck, daughter.
 GOFF—At Umballa City, June 2, wife of J. B. Goff, station master Sind, Punjab and Delhi Railway, son.
 GORDON—At Naini Tal, May 31, wife of Brevet major A. H. A. Gordon, 65th regt., station staff officer at Naini Tal, son.
 GOULD—At Entally, May 29, wife of T. H. Gould, son.
 JOSEPH—At Aimer, Rajputana, May 29, wife of Capt. F. W. Joseph, Bombay staff corps, daughter.
 McWILLIAM—At Cachar, June 12, wife of O. G. R. McWilliam, B.C.S., daughter.
 McRAE—At Hyderabad, May 22, wife of Major J. G. McRae, Acting conservator of forests in Sind, daughter.
 NIGEL-JONES—At Murree, May 26, wife of W. C. Nigel-Jones, Government Telegraph Department, daughter.
 PARK—At Perambore, May 28, wife of D. Park, Dep. Locomotive Supt., Madras Railway, daughter.
 PAUL—At Coconada, May 22, wife of Andrew Paul, Sub-Medical Department, son.
 PAYNE—At Bournemouth, May 12, wife of Henry Wood Payne, son.
 RADCLIFFE—At Neemuch, May 23, wife of Lieut. G. B. E. Radcliffe, Bombay Staff Corps, daughter.
 REED—At Meenar Meer, May 28, wife of Surgeon-Major Keppel Reed, F.R.C.S.I. 26th Punjab N. I., twin sons.
 SMITH—At Kalabagh, near Murree, May 16, wife of H. W. Smith, R.E., son.
 TEMPLE—At Asseergurh, May 25, wife of Capt. J. A. Temple, B.S.C., son.

 WYLLIE—At Lucknow, May 23, wife of Major R. J. H. Wyllie, son.
 ZORAB—At Balasore, May 28, wife of Dr. J. M. Zorab, son.

MARRIAGES.

DELINS—WILSON.—At Calcutta, May 7, Edward Delins, to Renée Isabella, daughter of John F. Wilson, late 13th M.N.I.
 DOWNING—KENNARD.—At Bulandshahr, N. W. P. India, May 20, S. F. Downing, Bombay Educational Service, to Mary Kennard.
 DOWNS—PRIDUNE.—At Calcutta, May 25, A. M. Downs, Manager Bowreah Cotton Mills, to Maria Virginia Pridune, Dorset-street, Portman-square, London.
 GRANT—BIRD.—At Madras, June 1, Douglas Grant, solicitor, Madras, to Kate Emma, third daughter of W. C. Bird, of Woodburn, Ootacamund.
 MERCER—EVERZARD.—At Bombay, May 25, J. W. S. Mercer, Lieut., B.S.C., to Rosalie Gaze, daughter of Col. Everzard, B.S.C.
 WELSH—JAMES.—At Bombay, June 5, Surg. major J. T. Welsh, M.D., to Harriet Thaden, daughter of G. C. Myers, Montrose, and widow of the late Surg. major R. W. James, M.D., Bombay Army.

DEATHS.

ABERCROMBIE—At Dalhousie, May 20, Capt. John Abercrombie, B.S.C., son of the late Col. John Abercrombie, B.H.A., aged 32.
 BROCK—At Oudh, May 25, Osmond de Beauvoir, infant son of William and Francesca Brock.
 BUTCHER—At Sooramungalum, May 30, Elizabeth, wife of J. Butcher, asst. traffic manager, Madras Railway, aged 40.
 CARBERY—At sea, May 5, on board the steamer Strathleven, Hugh, son of W. E. Carbery, aged 8.
 CONSTANT—At Jhelum, May 25, William Ronald Henry, infant son of Surg. major Constant, 12th B.C.
 COOMBS—At Madras, May 23, William Ruhde Muhlendorf Coombs, son of the late Rev. V. D. Coombs, S. P. G., aged 33.
 D'NETTO—At Madras, May 28, Ann V., daughter of the late F. M. D'Netto, senior, aged 22.
 FAIRLAND—At Lucknow, May 21, Mabel A., child of Dr. Fairland, staff surg., aged six years.
 GIBBONS—At sea, May 25, on board the steamer Dorunda, Diana M., wife of W. Gibbons, of Calcutta.
 GODFREY—At Perambore, June 15, Lieut. Col. C. J. Godfrey, M.S.C., offic. 2nd in com., 10th M.N.I.
 HEAFORD—At Allahabad, May 8, Thomas Edward Heaford, exec. engr., P.W.D., aged 42.
 HILLCOAT—June 1, Charles R. B. Hillcoat, son of Charles H. Hillcoat, aged four years.
 KONZ—At Baroda, May 30, A. Konz, joiner, aged 34.
 LYNCH—At Madras, May 27, H. E. Bertram, child of T. C. and J. A. Lynch, aged one year.

EAST INDIA PUBLIC WORKS COMMITTEE.

This Committee resumed its meetings on June 20, Lord George Hamilton in the chair. General Sir Arthur Cotton, K.C.S.I., was the witness examined, Sir Arthur said his experience of service in India dated from 1819, when he served as an officer of Royal Engineers in the first Burmese war. He was appointed in 1850 to inquire into the Tank System of the Madras Presidency, and he had previously (1849) planned the Godavery works—a mode of irrigation by canals laid down from the Godavery river. He published a work on the Public Works of India in 1853. The Godavery works were constructed with the sanction and at the cost of the Government of India. It appeared from papers Sir Arthur proceeded to read, from that the objects which the Godavery works were designed to carry out—viz., the irrigation of the Madras delta (where the land stood much in need of improved irrigation)—had met with the completest success. The Government accounts of the Godavery works in the year 1865-66 state as follows:—"Total outlay, £470,000; net return in water rates, &c., after deducting repairs, establishment &c., £138,000, or 28½ per cent." The "Moral and Material Progress of India Report for 1875-76," issued July, 1877, states, p. 234, "Capital outlay on Godavery works, £740,000; on the Kistna works, £463,000. The net revenue from the capital outlay on the Godavery, Kistna, and Cauvery Delta works for a series of years was estimated at 21, 15, and 86 per cent. respectively." A late Governor of Madras, Sir Charles Trevelyan, had said:—"If all India were dealt with on the irrigation and internal navigating systems, as had been done on the Godavery and Kistna rivers famines would be impossible." Encouraged by the results of these works, the engineer (Sir Arthur Cotton) in after years proposed various schemes and projects for their extension; but he complained that successive Governments had given but partial encouragement to his earlier projects, and none at all to his later schemes. Yet he believed that the railway system which the Government of India had always fostered and encouraged was not so productive of benefit to the people of India as the river and canal irrigation systems might have been, had the latter at first been adopted for the purposes of communication, transport, and traffic; while in the cultivation of the land (the primary object of irrigation works), railways, of course, could take no part. The cost of the railways of India, again, had been enormous, and 30 per cent. larger than that of the irrigation works, while many of the railways were to this day unprofitable, the only really solvent one amongst the whole being the East Indian Railway.

Sir Arthur Cotton criticised the statements of witnesses who had been before the Committee and given evidence in favour of the railways, and opposed to his (Sir Arthur's) project for extending the irrigation system in the Madras Presidency and elsewhere. He asserted that for the non-success of some of the larger irrigation works in India the different Governments must themselves be accounted answerable. When they had begun new public works, and carried them on to a certain point, they had stopped them; they had then recommenced the works, and stopped them again and again. It appeared as if the Governments were actually jealous of the irrigation system as being in rivalry with the railways, for which the Government had always shown a most ill-placed affection.

Sir Arthur Cotton having finished the reading of his statement, The Chairman commenced his examination in chief of the witness. Many of the questions were put to ascertain whether Sir A. Cotton's projects for the extension of his own irrigation works in India were feasible, and based on actual and practical engineering knowledge of the country. After a few replies, the Committee determined on examining Sir A. Cotton further on June 27, and then adjourned.

The Committee met on Thursday (June 27), to continue the examination of Sir Arthur Cotton; Lord G. Hamilton in the chair.

Sir George Campbell examined the witness on his plans, projects, and estimates for providing India with a widely extended system of irrigation and navigation by means of transit canals.

Sir A. Cotton stated that he was the projector of several schemes for an extension of his own Godavery Navigation Canal Works constructed forty years ago. His canal system for irrigation and navigation jointly had been successfully carried out by Government on the Godavery river in the Madras Presidency. In his proposals for new works of the kind he had in view, an improved system of navigation such as this would develop the internal traffic of the country. One of his projects for the creating a carrying trade by means of canals was the introduction of steam-boats wherever the canals in future to be constructed would allow; and his plans for the canals comprehended steam navigation. He maintained that water carriage for the purposes of the internal transport and traffic of India was preferable to railways, which latter did not permeate the country in the way his canals would do if completed on the plans he had submitted. Sir G. Campbell had questioned the utility of setting canals in rivalry with railways in India, and asserted that neither in India nor in Europe had canals answered for the purposes of traffic since railways had become the means of developing transport and traffic, but he (witness) nevertheless averred that a boldly extensive system of navigation canals for India would compete very successfully with the railways for the traffic of the country. Sir A. Cotton proceeded to recount his steam navigation canal projects. He had proposed to Government a line of canal from Madras to Cape Comorin. A scheme for a canal between Cuttack and Calcutta; a canal from Calcutta to Poonundhur, in the Bombay Presidency, and a canal from Calcutta to Rajmahal. His other projects were for new tanks or reservoirs on a large scale, in rivalry or suppression of the ancient reservoirs of the Madras Presidency, which had always proved an admirable system of storing water.

Mr. Childers next examined the witness.

In reply to a series of questions from Mr. Childers, who severely criticised Sir Arthur Cotton's projects, the witness said that the broad principle of his plans and estimates for all purposes of navigation and irrigation was this. He believed that at least one-fifth of India could be irrigated where irrigation was most wanted, and the traffic developed throughout the most populous portions of the country by means of canals, aqueducts, and reservoirs, at a cost to the State of about £60,000,000. He would undertake to carry out this great scheme if the Government would go to this expenditure, viz., £10,000,000 annually for six years.

Sir William Muir, late Lieutenant-Governor of the North-west Provinces of India, was the next witness examined. His evidence dealt with the revenue derived from irrigation in the above provinces, and was proceeding when the committee adjourned.

Miscellaneous.

EAST INDIAN RAILWAY COMPANY.—The directors of the East Indian Railway Company recommend the payment of a dividend of 19s. per cent. on the consolidated stock of the company, in addition to the guaranteed interest.

A NEW COMPANY.—The prospectus of the Indian Co-operative Agency (Limited) has been issued, the capital proposed being £20,000, in 20,000 shares. The object of the association is stated to be the extension of the co-operative principle to the military officers and civilians connected with India.

EXPORT OF SPECIE.—The Peninsular and Oriental steamer Nepaul has left with £223,943, £4,500 being in silver coin for Malta, £250 in gold coin for Madras, and £88,200 in bar silver for Calcutta. There is also £32,500 in bar silver for Shanghai, while the balance is made up of Mexican dollars, £33,600 being for Singapore, £22,083 for Hong Kong, and £42,810 for Shanghai.

SOUTH INDIAN RAILWAY.—At the half-yearly meeting of this Company, held at the offices on June 26, Mr. John Chapman, chairman of the company, presiding, the report was unanimously adopted, the retiring directors and auditor were re-elected, and a vote of thanks to the chairman, directors, and general manager closed the meeting.

BILLS ON INDIA.—Tenders were received at the Bank of England on Wednesday for £400,000 in bills on India. The amounts allotted were—to Calcutta, £351,900; and to Bombay, £20,000. Tenders on both Presidencies at 1s. 8 3/4-16d. will receive in full; no allotment will be made below this price. These terms are for Calcutta 1d., and for Bombay 3-16d., under last week's figures, and the reduced allotments show that even at these rates the amounts offered are above the wants of the market.

THE HERO OF THE OVERLAND ROUTE.—The memorial at Suez to the memory of Lieut. Waghorn, R.N., the hero of the Overland Route, is handsome, but is not national. It is owing to the action of the Suez Canal Company and its magnanimous President, M. de Lesseps, that it stands where it does. A correspondent urges that there ought to be a similar monument at Alexandria. Why should it be left to Frenchmen to raise a testimonial to Thomas Waghorn, and his own countrymen forget him? We believe a subscription list has been started, but has not yet reached an adequate amount. Who connected with India is not yet indebted to the originator of the Overland Route?—Homeward Mail.

EASTERN TRAVEL.—We understand that Commander V. L. Cameron, R.N., C.B., of African fame, is contemplating an Eastern expedition. Should he carry out his present plan, he will probably make his start from Iskenderun, at the north-east corner of the Mediterranean, and cross Northern Syria to Kurdistan, whence he will make his way through Mesopotamia, Persia, and Beloochistan to Kurrahee, but we believe his line of route is not yet definitely fixed.—Academy.

SINDE, PUNJAB, AND DELHI RAILWAY.—The Twenty-third Annual General Meeting of this Company was held on June 26, at the offices, Gresham House; Mr. W. P. Andrew in the chair. The Report showed that the gross revenue of the half-year to Dec. 31, 1877, amounted to £450,801, the net receipts to £195,230, and the working expenses to a percentage of 56.69 of the gross receipts and 43.21 of the net receipts. The Report, having been seconded by Major-General Saunders Abbott, was unanimously adopted after a very brief discussion, and the retiring directors, viz., the Chairman and General Abbott, were re-elected, as was also the retiring auditor, Mr. Goodliffe; and the proceedings closed with a cordial vote of thanks to the chairman and board of directors.

THE INDIAN RATE OF INTEREST.—Sir Robert Collier on June 25 delivered the judgment of the Judicial Committee of the Privy Council in the case of Ramjiddas and another v. Rajah Bhagaw Bax and another, in which the question was as to the rate of interest to be allowed on a large loan to the Rajah Umrao Singh, who, as stated in the proceedings, was "much indebted, and his debts bore the rate of interest varying from 24 to 48 per cent., and his estate was in danger of being wholly eaten up." The property of the deceased Rajah was placed under the Oude Zilugdar Relief Act. The usual rate of interest in India is 12 per cent. legally reckoned, which was allowed in this case, and after a certain date only 6 per cent. The present appeal was from an order of the Commissioner of Lucknow. His Lordship said no order of the Commissioner could be varied as to the date of the 6 per cent. after the allowance of 12 per cent. interest. There would be no costs to either side.

MAIL SERVICE TO THE EAST.—A notice by the Postmaster General inviting tenders for the mail service to the East on the expiration of the existing contract with the Peninsular and Oriental Company upon January 31, 1880, has been published. The service is divided into two branches—one weekly to Bombay from Brindisi, the other fortnightly to Shanghai, and persons tendering may make an offer for the whole, or for any part, or to serve the several places mentioned by other lines or routes. The contract is not to be for more than eight years. By an official communication which has been sent to the Liverpool Chamber of Commerce on this subject it appears "that every endeavour will be used to conclude a new contract in time to be submitted to the House of Commons for approval during the present session."

DEATH OF THE RIGHT HON. SIR HENRY CONYNGBAM MONTGOMERY.—We regret to announce the death of Sir Henry Montgomery, which took place on the evening of the 25th June, after a fainting fit. The deceased baronet was the eldest son of the late Sir Henry Montgomery, who sat in Parliament for many years for the boroughs of St. Ives and Yarmouth, and for the county of Donegal. He was educated at Eton, and at Haileybury, and he accompanied the Marquis Wellesley to Ireland in 1821 as assistant to the private secretary. In 1825 he was appointed by Mr. Canning to a Writership in the service of the East India Company. He served in India in many distinguished positions, and was ultimately secretary to the Government of Madras and a Member of Council. On his return from India he was appointed one of the Indian Council, and in this position served for eighteen years. On his retirement he was made a member of the Privy Council. Sir Henry Montgomery was seventy-five years of age. He succeeded in the baronetcy by his brother, Admiral Alexander Leslie Montgomery, R.N. In 1827 the late baronet married the daughter of General Richard Pigot, who survives him. He had been for some time in failing health. India, fruitful in statesmen, has produced few more distinguished public servants than Sir Henry Montgomery.—Times.

DEATH OF ADMIRAL SIR W. HALL, K.C.B.—Admiral Sir William Hutcheon Hall, K.C.B., F.R.S., died on Tuesday, of cerebral apoplexy, at his residence in Phillimore-gardens, Campden-hill. Sir William Hall entered the Navy as a first-class volunteer in 1811, was midshipman in the Lyra in 1816, and accompanied Lord Amherst's Embassy to China. He afterwards served in the West Indies and Egypt, and during the first China war in 1841 he commanded the East India Company's war steamer Nemesis, which was lent by the Admiralty, and was present in twenty-one engagements, was wounded, was mentioned with distinction in ten different despatches, received the thanks of the Governor-General in Council, and was presented by the crew of the vessel with a sword. His exploits in Chinese waters gained for him the name of "Nemesis Hall." In 1843 he was appointed steam commander of the Queen's yacht. In the Russian war of 1854-55 he commanded the Hecla and the Blenheim in the Baltic, and was present at the destruction of the forts at Eckness, where he was wounded, and at the capture of Bomarsund. For these services he was appointed a Companion of the Bath, and in 1867 he was nominated a Knight Commander of the Order. He was placed on the active list of rear-admirals in 1863, and of vice-admirals in 1869, and went on the retired list of admirals in 1875. He married in 1845 the Hon. Hilare Caroline Byng, daughter of the late Vice-Admiral, sixth Viscount Torrington. Admiral Hall took a great interest in the welfare of sailors, and was instrumental in establishing sailors' homes and lifeboat institutions in various parts of the country.

BOMBAY, BARODA, AND CENTRAL INDIA RAILWAY.—The directors of the Bombay, Baroda, and Central India Railway have issued their forty-fifth half-yearly report to December 31st. The gross receipts were £281,992, against £229,612, and the working expenses were £132,446, against £169,799, leaving a net balance of £149,546, as compared with £59,813. The receipts from passengers, of whom (exclusive of season-tickets, which amounted to 4,772) 2,145,677 were carried, were £2,339 less; but the carriage of goods produced an increase of £34,550. Despite the increased receipts there is a saving under almost every head of expenditure, the largest reduction being in the amount spent on the maintenance of way, works and stations, which item, during the half-year under review, amounted only to £35,344, as against £64,728 in the second half of 1876. The 1876 expenditure is stated, however, to have included under the head of maintenance, an extraordinary sum of £32,668 on account of the disaster to the Nerbudda bridge. The net earnings of the latter part of 1877 are stated to have fallen short of the amount required for the guaranteed interest, but that the result for the whole year showed a surplus of £22,382 above the amount guaranteed, being a net return of £5. 5s. 11d. per cent. on the share capital. Under an arrangement which the proprietors were informed a twelvemonth ago had been made with the Secretary of State, the whole of the surplus profits have been appropriated towards the construction of the new Nerbudda Bridge. According to the accounts, the capital expenditure during the half-year was £10,856, and the total expenditure for the construction and equipment of the lines amounted, to December 31st, to £7,470,645, in addition to £338,400 which had up to that date been spent on stores and materials. At the meeting held on the 21st ult., the report was unanimously adopted.

RECEPTION AT THE CHINESE LEGATION.—The Chinese Minister and Madame Kuo, who recently had a reception at the Chinese Legation, 45, Portland-place, is the first time the representative of the Celestial Empire gave such an entertainment in Europe. The Minister had caused his residence to be arranged in accordance with English taste and usage. The entrance-hall and staircase were covered with crimson carpeting, and in every disposable place beautiful flowers were grouped in tasteful forms. The two principal saloons and ante-room were brilliantly lighted, the balcony fronting the mansion being enclosed and arranged with flowers, and lighted from Chinese lanterns, and in the boudoir and back drawing-room baskets of flowers were suspended. The Chinese Minister and Madame Kuo received their guests in the usual European manner in the drawing-room, the hostess being dressed in the toilette of a lady of rank in her country. The reception was especially interesting from the fact of its having been the first occasion on which a Chinese lady had appeared in general society where gentlemen as well as ladies were present. The company invited numbered about 800, but those attending did not exceed three-fourths of that amount; they included all the principal members of the Corps Diplomatique and members of the aristocracy, as well as the leading personages associated with the arts and sciences. Raimo's band was retained, and during the assembly played an excellent selection of music. Towards the end Madame Kuo seemed somewhat fatigued with welcoming such a host of friends, as well as the novelty of her position.

INDIAN TROOPS IN EUROPE.—Major-General Sir Frederic I. Goldsmid, C.B., K.C.S.I., presided at a meeting of officers and gentlemen interested in Indian affairs, held on last Wednesday, under the auspices of the East India Association, at the Westminster Palace Hotel, the object of the Conference being to discuss the policy of the employment of Indian troops in Europe. Mr. George Foggo, late member of the Bombay Legislative Council, in an elaborate and lengthened paper, weighed the arguments for and against the use of Indian troops outside India, and while admitting that there were high authorities for the opposite view, inclined himself to the opinion that the evils would outweigh the advantages. If troops were wanted on this side of the world, the more natural course would seem to be to bring British troops from India and the Colonies, for if the native troops were so loyal, as was contended there would be no danger. It was doubtful, too, whether the effect upon the great military powers was such as to increase materially the prestige of England; for they might naturally say, "You depended chiefly on Asiatics to preserve your dominion in India, and now you are dependent on the same races for the maintenance of your position in Europe." On the whole, his conviction was that the intervention of Indian troops in foreign quarrels must be to the prejudice of India. The wants of India were many and great; peace and reduced military expenditure were paramount necessities to her; and the tendency of the new principle must be in an exactly opposite direction, and so increase her already heavy burdens. At the conclusion of a discussion in which the most various views on the subject were expressed, a vote of thanks was unanimously passed to Mr. Foggo and the Chairman.

H.R.H. THE COMMANDER-IN-CHIEF AT MALTA.—It is to be hoped that the Duke's visit will be regarded as the compliment to the Indian Service it in reality is. Admitting that the association of the Native with the British troops entitled the former to be considered for the time a portion of our national Army, it is yet altogether an exceptional circumstance for the Commander-in-Chief to quit the Horse Guards for the sake of inspecting a Mediterranean garrison. The Duke's journey has, in fact, for its sole object the recognition of the excellent military spirit which the Indian Army has evinced in face of English interests becoming compromised in Europe, and his Royal Highness's inspection of this week has been a soldier's tribute of regard for a well-disciplined and loyal force. No doubt, beyond the mere act of reviewing the troops, his Royal Highness will inquire into the conditions under which they are serving in Malta, and take steps for the removal of certain hardships under which they are labouring. The rate of exchange for the rupee being dependent at present upon the market value of silver at Malta, entails a heavy loss on the Natives, who have to sell their money before they can utilise it for general purposes. This matter, and others of a similar character, will no doubt engage the Duke's attention, and his Royal Highness's visit will not only be a compliment but a substantial benefit to the Indian Contingent. The object of the Commander-in-Chief's journey has been, however, to let the Indian troops understand that although it is probable they will not be required to perform active service, yet their ready response to the call made upon them has been appreciated by the home authorities. There could scarcely be any conceivable circumstances other than the existing which could have taken the Duke of Cambridge to Malta; and if the Sepoys go home without having seen an enemy, they will at least carry back with them the tradition of having been reviewed by a Royal Prince and a distinguished soldier.

OFFICERS' ARREARS OF PAY.—The report of the Select Committee of the House of Commons, of which Colonel Jervis was chairman, and to which was referred the papers respecting the arrears of pay due by the Government of India to officers of the Royal Artillery and Royal Engineers, has appeared. The following are the material portions of the report:—"Your Committee presume that the main question referred for their opinion is whether the claims urged are just, and whether these officers ought or ought not to receive the arrears of pay which they allege to be due for the period between the 5th July, 1872, and the 1st April, 1875. Confining themselves, therefore, to the simple point whether or not the majors of Engineers and Artillery in question have an equitable claim on the Indian Government, your committee would express their opinion:—(1) That those officers ought, in the special circumstances of the case, to receive, in one form or another, the pay of their substantive rank; (2) that they are not entitled in addition to claim the full emoluments of contract allowances; (3) and, therefore, that if any officer can show to the satisfaction of the Government that in the interval between July 5, 1872, and April 1, 1875, the profit he may have enjoyed from his contract allowances fell short of the difference between his pay of a first captain and his present pay as a major, he shall have a fair claim to the amount of such deficiency. As, however, owing to the lapse of time, it may be difficult or impossible to ascertain the facts regarding the profitable nature of contract allowances in individual cases, your Committee would suggest that a basis of settlement may be found in the opinion expressed by the Governor-General in Council, 'that 200 rupees per mensem was the average profit obtained by officers for their contract allowances, and the committees think that that amount should be counted as having been paid by the India Government, as also the sum of 100 rupees per month granted to officers commanding garrison batteries.' It appears to your Committee that the expressions above quoted from the despatches of the Government of India (15th May, 1873, and 17th of April, 1874), which expressions have received the acquiescence of, and have been acted upon by, the Secretary of State for India in Council, practically concede the whole case; for if the disproportion between the rank and pay of officers is a just ground of complaint, it was so before the 1st April, 1875, quite as much as after that date. Your Committee, therefore, feel that they have virtually, if not literally, the sanction of the Secretary of State in Council to some recognition of the claims of these officers, and they submit the above proposal to the House in the hope that it may be found an equitable solution of the question."

India in Parliament.

HOUSE OF COMMONS, THURSDAY, June 20.—INDIAN TROOPS AT MALTA.—Colonel ARBUTHNOT, who had a question on the paper as to whether her Majesty's Viceroy of India had been consulted about the desirability of bringing the whole or a portion of the Native Indian troops now at Malta to this country, said that understanding that another question on the subject was likely to be asked in a few days, and that it would be for the convenience of the Government that he should not put the question now, he begged to postpone it. He would only say now he hoped the answer would be favourable. (Cries of "Order.")

HOUSE OF COMMONS, MONDAY, June 24.—INDIAN TROOPS.—Colonel ARBUTHNOT gave notice that on going into Committee of Supply he would move "That in view of the divergence of opinions recently manifested in this House with regard to the Constitutional power of the Crown to employ Indian troops in one of its European dependencies, without the previous consent of Parliament, it is desirable that steps should be taken, either by the addition of clauses to the Mutiny Act or by other means, to render indisputable the Crown's right to employ its armed forces in cases of emergency in any other part of the Empire than that in which they may have been raised or may be serving, such legislation to cover and include any troops which the Crown, acting on the advice of its responsible Ministers, may see fit to raise in any of its dependencies by voluntary enlistment, and with the sanction of the colonial Government under which they may be living."

THE INDIAN TROOPS IN MALTA.—Mr. ASHBURY asked the Chancellor of the Exchequer whether, in the event of the Berlin Congress resulting in peace, her Majesty's Government would consider the propriety of asking Parliament for powers to bring to England the Indian troops now in Malta, in order to give her Majesty the Queen and the people an opportunity of seeing representatives of our Indian Army; and, furthermore, whether, if for any reason it is not thought desirable to bring over the entire body, representative detachments from each regiment might be selected for inspection in England.—The CHANCELLOR of the EXCHEQUER: I can only say at present that her Majesty's Government have no measure of the kind in contemplation. (Hear, hear.)

CONTRACTS FOR INDIAN TROOPS AND STORES.—In reply to Mr. MUNDELLA, Mr. W. H. SMITH stated that the Admiralty were now in a position to furnish particulars of the contracts for the vessels engaged in the transport of the Indian troops and stores from Bombay to Malta, and if the hon. member would move for them they would be laid on the table of the House.

HOUSE OF COMMONS, THURSDAY, June 27.—THE INDIAN FAMINE.—Mr. POTTER asked the Under Secretary of State for India whether, having regard to the effect which had been produced in India by the possibly exaggerated reports prevalent there as to the mortality caused by the recent famine, he would lay upon the table of the House such returns or estimates of mortality as may be now in the possession of Government; and whether it be true, as stated in the Indian papers, that the instructions from the Home Government virtually prohibited inquiry by the Famine Commission into the extent of the mortality and into the land revenue system.—Mr. E. STANHOPE: I stated a short time ago that I might run the risk of misleading the House by quoting the partial returns which we had received. But I can assure the hon. member that we do not desire to keep back any information we possess, and as soon as we receive the returns which the Government of India has collected, they shall be laid upon the table. The instructions from the Home Government were presented to Parliament on the 21st of January last. After indicating various points as to which inquiry was desirable, and cautioning the Commission against being led away from its main objects by making too minute an investigation of others, the despatch concludes:—"I have indicated the principal matters in respect to which the proposed Commission may gather facts and make recommendations which will assist the Government in devising measures to protect the people from the calamities following upon excessive drought. But nothing that I have written must be held to preclude them from pursuing any inquiries which, in their judgment, are calculated to attain this object." (Hear, hear.)

THE VERNACULAR PRESS, INDIA.—Mr. A. M'ARTHUR asked the Under Secretary of State for India when the papers relating to the Vernacular Press Act would be laid upon the table.—Mr. E. STANHOPE: I laid these papers on the table on the 3rd of June. The delay which has occurred in printing and delivering them to members is not the fault of the India Office, but it has caused me much regret, and has been inexcusably long. I have, however, now received a positive promise that they will be generally distributed tomorrow. (Hear.)

HOUSE OF COMMONS, FRIDAY, June 28.—INDIAN SALT TAX.—Mr. E. STANHOPE, answering a question by Mr. M'ARTHUR as to a letter in the Daily News, said the Government of India were in communication with the Native States with a view to the abolition of the customs dues. The object of the negotiations was to give to all the people of India at the cheapest possible rate, consistently with financial safety, as much salt as they required. He had no information as to the statement that the Indian Government was urging one large native State to give up or forbid the cultivation of opium in its territory.

SCHWEITZER'S COCOATINA

Anti-Dyspeptic Cocoa or Chocolate Powder.

Guaranteed Pure Soluble Cocoa of the Finest Quality,
with the excess of fat extracted.

The Faculty pronounce it "the most nutritious, perfectly digestible beverage for Breakfast, Luncheon, or Supper, and invaluable for Invalids and Children."

Highly commended by the entire Medical Press.
Being without sugar, spices, or other admixture, it suits all palates, keeps better in all climates, and is four times the strength of Coconos thickened yet WEAKENED with Arrowroot, Starch, &c., and is REALITY CHEAPER than such Mixtures.

Made instantaneously with boiling water, a teaspoonful
to a Breakfast Cup costing less than a Halfpenny.
COCOATINA A LA VANILLE is the most delicate, digestible, Cheapest Vanilla Chocolate, and may be taken when richer Chocolate is prohibited.

WHITE'S MOC-MAIN LEVER
TRUSS COMPANY (Limited).

WHITE'S MOC-MAIN LEVER TRUSS, Perfected and Exhibited in the Great Exhibition of 1851, is allowed by upwards of 500 Medical Gentlemen to be the most effective invention in the curative treatment of Hernia. The use of a steel spring, so often hurtful in its effects, is here avoided; a soft bandage being worn round the body, while the requisite resisting power is supplied by the MOC-MAIN PAD and PATENT LEVER, fitting with so much ease and closeness that it cannot be detected, and may be worn during sleep. A descriptive circular may be had, and the Truss (which cannot fail to fit) forwarded by post on the circumference of the body two inches below the hips being sent to the Manufacturer.

NOTES ON MUHAMMADANISM

REV. T. P. HUGHES, M.R.A.S.,

C. M. S., Missionary to the Afghans, Peshawar.

Opinions of the Press on the First Edition.

"Altogether an admirable little book. It combines two excellent qualities, abundance of facts and lack of theories. . . . On every one of the numerous heads (over fifty) into which the book is divided Mr. Hughes furnishes a large amount of very valuable information, which it would be exceedingly difficult to collect from even a large library of works on the subject. The book might well be called a 'Dictionary of Muhammadan Theology,' for we know of no English work which combines a methodical arrangement (and consequently facility of reference), with fulness of information in so high a degree as the little volume before us."—The Aca- demy.

"It contains multum in parvo, and is about the best outline of the tenets of the Muslim faith which we have seen. It has, moreover, the rare merit of being accurate; and although it contains a few passages which we would gladly see expunged, it cannot fail to be useful to all Government employes who have to deal with Muhammadans, whilst to Missionaries it will be invaluable."—The Times of India.

"This small book is the most luminous, most convenient, and, we think, the most accurate, outline of the tenets and practices of Islamism that we have met with.
It seems exactly the sort of comprehensive and trustworthy book in small compass, on this subject, that we
and many more have often looked for in vain. . . .
The author has evidently studied his subject in a faithful, laborious, and scholarly manner, and has not only studied but mastered it. The work is of great value for general students, and for men whose work lies among the Mussulman population, such as Civil Servants and Missionaries, it seems to be the very work that is wanted."—The Friend of India.

"In brief compass it contains a large amount of reliable information. Instead of theories and fancies, facts are placed before us. Muhammadanism is represented as it really is, not as it is supposed that it might possibly be. Instead of retailing the speculations current in literary society at home, Mr. Hughes furnishes us with brief but incisive statements, which, so far as they go, leave nothing to be desired."—The Church Mis- sionary Intelligence.

"It is manifest throughout the work that we have before us the opinions of one thoroughly conversant with the subject, and who is uttering no random notions. . . . We strongly recommend 'Notes on Mu-hammadanism.' Our Clergy especially, even though they are not Missionaries, and have no intention of labouring amongst Muhammadans or consorting with them, ought to have at least as much knowledge of the system as can be most readily acquired, with a very little careful study, from this useful treatise."—The ecord.

"Its value as a means of correcting the common impressions about Islam will reveal itself to the most casual reader, while the author's evident scholarship and intimate knowledge of his subject bespeak for him
a patient hearing on points the most open to contro-

Summary and Review.

OUR latest advices by the Overland Mail are, from Bombay, June 14; Allahabad and Madras, June 12; Calcutta, June 11.

THE Times telegram, dated Calcutta, July 7, sums up the latest accounts of the weather and general prospects:—

Over forty inches of rain has fallen at Bombay during fourteen days—the largest rainfall ever registered in the same time. Madras is not so fortunate. The Government report a monsoon light and irregular. Prices rising forebode a great increase of distress unless rain falls within a fortnight.

Various useful works are ready for commencement. The Indian Government has accepted a programme of works, and has already granted leave to begin the South Coast Canal. Twelve engineers have been ordered to Madras. The Secretary of State has requested that notice be given to fifty junior engineers on furlough to hold themselves in readiness to return to India if required.

The number on the relief works is 134,721; on gratuitous relief, 72,743. In Mysor prices are stationary, or showing an upward tendency. On the relief works there are 35,315; on gratuitous relief, 12,552. The Mysor Government has applied for the sanction of an expenditure of 1,000,000 rupees for the purpose of constructing a State railway between Bangalor and Mysor. Up to March 21, 1877, the Madras Government has paid 18,300,000 rupees on account of famine relief. The last return for the North-West Provinces gives the following numbers:—On the relief works, 99,052, against 69,650 in the previous return; in poorhouses, 7,805, against 6,209. In Oud, on the relief works are 19,212, against 17,153 in the last report; and 3,841, against 3,047, in poorhouses.

The Bank of Bengal has declared a dividend of 5 per cent. for the half-year, the account showing a profit of nearly 1,200,000 rupees.

The trade outlook is slightly better. A commercial report states the total imports for May of this year at 37,627,718 rupees, against 46,257,474 in May, 1877; the total exports for May of this year, 58,298,366 rupees, against 72,943,764 in May, 1877, which shows an actual loss for this year. The Secretary states that bills on India from the 1st of April to the end of June amounted to 8,459,490 rupees, or 233,541 less than the estimated quantity. The cotton shipped from Bombay in June was 40,020,820 lb., valued at 10,000,809 rupees. The tea exports in June, 1878, were 1,989,760 lb., against 1,605,502 in June, 1877. The expenditure on the Madras harbour to the end of May has been 1,805,579 rupees.

The Department of Agriculture publishes the following reports on the state of the season and prospects of the crops for the week ending June 4, 1878:—

Rain is reported from all districts of Madras; in Malabar, South Canara, Salem, Coimbatore and the Nilgiris the fall has been of fair quantity, elsewhere slight; prices still show an upward tendency in many districts. The total number on relief works is 124,478, and on gratuitous relief 72,698; the former is less by 2,367 and the latter more by 220 than last week. No rain is announced from Mysor; ploughing and sowing continue; the number on works for the week ending the 25th ultimo was 44,216, and on gratuitous relief 11,566, less by 446 and 482 than in the previous week respectively. In Bombay showers have fallen throughout the Southern Mahratta Country and in Khandesh; the river continues very high in Sind; the weather at Bombay is cloudy and very hot. It has been cloudy and hot during the week throughout the Central Provinces; slight showers have fallen in four districts; preparations for the kharif continue. No rain has fallen in Berar. None is reported from Central India. In Rajputana there has been a general heavy fall of rain in Bickaneer, which has filled the tanks; there appears also to have been a heavy fall at Kotah; showers are reported from Abu, Sirohi, Marwar, Jhallawar, Deoli, and Ajmere. In Bengal rain is reported from all the Eastern, and most of the Central and Northern districts; showers have also fallen in Chota Nagpore and Orissa; in the Bhagalpur and Patna divisions there has been little or no rain; the weather is now generally fine, and prospects good; more rain is wanted in Pooree. In Assam little rain has fallen in the valley, more in Sylhet; prospects are good. In Burma there has been general rain. In the North-Western Provinces and Oudh no rain has fallen, except in Kumaun; westerly winds prevail. In the Punjab rain is reported only from Amritsar (where damage is said to have been done to the crops still ungarnered), Dehra Ismail Khan, and Hissar; the weather is now more settled, and reports of the harvest are favourable.

THE Ceylon Observer says:—"A very considerable amount of rain has fallen during the last ten days, accompanied by rather heavy winds, which now blow pretty steadily from the south-west. The temperature has been delightfully cool for a tropical clime, the sun being obscured for the greater part of the day by the rain-clouds. The total rainfall at Colombo in May was 22.94 inches, a quantity only twice exceeded since 1870."

THE Daily Telegraph of this morning, in a telegram dated Berlin yesterday, makes the important announcement that "England has concluded a Defensive Treaty with Turkey for the maintenance of the strict integrity of the Sultan's Asiatic dominions; and that in view of this fact the Porte has accorded to Great Britain the right to occupy the Island of Cyprus, a right which her Majesty's Government will immediately carry into effect." It is added that "the position of Cyprus, by its proximity to Antioch and Aleppo, will give England absolute control over the Euphrates Valley, and so secure this route to India;" moreover, that "a line of railway on the mainland, having this object in view, is about to be constructed." This looks as though a preference had been accorded to Mr. Andrew's scheme, but time will show. Meanwhile let us hope the report of the Telegraph is well-founded.

THE Marine Court of Inquiry on the P. and O. s.s. China has given its judgment. The Court is of opinion that the fire was not caused by spontaneous combustion. In the opinion of the members the occurrence was due to the dropping of some ignited substance through the hatch of the second-class deck or by undetected smoking by the workmen who were stowing away the cargo. The Court also found that Captain Alderton acted wisely in scuttling the vessel, and that "he did all that might be expected from an able seamen and intelligent commander in the trying circumstances in which he was placed."

THE Times telegram from Bombay states that the High Court has granted a rule nisi for the transfer of the Surat riot case, of native editors, to the High Court of Petitioners. It is alleged that the condition which prevails at Surat is wholly unsuited to allow of a fair trial. The witnesses, it is said, are afraid to testify to the truth lest they should be arrested by the police, whom they allege to be searching for witnesses armed with blank warrants. An order has, therefore, been passed for temporarily staying the trial.

It is said that there has been some friction between Major Biddulph and some of the Cashmere authorities of Gilgit, and that a serious complaint has been made by the former against the latter. The Viceroy has left the case entirely in the hands of the Maharajah, who has summoned the Cashmerian officials concerned to Srinuggur, and is at present investigating the case.

THE Government of India has published a Resolution for the subject of the adjourned Railway Conference. It is proposed that the Conference assemble in Calcutta next cold weather, probably in November. The subjects for discussion will relate to the economic and efficient working of railways as respects both the public and the employes. The consulting engineers are desired to invite communications from all persons interested in railway matters.

LONG experience of the Madras surf should have taught at least some of the authorities concerned in the despatch of six 12-ton guns to that Presidency that it is not always an easy matter to disembark articles of such cumbrous character. On the occasion referred to, it appears that the guns, on arrival, could not be landed; the surf was heavy, and there were no appliances to lift such weights out of a ship's hold. And what was the result? "They were brought round to Bombay, and it is now said there are no wagons on the railways between here and Madras capable of carrying so much as twelve tons." This might well form a subject for the forthcoming Railway Conference.

MR. O'CONOR, Assistant-Secretary to the Government of India in the Department of Revenue, Agriculture and Commerce, has been deputed to inquire into the departmental condition of the Bombay Custom House and suggest necessary reforms to the Government of India.

LIEUTENANT-COLONEL H. H. STANSFELD, Bengal Staff Corps, has been appointed Private Secretary to the Lieut.-Governor of Bengal, and leaves Simla for Darjeeling immediately. Colonel Stansfeld will be at home in the duties of Private Secretary, as he officiated in that capacity with Sir William Grey.

LORD ULICK BROWNE has been gazetted to act as a member of the Board of Revenue during the absence on leave of Mr. H. L. Dampier. Mr. W. S. Wells succeeds Lord Ulick Browne as Commissioner of Cooch Behar, Mr. F. H. Pellew acting as Commissioner of Burdwan.

DR. MACDONALD, who was lately delegated to inspect the famine districts on behalf of a Bombay Native Association, finds that considerable mortality took place (as was to be expected) during the famine, but that he could find no cases of relapsing fever, about the existence or non-existence of which in Bombay the doctors are now disputing. Dr. MacDonald thinks that the depopulation of many villages in the Deccan is to be accounted for, not by mortality, but by the emigration of the villagers to better districts.

ACCORDING to news from Leh, dated May 26, the Karakoram and the other passes are still snowed up. Another attempt, the third, had been made to send men into what we may again call Chinese Turkestan, to learn the news there, and had failed; and the success of a fourth attempt, then being made, was very doubtful. A number of traders with goods from Yarkund were supposed to be still somewhere north of the Karakoram, quite unable of course to make their way through the Pass. Judging, moreover, from the quantity of snow in the passes from Leh into Nubra and Tanksee—three feet of fresh snow had just been reported,—it seemed likely enough that the Karakoram would be impassable for some time yet to come. The Bara Lacha and other passes on the route from Leh to Kulu are not likely to be open till the end of July, and will be closed again by October or November; usually this route is open for five months in the year. In Leh and in the Upper Indus Valley there have been constant falls of snow; and no fine weather worth speaking of. With the Karakoram snowed up, nothing authentic can be heard at Leh about the progress of the Chinese in Turkestan; but the impression is that the Russian accounts are true, that the Chinese have really entered Khokan.

A CRY for help comes from North Berar for the starving Koorcoos of the Taptee Valley. Captain Oldham, R.E., publishes in the Times of India a letter from the Rev. A. Norton, Chikalda, which needs no comment:—

The day before yesterday I arrived here from the jungle. The thousands of Koorcoos and Gonds in the Taptee Valley are suffering terribly from famine. Wheat, grain, kootkee, mungee, and mussoor—all their crops—have totally failed. The universal story of the people is, "We are starving; we are dying." They have said frequently that if this year there had been the usual crop of jungle fruit and seeds they could have lived on them easily, though all their crops have totally failed. But the jungle mango-trees have borne no fruit at all this year in their country. The mho blossom, on which for weeks the Koorcoos and Gonds have been principally subsisting, has this year been only a quarter crop. Some are living on the leaves of trees. Some are wandering with not a rag to cover their nakedness, picking up jungle seeds and sleeping where night overtakes them. The Koorcoos themselves say that half of their race will die during the coming six months.

We can only add that there is a post-office at Chikalda, and a money order post-office at Ellichpore, the nearest civil station in the plains.

THE Bombay Gazette says:—"At last the weather and its indications are to be systematically recorded. Mr. John Eliot, the Chief Meteorological Reporter to the Government of India, has left Simla for Calcutta to make the necessary arrangements and organise a small staff, which will shortly return with him to Simla. For the next four months reports will be telegraphed thither daily, from some fifty observing stations in every part of India—from Peshawar to Colombo and from Kurrachee to Rangoon—and the information thus sent will be manipulated in a scientific manner and made public through the Press." Our readers will be kept perfectly au courant to these reports, and may expect to be most weather wise.

AN instructive comment on the Vernacular Press is published by the Times of India. It seems that a Mohammedan journal, the Lawrence Gazette, published at Meerut, lately published letters supposed to have passed between the Sultan and the Ameer of Kabul. The letters created excitement in the bazaars, and were accepted as genuine, and reprinted. We cannot quote the whole; the pith lies in these words of the Ameer, who signs himself Sher-Ally, servant of the Oosmany throne:—"I consider the Russians are brave, and therefore keep friends with them. I have no faith in the words of the English nation. I am afraid they never keep their word." The Sultan, however, loyally replies, "I do not agree with what you say respecting the English nation," and goes on to advise his correspondent "not to listen to what Russian agents say." The shallowness of the hoax, and the credulity of those imposed on, are amply shown by the fact that the letter to and reply from Stamboul according to the date only occupied three days in transit!

AN ingenious case of counterfeiting coin was recently discovered at Hoshungabad, in the Central Provinces. It is known that natives, when testing gold mohurs, or other gold coin, generally take them to a jeweller to have a hole drilled half-way through them for the purpose of seeing that they are of genuine metal. The present coiner, a jeweller by trade, manufactured silver imitations of gold mohurs, and having drilled two or three holes half-way through them, to make it appear they had been as often tested, thickly gilded them over. By these means he, for some time, imposed even on members of his own craft, till one more wily than the others proceeded to test some of the counterfeit coins for himself. The fraud was then discovered, but it is said not before one hundred base coins had been thus put into circulation.

THE Resident at Aden, Brigadier-General Loch, is about to pay a visit to the island of Socotra, the conspicuous landmark in the Indian Ocean off Cape Guardafui. The island is said to be ruled by an Arab Chief, who may be regarded as an absentee proprietor. Its position is one of considerable strategic importance, and in the event of hostilities the British Government would doubtless take good care that Socotra should not fall into the possession of an enemy. General Loch's visit to the island is thought to be connected with the possible contingencies of war. In the days of Portuguese rule in India Socotra was inhabited by a number of Nestorian Christians, and was the seat of a Bishopric. Now, it is said, there is not a Christian on the island.

THE Government Resolution on the Bombay Presidency Magistrate's Report for 1877 has been published. The number of persons brought before the Courts in 1877 was 22,643, against 22,192 in 1876, being an increase of 451. This increase of crime is mainly in petty thefts, and may be attributed to increased cost of living consequent on the immigration of destitute people from the famine districts. Cases of drunkenness were about the same in number as in the previous year; but we note with shame an increase in the number of Europeans, Eurasians, and native Christians tried on that account, and a decrease in the Hindus and Mahomedans. Then, also, though there is a decrease of Europeans brought before the Criminal Courts, the number being 1,018, against 1,119 in the year 1876, the ratio compared with the population is still high, but few of this class of criminals belong to the European residents; they come from the military or passing population. Increased prosecutions for assaults on policemen show increased zeal on the part of the police; and the activity displayed by the Society for Prevention of Cruelty has raised the number tried for abusing and torturing animals from 791 to 1,230; of these 1,207 were convicted, which shows the care and discrimination of the agents of the Society. The stolen property for the year amounted in value to Rs. 97,437, of which fifty-five per cent. was recovered. On the whole, the report shows that the work of the magistrates has been well done, and the police have maintained their character for efficiency.

WHILE at home we are hopefully expecting a pacific solution of the Eastern Question, our squadron is not inactive. The following paragraph we take from the China Mail of the 3rd inst., which is of interest at the present moment:—

Considerable manœuvring appears to be going on between the British squadron and the three Russian men-of-war until lately lying at Yokohama. The Audacious arrived at Yokohama on the evening of the 17th April, accompanied by the gun-vessel Maggie, raising the number of British men-of-war in that harbour to six. These, with the three Russian war vessels, and the German corvette Augusta, were, in fact, the only men-of-war at Yokohama at the time. On the evening of the 18th, or the day after the arrival of the Audacious, the British corvette Modeste and the sloop Egeria received sealed sailing orders, and left the harbour on the following morning. Absolutely nothing is known as to their destination. The Shanghai-Nagasaki telegraph got out of working order shortly after their departure, and as the last telegrams that had reached Yokohama had announced the despatch of a force from India to Malta, and that "the situation is generally considered less hopeful," but the Russian and the English Admirals must have felt anything but comfortable. In a Yokohama contemporary of the 20th, one day later, we find a couple of significant paragraphs, the one that "the departure of the Russian squadron has been postponed until to-morrow morning; its destination is now said to be Higo and Nagasaki," and the other that "H.M.S. Audacious was calling all day yesterday and last night." The three Russian corvettes, however, took their departure on the 21st, ostensibly for Kobe, and seem to have been pretty nearly followed out of the harbour by the Audacious and Maggie, whose destination was unannounced. Probably the British Admiral did not know it himself, beyond that it would be much about the same as that of the Russian vessels. The Audacious is not only the most powerful but the fastest vessel, with perhaps the exception of the despatch boat Vigilant, of the British squadron in these waters, and speed will be one of the greatest desiderata in taking care of the three Russian corvettes at Yokohama—all of whom are, we believe, pretty fast vessels—should war unfortunately ensue between the two countries.

A CORRESPONDENT of the Pioneer has sent a letter written by General John Jacob, of Sindé fame—written in 1849. The following words are prophetic, though at the time they must have seemed nonsense to many:—"I intend standing by the service I have created as long as I feel that my presence is useful, and some day I hope to show that the native soldier of India can take his place in the line of battle with the best men of Europe. The S. I. H. (Sindé Irregular Horse) is already capable of proceeding on service to any part of the world, and I would not hesitate to match it in fight man-for-man against the cuirassiers of France. Wherefore, I suppose that Government would be glad to employ us in case of the Indian army taking a share in European war."

THE suspicious people of Simla exercised themselves for some time in a Turkish visitor who, of course, was a spy of Russia. The suspected spy turns out to be the faithful Afghan native orderly of the Prince of Wales, Azezoolah Khan. At first a trooper in the 4th Panjab Cavalry, he made his way to New York, via Shanghai, Peking, Yokohama, and San Francisco. From New York he went to London, and became native orderly of the Prince of Wales, whom he accompanied throughout his Indian tour. His certificates testify to his having fully proved himself a faithful servant. On the outbreak of the Russo-Turkish war he went to Constantinople, and received a commission as Lieutenant from the Sultan. Thus he fought through the Armenian campaign as aide-de camp to Ferik Aali Pasha, was wounded at Kars, and was decorated with the Medjidie of 5th class for his bravery at the battle, which resulted in defeat of General Loris Melikoff. He has since returned to India. After a visit to London he volunteered for the Expeditionary force, but was told to wait for a frontier employment. Meanwhile he bides his time at Simla on an allowance of Rs. 100 per mensem, and a braver and more loyal servant of the empire cannot be found.

WE have heard of convicts being admitted members of select circles and "uncertain heroines" passing as most unimpeachable matrons. Some poor Bengalis of the carpenter caste at Allahabad have suffered grievous hurt to their caste by a native who declared himself to be one of themselves. He introduced a female as his wife, and both the impostors were unreservedly admitted to social fellowship. At last the actors appeared in their true garb. Their associates got information, to their great confusion, that they were sally deceived, and that the man was of a very low caste and the woman was his concubine. A great sensation was caused, and the man was threatened with a suit for damages for loss of caste by his fellows. But his cunning was too great to be easily detected. He flatly denied the facts, and he wanted to prove his status by letters from his home. The persons whom he so cleverly deceived were prevailed upon, and granted him time, with a view to prove his status. Getting this opportunity, he made arrangements for his escape; he secretly sold his furniture, drew his pay, and made himself scarce, leaving the woman behind him. His adversaries have been compelled to shave their heads and make prayaschitta before they were readmitted to their caste. The woman has now entered into the order of her sisterhood. Such occurrences are not rare in these Provinces."

WE readily give currency to the idea started by the Pioneer to encourage a kind of Fancy Fair in India, which would suit the native quite as much as the European taste. Might not so simple an agency be the means of drawing out of seclusion many weary inmates of the zanana, for whom much has been done already by benevolent English ladies, but for whose civilisation so much more remains to be accomplished?—

On the third day of every month, writes Abul Fazl, his Majesty, the Emperor Akbar, held a large assembly, whither came the people of his harem, and to which the wives of other people also were bidden. Merchants displayed their wares, the ladies looked and bought, and the assembly was in reality a fancy fair. The day of the fancy fairs was called Khushruz, the joyful day, "as they are," says the historian, "a source of much enjoyment." Shah Jahan held fancy fairs, too; but in his time the enjoyment seems to have sometimes exceeded proper bounds, as in the days of the First Napoleon. Sikandar Begum of Bopal used likewise to patronise fancy fairs for the sale of articles made by the orphans whom the good lady had adopted. In praise of these last-named fairs, one Hakim Asghar Husain has written a book, in Persian—"Bazar-i-Sikandari," "The Sikandari Market." And there has been some talk, too, of establishing fancy fairs here and there in India for the sale of Indian fancy goods, jewellery, embroidery, and such like.

The Pioneer thinks that "if people or an association could be persuaded to promote the idea, it would doubtless be a success."

WELL deserving of the sarcastic comments of our Indian contemporaries is the curious conduct of the Chief Commissioner of Mysore, Mr. J. D. Gordon. The wedding of the Maharaja lasted from the 22nd ult. to the 4th inst. Great European festivities were announced for the latter days. Cards of invitation were sent to all subordinate officials, and they reasonably looked forward to have a good time; but the reverse of a reminder came to many of them in the form of a circular from the Assistant Secretary, which we print entire :—

Sir,—I am desired to request that, in order to guard against possible misunderstandings, you will be careful to make it known to all officers subordinate to you that, with regard to the requirements of the public service, at the present time, it will not be practicable to permit any officers, other than those who have been expressly summoned, to proceed to Mysore on the occasion of H.H. the Maharajah's wedding, to avail themselves of the invitations which, as a matter of courtesy, have been sent to all officers serving in this administration.

After this we are not surprised to learn that the English Press of Bangalore received scant courtesy, being not invited, but told they might call for news.

GENERAL THOMPSON, whose death we recorded last week, as "C.B." writes to the Times of the 4th inst., was not only the oldest officer of the Indian army, but the sole survivor of Lord Lake's gallant army which on Nov. 1, 1803, won the hard-fought battle of Laswaree. One survivor of Assaye, fought in the same year, remains in the person of Lieut. Francis Glanville, late 19th Dragoons.

Odds and Ends.

COLONEL MELVILL accepted the temporary command of the 7th Bengal Cavalry, vacant by Colonel Brownlow's death, on the understanding that it does not prejudice his claim to the command of the 19th Bengal Cavalry, when Colonel Fane retires.

LIEUTENANT-COLONEL HENRY ST. GEORGE TUCKER, Bengal Infantry, on return from furlough, is posted for general duty to Barrackpore.

LIEUTENANT-COLONEL W. D. SHIPLEY, 40th Regiment, has been appointed to the command of the Murree Depot to enable him to complete two years' service in command of a Hill Depot, vice Lieutenant-Colonel Rowland.

MR. E. M. MONEY has been permitted to resign her Majesty's Bengal Civil Service.

CAPTAIN E. MOLLOY, Adjutant, 5th Goorkhas, has been attached to the Foreign Department.

LORD CRANBROOK has been asked to warn fifty junior engineers, now absent on leave, to be ready to start for India as occasions may arise.

MR. CHARLES KAPP has been appointed Acting Consul for the Netherlands at Bombay during the absence of Mr. Meili.

On the 3rd inst. the Governor of Madras asked leave to begin the South Coast Canal and applied for the services of twelve engineers. The required sanction was telegraphed and the engineers were sent.

A FIRE took place at Simla on June 9th, by which the premises occupied by Messrs. Abich and Co., which formed a portion of Lawrie's Hotel, were burned down.

LARGE reinforcements of Dutch troops are being sent to Acheen, where it is rumoured that a serious outbreak has occurred.

TRUSTWORTHY accounts have reached India of marching and counter-marching and considerable movement of Russian troops beyond the Oxus.

THE Government of the North-West-Provinces and Oudh has obtained the concession of that half of the surplus profits of canals which has hitherto been paid to the Supreme Government.

THE Secretary of State has sanctioned the appointment of M. Raoul Quillet, to act as Emigration Agent at Calcutta for the French Colonies during the absence of M. Felix Charriol on leave in Europe.

It is reported that famine is now raging in Bokhara and Merv, the result of the severe frost of last winter, followed by inundations in the spring.

THE WANT OF VERNACULAR EDUCATION IN INDIA.

In continuation of some remarks we made lately on the necessity for a thorough change of educational policy in India, we would point out that the full value of extended vernacular education among the peasantry has scarcely been as yet appreciated. The great want of the peasant class in India is—forethought. A man whose ideas are strictly limited to what he has seen and felt is not likely to use his thoughts on a combination of future possibilities. From his childhood the peasant is accustomed to till the ground and to sell or eat the produce year by year. In good years he eats more and dresses better, and in famines he is helpless. His father was able to procure some six or seven hundred rupees to spend on his marriage by mortgaging his land, and he hopes to be able to obtain a like sum when required. His experience has shown him that money can be got by signing a paper, and the full meaning of what he is doing he cannot receive. He is quite unable to understand that a combination of evils in one single year—short crop, want of water, &c.,—may make the bond he has signed, and is unable to meet, his chains to bind him in life-long slavery. A casual inquirer among the peasantry will find that in 99 per cent. of cases, where money has been borrowed, it is for something totally unnecessary—almost invariably for marriage expenses. The family savings, as well as a considerable sum borrowed, go in this way. These savings sometimes amount to some hundreds of rupees, but there is always an additional sum to be borrowed. It is this marvellous inability to look beyond the immediate future that is the great cause of the peasant's indebtedness. Again, when once the bond has been signed with his mark, a rude imitation of a ploughshare, the peasant takes no pains to find out if the accounts of the money-lender are correct, as he pays off his debt. He cannot read, and he has barely enough arithmetic to ascertain the total of two and two. Consequently, the usurer says what he pleases, and perplexes the peasant with an intricate arrangement of debit and credit, with the invariable result of showing that he is more, rather than less, in debt. Enormous sums of money are annually drained from the peasantry, which would be saved to him by a little education. In itself education will neither make a clever nor a provident man; but it will enable the man of ordinary abilities to calculate the future to his advantage and not to discount it. Not only so; but the mere training of the mind by the effort of learning will render possible the labour of calculating future chances. The power of the usurer lies almost entirely in his knowledge of "the three Rs." All his unlawful gains, over and above the stipulated sums, are due to the fact that he is the only one of the two parties who can read, write, or calculate. It should be the great aim of education in India to enable every individual to protect himself. It is no use having elaborate laws dependent on a written form of contract, if one of the contracting parties can neither comprehend the original contract nor check the working of it. It is the want of that comprehension which education gives that causes the peasant to hate the Civil Courts with such a bitter hatred. These Courts never appear to him as protectors, but invariably as oppressors. They are to him the servants of the usurer, and the cry that the Sirkar only cares for Bunnias is the natural result. Not only, as we showed in our former article, is the present system of a preponderance in the higher education enabling the oppressing classes to become the executive of Government, but it is giving the lives and labour of the people into their hands as well. This necessity for educating the people in their villages, is perhaps the most burning question in India. They should have every inducement to learn, and they are very willing to take advantage of opportunities; but the village schools are few, and the Brahmin teachers discourage all but Brahmins or Marwarees, and their like. Every taluka should have many schools, not one or two, and in the large villages only, and the teachers should be koonbees. The natural ability of the peasant is much greater than is often supposed. He is shrewd in his line, but reading, writing, and arithmetic are away in the clouds, and they are the instruments of his oppression, not of his freedom as they ought to be. "A little knowledge" is only dangerous when the owner tries to use it out of its range. The Indian peasant is not in the position of an English labourer, who often could not read or write, though that reproach is passing away. He is in the position of a small farmer, farming his own land, and with his own hands. Under our laws where writing plays so great a part, and where documentary evidence is so crushing, not to read and write means a daily possible ruin. Those who know the districts can tell of actually hundreds of forged bonds in some villages, which, when well got up, are as powerful as real ones. There is at this present moment nothing to prevent any village usurer from getting the greater part of a village into his hands without having a claim to any single acre. Not only so, but such things are done. What is there, when once a customer has put his mark to paper, to prevent the usurer from writing whatever he chooses above it? Collusion with the village officers would be easy, and the signatories could never disprove such documentary evidence. It is well that attention should be called to this great question. Abolish one "High School," with its daily murder of the inoffensive English classics, and the means to establish a hundred village schools are at hand.—Bombay Gazette.

THE VERNACULAR PRESS ACT.

THE debate expected on Friday last has been postponed to the 16th; the threatened attack on the policy of the Indian Government is still to be delivered; but day by day the feeling grows, that however much we may regret the fact, the Act restraining the Native Press of India has been made necessary by the growing out-re-cuidance of the vernacular newspapers. At first, indeed, it seemed, as was well said, to be a sudden reversing of the engines. The progress of education, the cultivation of the native mind, the slow growth of freedom, all seemed to be advancing. That such a sudden danger-whistle should be sounded, and so severe a break pressure be applied, showed that there was danger a-head. It seemed to the English public that some sudden discovery must have been made, to call for so stringent a measure, and one so unwelcome to English minds. The publication of the Blue-book has cleared away such misapprehension, as the real course of events is set forth clearly in the various documents. Although the Act itself was passed with a haste that left it faulty in certain of its provisions, the necessity of some such measure had been felt for some years. During the years which have elapsed since the liberation of the Indian Press in 1835, there has been a steady increase in the number and in the power of both English and Vernacular journals. Save in 1857, when Lord Canning passed the Gagging Act, no break had occurred in this growth, no interference with the freedom of the Press. Of that very Act the latest historian of those troublous times admits the necessity as regarded the native Press, which "had encouraged sedition and rebellion." In more recent times the danger of disaffection being propagated was guarded against by the Section of the Penal Code added in 1870. By this the crime of exciting or attempting to excite feelings of disaffection was made punishable with transportation, imprisonment, or fine; the appended explanation declared that disapprobation of the measures of Government is not in itself disaffection; the right of criticism was amply secured. The Indian Press, both European and Native, again, to quote Colonel Malleon, "was often extremely uncompromising when dealing with individuals. It certainly called a spade a spade." We are not unused in this country to strong writing and bitter attacks, as well on the general policy as the individuals of the Ministry. But the Anglo-Indian Press, as, for instance, in the recent attacks on Sir George Couper, is sometimes unequalled in the fierceness of its onslaught on obnoxious measures or men. A carefully-guarded freedom, a wide latitude of expression, was accordingly left by this law of seditious libel. The native journalists, we may be sure, would not be slow to imitate and surpass their European teachers and models in criticism. Yet for some years the various official reports, up to so recent a date as 1874, speak in commendation of the tone of the Vernacular Press. It cannot then be charged against the Government of India that the growth and development of native journalism experienced any check at their hands. It has doubtless formed a subject of careful inquiry and analysis, how the uncritical attacks on the British Raj, as such, without particular reference to particular abuses, commenced. That in the various sections of the heterogeneous mass, called the people of India, there still lurks a spirit of disaffection cannot be doubted; fanatics have not ceased out of the land; those who have in the process of change suffered real detriment or imaginary hurt brood on their grievances. Let us add to the really disaffected, the numerous educated natives, who have found it easy to start a journal, but not easy to succeed except by spicy writing, and there is no difficulty in accepting the outcome as necessary, that an evil-speaking brood of small vernacular journals would spring up. These, while carefully keeping within the law of inciting sedition, would find their easiest mode of attaining notoriety and increased circulation in abuse of the ruling powers. Hence it followed that in 1873 the attention of the Government was drawn to passages reproduced from the Halishahar Patrika, which, in the opinion of the Advocate-General, disclosed offences within the meaning of Section 124A of the Penal Code. The Lieutenant-Governor of Bengal then submitted to the Governor General in Council "that there should be a law to punish summarily and severely, without the eclat of a long prosecution for sedition, those who published mischievous and seditious libels on the Government, and to shut up newspapers which are the vehicles of such language." The proprietor and registered printer were too young and too insignificant to be the objects of an elaborate prosecution.

In 1875 two articles in the Amrita Bazar Patrika, justifying the attempt to poison Col. Phayre, were held by the Advocate-General to be punishable. In this case also the Government concluded that in the present state of the law it was not desirable to prosecute, except in the case of systematic attempts to excite hostility against the Government. The same conclusion was come to in the case of an article in the Shivaji in 1877. It is the opinion still of certain high officials that the Government held in the law against seditious libel a sufficient weapon; yet in these important cases, the weapon was found too cumbrous, and the use of it deemed likely to be injurious to the wielder thereof. Can it be doubted that such immunity encouraged mightily the smaller and more venomous vernacular journalists? They seem to have acted like the candidates for the office of coachman who emulated each other in promising to drive as near to the edge of a precipice as was compatible with escaping a fall; they measured the exact line on the verge of sedition. The Indian Government might prefer the men who would keep as far off as was consistent with the straight track of criticism.

Lord Cranbrook, in his masterly despatch, quotes the admirable judicial statement, which sets forth most fully the inalienable rights of a journalist as to criticism of public measures and public men:—

The public journalist is entitled to canvass the acts, the conduct, and the intentions of those who may be intrusted from time to time with the administration of the Government by the Crown. He is entitled to canvass, and, if necessary, to censure those acts. He is entitled to comment on, canvass, and, if necessary, censure the proceedings of Parliament. He is entitled to criticise and condemn the acts of public men. He is entitled to point out any grievances which he may think the people labour under, and argue for their removal, and suggest what remedies may occur to him for the purpose. He is entitled not only to publish, but to comment on, to criticise, and, if necessary, to condemn the conduct of judges and their decisions; nay, more, even the verdicts of juries are not exempt from fair and reasonable criticism.

Such rights belong to the smallest native journal, and no high, we dare to say, no English official of any grade, would do aught to trespass on them. It has been alleged by the opponents of this measure that the denunciations of the native Press were mainly due to the injured pride of officials smarting under acrimonious attacks, who confounded their personal dignity with the Imperial authority. We shall recur to this subject—but, on the face of it, was Lord Northbrook influenced by such representations when announcing his intention of dealing at some future time with the grave difficulties presented by “the question of the tone of the native press, the condition of the law, and the propriety of altering it?” The various high officials whose opinions are given in the Blue-book are fully justified by the extracts quoted, in deploring the growing seditious tone of the vernacular papers. Are officials to be considered thin-skinned and only regardful of their own dignity who object to such comments as these?—“The authorities must make every effort in their power to satisfy themselves that they punish criminals only and not innocent persons. But we cannot say that the authorities under the English rule feel this anxiety. They care more to comply with the technicalities of the law and to get their handsome salaries than to administer true justice.” Are these words criticisms of erroneous charges of a prejudiced judge, or of a technical miscarriage of justice? Rather do they not mean to make the subjects universally, even though blindly, discontented with the Courts of Law, and the administration of justice? Here is a comment on England’s European policy:—“Her abandoning Turkey in the present crisis has proved England to be a selfish and time-serving Power. She loves money more than her own good name; she allows this love of money to exercise an undue influence on her policy towards India.” Two more extracts will content our readers!—“Heaven protect us! Our rulers in these days are like robbers.” “The British Government is continually breaking its promises.” Many of the extracts refer to the English contempt and ill-treatment of the Natives. It is with shame, we must confess, with Mr. Huddleston, that “there is an unfortunate element of truth” in statements in these papers; but the wilfully illogical deduction, from some instances, of a universal contempt, is only equalled by the charges which attribute to our rule, the entire loss by famine. These writers may be obscure; their writings go forth and are read; they lie, but the readers know it not. The latter may have been unconscious of any such wrong, unaware that they were injured. They have believed in the justice and generosity of the hard-working European official; but the wise editor, who speaks to them in print, must know best. Such journals do not throw light on the real feelings of the people any more than our own penny dreadfuls paint a real state of society; but as those noxious publications mislead the imaginative shop boy and convert him into a precocious petty thief, so these vernacular pests may train the peaceful and law-abiding natives into secret disaffection or open sedition; therefore preventive measures must be taken.

We will not review the provisions of the Act. Lord Cranbrook’s judicious amendment, whereby any censorship or correction of proofs is omitted, throws the whole onus on the journalists. It is, indeed, surprising that Lord Lytton should not have remembered Lord Canning’s difficulty, namely, that he would have had to be censor himself. Only one point appears open to grave doubt, that is as to the appeal, or rather want of appeal, from the action of the Local Government. We have confidence, however, that there will be no desire unduly to press the rigour of the law. There will be an appeal, though an informal one, to public opinion, the healthy growth of which will certainly not be impeded by this Act. The measure is not one to gag the public voice, but to silence the utterance of mischievous slander and dangerous “folly and braggadocio;” we may confidently expect that the hope of the Secretary of State will be fully realised:—

I hope that the result of the measure thus limited and guarded will lead the writers in the vernacular journals to examine and expose genuine grievances, instead of indulging in the easier task of general denunciation; and that the improvement which has been noticed in the European and Anglo-Native press may gradually extend to the vernacular newspapers, so that special legislation for any class of publications may be found in no long time to be unnecessary.

Carthage and the Carthaginians. By R. Bosworth Smith, M.A. (London: Longmans and Co., 1878.)

Whatever the view taken of the question of Islam and its founder by those who have been led to make it a study, no impartial critic will fail to accord to the able lecturer on Muhammad and Muhammadanism the credit of producing a readable and remarkable volume in illustration of a theory which does not lack learned and experienced advocates. We go further, and affirm that no better exponent than Mr. Bosworth Smith can well be cited of the reactionary view in favour of Muhammadanism, which has hitherto found but incidental expression in the more modern of polemical writings. In the task then undertaken he brought to his aid careful reading; an evident desire to render justice to his opponents, though ready to anticipate their failure in argument; and a mastery of details, which enabled him to exercise freely and effectually that literary taste and judgment which again shows itself in the volume now before us, if we look merely at its felicitous choice of words and polished as well as pertinent phraseology.

But the lecturer on “Carthage and the Carthaginians” does not show a whit less careful reading and conscientious study in his present work than in the earlier one. The labour has been clearly one of love, for no man could extract from dry details (in the ordinary sense of the expression) so glowing a picture of ancient life and customs without giving himself wholly to the effort, and no man could give himself thus wholly to the effort, were not the details to him the reverse of dry. That his heroes would have been, more or less, pigmies in the face of modern civilisation and appliances, does not shake the patent historical truth that Hamilcar Barca, and Hannibal were, in genius, worthy to hold foremost rank in the nineteenth century, and, consequently, personages far in advance of the age in which they lived. That the conduct of Napoleon’s old guard at Waterloo, cited by Mr. Bosworth Smith—and, let us add, that of our own guards at Inkermann—resemble in their way the devotion of the Carthaginian veterans who withstood Scipio’s Generals at Zama, need not in the least degree weaken our admiration for the ancient record. It is true that the Passage of the Alps, followed by the engagements at the Ticinus and the Trebia, the passage of the Appenines, the battle of Lake Trasimene, and the overthrow of Varro and Æmilius Paulus at Cannæ give a special attraction to the Second Punic War, compared to the remainder of the book; but there is much otherwise of general historical interest; and the author’s comments supply a masterly accompaniment to the narrative.

Carthage is, however, in Africa, and hardly a fitting subject for an Indian Mail. We may not venture to dilate in these columns on its heroes and history; on the Punic wars and struggles with Rome; on Hamilcar and Catulus, or Hannibal and Scipio. Did we linger on over the volume before us, it would be necessary to seek in it some chance topic which has affinity with the Far East. Such, for instance, might be found in the matter of human sacrifices, or the doctrines and beliefs of the old Phœnicians—subtleties which Anglo-Indian antiquarians have striven, ere this, to fathom, but have hitherto rather touched than penetrated. If we are to accept the dictum of Max Müller, neither Bryant, Wilford, Maurice, or Sir William Jones ever succeeded in elucidating the comparative mythology, or cognate questions on which they had so earnestly been engaged; yet their writings are many, their investigations elaborate, and their toil has been immense. The critical tests which alone could have regulated their attempts, and kept them "from running riot," are said to have been wanting. To quote the learned Professor of our own day whose name we have just mentioned, the principles which have, since their time, been established by the students of the Science of Language, were not then known, "and as with words, so with the names of deities, the most treacherous of all Sirens was the only guide in such researches."

Delenda est Carthago is a fiat which will not apply in a literary sense, for some time to come, if ever; and Mr. Bosworth Smith's treatment of the fine old theme should give it renewed life and interest. And we may state, in support of this conclusion, that only on Thursday last, the occasion of Harrow Speech Day, one of the many able literary performances of the students, selected for recitation, was an original English poem bearing the title of "Carthage."

THE MURDER OF MR. COOPER.

TRANSLATION.

Copy of the Foreigner Kassunsing's deposition.

The Foreigner Naick Kassunsing, on being questioned on the 8th labyeegyaer of Tagoo 1240 (24th April, 1878), states: -

I am a Naick, and was so appointed by the predecessors of the Political Agent. On the 6th inst. (B. E.), the jemadar Teepoolain wishing to have his brother promoted as Naique, and the Political Agent listening to the jemadar, fined me Rs. 5 for not keeping proper guard, and assaulted me by pushing and driving me down. Being ashamed, because my character was lowered (lit. name was spoiled), I, with a gun, shot the Political Agent in the breast while he was seated on a chair reading. Not long after, I shot dead also the jemadar Teepoolain and sepoy Teepoo.

R. B. SHAW, Resident at Mandalay.

Simla, May 26th, 1878.

Bhamo, April 24th, 1878.

To the British Resident, Mandalay.

Sir,—It is our painful duty to make the following report of the sad tragedy which has occurred at the British Agency, Bhamo:—

At 9.30 this evening messengers came to the China Inland Mission House in the Mungoon quarter of the city, saying that Mr. Cooper, the jemadar, and one of the guard had been killed. Reverends J. N. Cushing and H. Soltan immediately proceeded to the Woon's residence to make inquiries. He had already sent off the Sitkey and two Nakkaus with men to the agency. The Revs. J. N. Cushing and J. S. Adams immediately started for the agency, and on the way invited the Rev. Mr. Frieday and one of the French priests to accompany them. These four gentlemen, on entering the agency, found Mr. Cooper lying on the drawing-room floor in a pool of blood, where the native doctor had placed him. They also went to the quarters and saw the bodies of the jemadar and the acting sergeant Teepoo lying outside on the ground. These gentlemen forthwith proceeded to collect all the papers which they found lying about, together with the plate, revolver, and some small articles of value, and having placed them in the money-chest pointed out by the agent's Burman writer, locked the chest and sealed it with the seal of the agency which the writer gave them. In the chest also they noticed some bags of money lying. It should also be mentioned that they placed in this chest all the keys which they found on Mr. Cooper's dressing-table. They were unable to do more than this when they were summoned to the Woon. Mr. Adams remained behind to take charge for the time being, as the native doctor, the Burman writer, and others accompanied the gentlemen to the Woon's. On the way Mr. Soltan joined them, and accompanied them to the Woon's, where they saw the murderer bound. The murderer had been sent for by the Woon, and taken away by his officials before the gentlemen arrived at the agency. The Woon caused the man's confession to be read, which he said that he was about to despatch to Mandalay. He told the gentlemen to make such arrangements for the burial of the agent and other matters pertaining to the agency as would be in accordance with the English custom. Accordingly, Messrs. Soltan and Cushing went back to the agency with the native doctor and other people belonging thereto. They caused the body to be washed, but did not further prepare it for burial, as the native doctor wished to make a post-mortem examination to-morrow morning. They first called the two Burman servants, who, at the time of the murder, were in the kitchen at the back of the house. Their names were Moungh Hleh and Moungh Gye. The substance of their testimony was as follows:—At the time of the murder there was no one in the house except Mr. Cooper. They say that the man must have come up the backstairs, although they did not see him enter. They heard the back-door of the dining-room farthest from the drawing-room thrown open violently, and immediately afterwards the report of a gun. They rushed out, and saw the murderer Kassunsing Naick running down the backstairs with a gun in his arms. Mr. Cooper was sitting in the drawing-room in a long chair by the centre table, almost facing the door leading into the dining-room, through which the man had fired at him. The curtain was hanging down across the doorway. The two men having pushed aside the curtain saw him in his blood, and immediately rushed to the native doctor's house. Having called the native doctor, as they were returning with him, and had reached the well, they heard the gun fire which killed the jemadar. After their arrival at the house, they heard the report of the gun that killed Teepoo. They were just in time to see Mr. Cooper give two or three gasps, and then all was over. They then went to look for paper, in order that the native doctor might write to the missionaries, and hearing the murderer calling out below the house, the native doctor told them to shut the doors. They did so, and being terrified, left the house by the back.

The following is the substance of the native doctor's testimony:—At about 8.15 p.m., when I was in my house, I heard a gun fired. Knowing that Mr. Cooper sometimes fired guns at night, I did not think anything of it. I came out of my house and stood by the garden fence, when two Burmese servants came to me, and called out "Master is wounded. Kassunsing has shot him." I immediately hurried to the house, and when passing the well, heard another shot fired, which was the shot that killed the jemadar.

On reaching the staircase a sepoy told me that the jemadar had been shot by the murderer. I came upstairs, and found Mr. Cooper in the drawing-room in a long chair. He was lying back in the chair, quite motionless, but gasped two or three times, and then died. The ball entered the chest just below the right nipple. I put Mr. Cooper on the floor, and sent messengers to the missionaries and the Woon. The Woon sent the Sitkey and other officers, and asked for the murderer, whom I gave up to them. I remained in the house until the arrival of the missionaries, when I accompanied them to the Woon's.

The following is the substance of the testimony given by the guard:—Mohammed Sen was by the well, and saw the murderer go up to the jemadar's house, call him out, and shoot him. He also saw him fall. Say-ka-hammed came out of his house and said, "What is the matter?" He saw the jemadar fall, but did not see the murderer. The jemadar's brother, Abdul Rahim, said the jemadar had been eating rice, and while a woman was washing the dishes, I heard a gun fired off in the bungalow. I said to my brother, a gun has been fired off in the bungalow. Did you hear it? He said nothing, but got up and went down out of the house. I followed him, and saw him shot and fall. The murderer seeing me, immediately raised his gun to shoot me, but the shot missed me, and killed Teepoo, Acting Naick, who was close behind. The murderer then went to the native doctor's house, and called him by name. He also called the doctor's brother and myself, and then went to the guard-house in the north-west corner by the main gate. He placed his gun there, and took a five-chambered revolver. He called a Naick, Mohun Sing, but the man did not come. He then called all the guard, saying, "I don't know what the matter is, whether the Kakhyaens have been firing in the house, or who has been firing." He then went back to the guard-house, and deposited his pistol. He came out again and walked back and forth. Meerbaehr then seized him, and all the guard surrounded him, and placed him in the guard-house and pinioned him. In the guard-house he confessed that he killed Mr. Cooper and the two others. About an hour afterwards the Burman officials came, and the murderer was taken into the custody of the Woon. It was about 8.30 p.m. that the murder was committed.

So far as can be ascertained, the cause of the murder was personal revenge in the case of Mr. Cooper, who had punished him three days ago, inflicting a fine of five rupees, and striking him. Since that time, they say that he has eaten nothing, and spoken to no one until to-night. What grudge there was against the jemadar has not yet been ascertained.

Permission has been given by the Woon for his burial just outside the north gate of the agency compound, where Captain Cooke interred Mr. Graham. After the post-mortem examination to-morrow he will be buried there.

One copy of this report is sent by the Woon's dawk boat with messengers, and another by a private boat.

HOME FOR INEBRIATES.—A small but successful experiment has been made in the case of inebriates by a Calcutta lady. Without waiting for legislation, Miss Leslie has opened a home for inebriates at 19, Canal-street, Entally; it already holds its full complement—fourteen inmates. Were funds forthcoming many lost loafers might be reclaimed; the object is only to be effectually attained by a residence long enough to wean the drunkard from his poisons, by restoring nerve and self-respect; then will follow readmission to situation. The directress wisely advocates patience to her charge, but lays down no hard and fast rule.

OPENING OF THE PUNA EXHIBITION.

PUNA, June 2.—I heard one of the natives in the city exclaim last Saturday evening, "At last the Puna Exhibition is opened." Yes, it was opened; but I have never witnessed such a dull and dreary affair. "Better late than never," says the old adage; but in this case, I am sure, later would have been better. What on earth induced the educated natives of the city of Puna to open such an important institution at this time of the year, when Puna is empty of the leading members of society, when the opening of the Puna season has yet a month to come, and when their Excellencies the Governor and Commander-in-Chief, the members of Council, and the "upper ten" are away at the Hills, I cannot divine. There was no band playing to give éclat to the occasion, and the attendance was very poor. It remains to be proved whether the undertaking will be successful or not. It was at half-past five when our esteemed Judge, Mr. Phillpotts, arrived, shortly after which he delivered a speech in Mahrattee, which, although brief, I am told was an excellent one. He was followed by Mr. Dada Saheb Koorundwarker, and when the speechifying and the ceremonies were over, I observed groups of inquiring minds promenading around the building. The articles exhibited deserve notice and commendation. The specimens of silk manufactured in Bombay and exhibited by the enterprising firm of Messrs. Tapidas Vurjdas and Co. were much admired. The collection of stuffed animals and birds also formed a very pleasing contribution, and the photographs exhibited by Messrs. Rustonjee Jamsetjee and Gungaram Bhaw of Puna, and Mr. Cowasjee Cursetjee of Kirkee, were excellent. The specimens of pottery were from Messrs. Ruttonjee and Co., of Bombay, call for special mention, and among the other articles exhibited were brass table ornaments, specimens of ivory work very neat and elegant, wool-work and cushions, the handiwork of native ladies, embroidery in silk and gold, cotton prints manufactured in India, swords and daggers richly encased, a variety of betul-nut cutters, and earthen curiosities, native medicines, beautiful wooden toys from Gokak, a wonderful collection of earthen toys and figures from Madras, specimens of wallah work, made in the city of Puna, which give a rich odour when dipped in water, miniature mosques manufactured of reed, very pretty, exhibited by Mr. T. Ramchunder of Madras, and a large collection showing the different specimens of Indian grain. As you enter the Puna city Town Hall the eye meets with the life-size portraits (oil paintings) of the Koorundwarker's family, a very faithful likeness of Nana Furnavees, the portrait of Sawae Madhown, the last Peishwa but one, and the portrait of Mr. P. S. Benewallee, a sirdar to the Peishwa. The war implements from Sattara were very striking, and I was much amused at the exhibition of the weapons used by Sewajee in the year A.D. 1659, when at Rajghur he killed Abzool Khan, a sirdar, sent by the King of Bejapoor against Sewajee. The natives would have us to believe that the tiger claws, also exhibited, were the identical ones used by Sewajee on this occasion. The specimens of locks received from Kutch Bhooj and exhibited by Currumsee Keshowjee Lohar, through the Dewan of Kutch, displayed much skill. Ramjee Maistree, of Puna, exhibited two walking sticks (one encasing a sword, and the other answering the purposes of a fowling-piece), which were much admired for their skill and workmanship. The tin cash boxes manufactured in the city of Puna formed another pleasing feature of the Exhibition; but the saddlery exhibited is hardly worth noticing. There were some excellent specimens of cotton from Malwa, for which the Maharaja Holkar of Indor has assigned a prize of Rs. 100. The opening of the Puna City Exhibition of 1878 is no doubt an event in the annals of the Deccan. The city is gradually rising into importance. We have a large population, and evidence around us of affluence if not of great wealth, there are, indeed, visible signs that Puna is growing in trade and influence. —Bombay Gazette Correspondent.

Miscellaneous.

TRANSFER OF ASSAM.—It is said that the proposed re-transfer of Assam to Bengal will not be carried out until Sir S. Bayley has had some experience in the country as a Chief Commissioner.

A MELANCHOLY event is reported from Morai. Lieutenant G. G. Brittan, of the 62nd Regiment, stationed at Morai, shot himself on June 6; the unfortunate officer was temporarily insane.

THE CONVICT RAJAH.—The Indian Mirror says the Rajah of Pooree was quietly landed at Prinsep's Ghaut, Calcutta, on the 25th ult. He was brought up from False Point in a steamer, in charge of an assistant superintendent of police and a number of Cuttack chowkidars. The young man is now kept in the Presidency Jail. It is said he has become quite reconciled to his fate.

CHOLERA has broken out at Agra. The battery of artillery went into camp four miles from the cantonment on Sunday morning, the 2nd inst. The first case occurred on Friday morning, the second on Saturday, and a third on Saturday night; of these three case one was fatal. There have been no cases in camp, and none yet among the riflemen. A lady died on Saturday morning. There have been cases in the city and the suburbs. Four or five orphans in St. Peter's Asylum have been carried off.

OUTBREAK IN BARISAL JAIL.—The Englishman states that there was a somewhat serious outbreak in the Barisal Jail in the afternoon of June 1st. According to our correspondent's account of the affair, twelve or fifteen of the convicts succeeded in breaking open the jail gates and forcing their way out, after a struggle with the sentries, one of whom they wounded. A body of the reserve police on duty in the jail pursued them closely, and brought them to bay, when a fight ensued, in which three of the convicts were killed, and several wounded, one of whom died the same night. The emeute is attributed to dissatisfaction on the part of the prisoners, owing to certain orders which had been passed by the officer in charge of the jail.

LLOYD'S GARDEN.—Mr. William Lloyd of Darjeeling has just made a useful gift to the station. A public garden for Darjeeling was a want which has been much felt for years, but the Municipality was too poor to purchase land for the purpose. The only suitable land, both in extent and position, belonged to Mr. Lloyd, and when he became aware of the public wish and want, he generously presented it to the station. Sir Ashley Eden has written to Mr. Lloyd thanking him for the gift, and suggesting that the garden to be laid out on the land should be called Lloyd's Garden, to commemorate among future generations the memory of himself and of his uncle, the late General Lloyd, the founder of the sanitarium.

NATIONAL INDIAN ASSOCIATION.—The Committee of the Bengal Branch of the National Association is desirous of extending the sphere of its usefulness by setting on foot some practical work. The cause of female education being in its opinion the most pressing, the committee has determined to take that up. The various methods which it proposes to adopt are as follows:—1. The introduction, as soon as practicable, of the "Kinder-garten" [literally children's garden] system in infant schools. 2. The provision of scholarships and prizes for girls' schools. 3. A system of periodical inspection of such schools. 4. The collections of diagrams, maps, pictures, and other educational apparatus, including magic lanterns, for the use and amusement of girls' schools and kindred institutions. 5. The organisation of a staff of Zenana teachers, unconnected with missionary work. 6. The institution of a system of examination for Zenana schools. 7. The examination of the school and reading books now in use, and the preparation and publication of more suitable ones when required.—Times of India.

THE GAYA RAILWAY.—It is rumoured that the Gaya line will be extended to Nagpur via Shahar ghati. This scheme will shorten the distance by rail very considerably between Calcutta and Bombay, besides relieving the Jubulpur line of a great portion of the enormous goods traffic to and from Bengal. We also learn that a new embankment is under construction on that section of the line from Jahanabad to Gaya, the cart-road remaining available for ordinary traffic, and every exertion will be made to complete the line to Jahanabad, from Bankipore, without delay, so as to do away with the great inconvenience which is at present experienced, in consequence of the main thoroughfare having been taken up for the new line of railway. Coolie labour is plentiful, and wages have not ranged so low in the districts of Patna and Gaya since Sir Richard's sensational famine arrangements a few years ago; consequently the contractors should be in a position to push on rapidly with the work, and at the same time clear a handsome profit out of the undertaking. It is further stated that extensive buildings will be erected at Bankipore for the accommodation of the Head Quarters of the Tirhoot (State) Railway, and Gaya Railway. At present the offices of the Engineering staff, Account Branch, &c., are at Dinapur.—Behar Herald.

HERAT AND THE FRONTIER.—An occasional correspondence of the Times writes from Aleppo, under date June 27, that the line of country commanding the northern approaches to Herat has been for the first time surveyed by a British officer—Captain Butler, of the 9th Regiment. The Tekeli and Akhal tribes of Turkestan, with whom he has passed several months, occupy the valleys supplying that great fortress with provisions and water, and the mountain ranges acting as a bulwark against the advance of an army from the north threatening Afghanistan and British India. Those valleys and mountains have been hitherto a blank in our maps; but thanks to this dashing, adventurous expedition of Captain Butler, whose indefatigable perseverance amid frequent dangers, privations, and sickness has never flagged, we shall now be possessed of data on which to settle the vexed question of the security of our Indian frontier and to facilitate measures for its defence if ever attacked. The collection of such valuable additions to geographical and political knowledge has taken a year of arduous labour, the results of which will doubtless be most justly appreciated in England, and it is not too much to expect that the return of Captain Butler will be hailed with that universal applause which has of late welcomed home the pioneers of exploration in other regions. Among the results will be found the discovery of the source of the river Attreck, which has been found far away from where it was supposed to be, and a careful survey of a gorge, as yet ignored, leading northwards from the Kuren-Dagh range, and practicable for artillery.

INDIAN FEUDATORIES.—It would be wrong to leave out the young chief of Ulwar from the list of those who, in view of the European difficulty, promptly offered their services to the Indian Government. As soon as he saw that Indian troops had been ordered on foreign service, his Highness the Maharao Rajah requested Dr. French Mullen, in charge of the Agency, to telegraph to Major Bradford the offer of three hundred sepoy and two hundred sowars; his Highness promising to pay the cost of drilling his contingent to the proper standard, as well as the cost of keep so long as the services of his troop might be wanted. His Highness wrote, moreover, to Major Bradford, regretting that it was not within his power to offer a larger contingent. The Maharao Rajah of Ulwar was installed, as our readers know, toward the end of last year, and so far has quite fulfilled the fair promise of his minority. Lately, for some months past, indeed, he has been keeping up a relief camp, in which there are four thousand people; and in a day or two will be opening a relief work—facts which, with his ready loyalty, speak well for the young chief, more especially as he got little or no revenue from the last kharif, and but little from the Rabi; he has even been obliged to borrow some lakhs for current expenses. The army of Ulwar, by-the-bye, consists of 2,000 cavalry, 5,500 infantry, 10 field and 290 other guns, and 300 artillery.

RAILWAY BRIBERY CASE.—The hearing of what is familiar to the public as the Railway Bribery Case was again proceeded with on the 5th June at the Girgaum Police Court, the two prisoners, Mr. C. H. Dewey, late Goods Agent of the G. I. P. Railway, and his head-clerk, Janardhan Narayan, being charged with receiving bribes, and the latter also with abetment. The first witness, Anundjee Narpall, stated in evidence that he gave the native prisoner fifty rupees to be paid to Mr. Dewey for waggons, as he heard that they could not be obtained without being paid for. The witness also said that he did not tell Janardhan "actually to pay" the money to Mr. Dewey and could not say that it ever found its way to his pocket. Altogether, witness paid to Janardhan Rs. 102, the amount of the payments being entered in a book, and debited to his constituents. The consignment clerk, Narayan Krishna, who is one of several railway servants arrested in connection with the alleged frauds, also gave evidence for the prosecution. He said that before the pressure of grain traffic last June he distributed the waggons to merchants at Carnac Bunder. Mr. Dewey stopped him from doing this, and said he was not to give out any waggons except under his (Dewey) orders. The instructions at first were verbal, but after a time the waggons were distributed according to chits or notes from Mr. Dewey, or lists signed by him. The case was again adjourned, but before the Court rose, Mr. Branson, counsel for the prosecution, presented another information against Mr. Dewey, laid by a muddadum of the firm of Leeladhar Javerchund, who says that he paid Rs. 40 for waggons. Upon the application of the railway company a summons was granted against Havorna, who is stated to be in Madras.

SIMLA GAETIES.—As a show of dresses and uniforms the late State Ball at Peterhoff has perhaps never been excelled. Ladies spared no pains to adorn themselves attractively, and the dresses were in most instances low enough to satisfy even our most Gracious Majesty, whose own shoulders are said to be still fair to behold. Then the men came in all variety of colour, from the brightest of canary yellow and sky-blue to the dull black claw-hammer of the period. Of this latter few were visible; and the non-officials and non-political civilian element were conspicuously absent. The taller poppies of the State in good coats (trimmed here and there with a little dark blue) and white knee continuations and stockings, produced the usual profound effect on those who contemplated them for the first time; and one young lady, whose curiosity overcame her discretion, almost had a fit when, on passing the gentlemen's cloak-room, there appeared inside what she believed to be an individual bereft of his outer nether garment. The Court uniform is a difficult one to look well in; but no Indian official (except perhaps poor Lord Mayo) ever carried himself more gracefully therein, and to the manner born, than the present Lieutenant-Governor of the Punjab. Lady Lytton, I noticed, wore the new Order for Ladies—a small riband bow of light blue, fringed with diamonds, fastened to the top of the dress on the left. In the long, narrow, low room set apart for dancing the crowd was too great to permit of much movement, except now and then a spasmodic revolution on one's own axis, at the risk of torn skirts and battered elbows. Later on, when the sight-seers had adjourned to supper, the dancers had a better chance; and when the band played the National Anthem, at two o'clock, there was more than one regret that the evening had passed so quickly. The house is not adapted for large assemblies, and it is difficult to invest a State ceremonial with much dignity where one is so cramped for room. Yet the entertainment was generally pronounced a brilliant success, and the guests carried with them, I am sure, pleasing recollections of this, the opening Ball of the Simla season.—Correspondent of the Pioneer.

THE MARRIAGE OF THE MAHARAJAH OF MYSOR.

The Madras Times correspondent supplies a brief account of the above ceremonial:—The ceremonies preceding the actual wedding commenced on the 23rd May, on which date the rite of purification was performed by a Brahman Priest of the tri-marked sect, which consisted in branding both arms of the bride and bridegroom with a heated-silver stamp of some device. On the 25th, the Rajah was seen to leave the Palace by a side entrance about five p.m., dressed in a long white coat, unshod, and bearing a staff with a small pot of boiled rice suspended from one hand, representing a devotee on a pilgrimage to Benares, with a view to leading the life of an ascetic. One attendant only accompanied him, holding an umbrella over his head. Thus they walked over a space of ground overlaid with cloth, measuring about 150 yards, and entered an octagonal-domed pandal, facing the Palace, splendidly decorated, which was supposed to supply the place of a resting station. Here his Highness was met by the nearest relatives and friends of the bride, who prayed and solicited that he should forego such a project, as it was quite inexpedient and disadvantageous to one of his high position, whereas, if he desisted from adopting such a course he would enjoy all he could of the pleasures of this life, become the companion of a lovin wife, parent of a family, &c. The Rajah, ultimately consenting to their wishes, returned to the palace in the same way as he left it. Crowds of people assembled to witness this scene.

On the 26th May last, some little while before the nuptial ceremonies of the Maharajah took place, he left the Palace by a side entrance, facing a temple. He was seated in a State palanquin, and was carried in procession through the principal streets of the Fort, which were graced with triumphal arches. A native band from Tanjor, reputed for its excellence, preceded the palanquin, playing all the way; the instruments were richly ornamented with silver and gold. A portion of the Mysor Horse was in attendance, both before and behind. Most of the native officers of the Commission followed. The concourse of people accompanying the procession was so dense that order was scarcely maintained. Another portion of the Mysor Horse and Infantry was drawn up in review order in the open square facing the Palace; and the procession, on its return, halted at the main entrance, when his Highness alighted from the palanquin and proceeded to the courtyard within, and took his seat on a magnificent silver muntap, constructed for the occasion. The court was decorated in good taste, and a beautiful fountain was playing over a neatly arranged circle of flower pots. The bride now made her appearance, covered from head to foot with cloth of gold, entirely veiled, and seated herself on the left side of the bridegroom. Soon after the Chief Commissioner and European officers of the Commission arrived, when a salute of thirteen guns was fired. They took their seats in the order previously arranged for them. In front of the muntap was an earthen pot containing fire, fed with sundel wood, ghee, &c., according to wonted custom. The officiating priest now proceeded with the ceremonies, by reciting certain forms of prayers and gesticulating at intervals; the prayers ended, the bridegroom placed around the neck of the bride a golden circlet richly manufactured, called a thabi, which has been estimated to have cost a thousand rupees. This part of the ceremony was announced by a salute of twenty-one guns. The next step in the proceedings was the tying together, by the priest, of the ends of the clothing of the contracting parties, and, thus united, they were made to walk around the pot of fire three times, after which they resumed their seats on the muntap. The ceremonies ended here. The guests now arose and paid their respects and congratulations to their Highnesses. Mr. Gordon, the Chief Commissioner, was the bearer of a congratulatory telegram from Lord Lytton; it was now read, and the several presents sent by his Excellency to the bride and bridegroom delivered. This act was honoured by an Imperial salute of thirty-one guns. Return presents to Lord Lytton from their Highnesses, consisting of a costly necklet and bracelet, were handed to Mr. Gordon. Beautiful garlands of flowers were then placed around the necks of the principal guests, and gold coins distributed to the natives. The bride and bridegroom now retired, and presented themselves before the Dowager Maharanee (who was seated behind a purdah witnessing the proceedings) in a prostrate position, and received her blessings. The Chief Commissioner and officers left immediately, under a salute of thirteen guns. Sixty-seven prisoners were unconditionally released from the Mysor Jail, after their being informed why they were thus liberated, viz., in honour of the Maharajah's marriage.

Miscellaneous.

SHOT AND SHELL.—Fourteen tons of shot and shells forwarded from the arsenal at Bellary lately arrived at the Salt Cotaour Station, for the Grand Arsenal, Madras. They are intended to be shipped by the first opportunity to one of the ports on the coast which is being put into a state of defence.

THANKS TO VOLUNTEERS.—The Athenaeum is informed that an official letter from the Inspector-General of Ordnance and Magazines was on the 6th ult. read to the artificers of the Gun-Carriage Manufactory by Colonel Kerrich, thanking the men who have offered their services to accompany the Expedition to Malta, and informing them that should another Indian contingent be sent up, seven of those who first volunteered themselves will be called out for active service.

GENERAL HOSPITAL.—The Madras Government in April last telegraphed to the Secretary of State for India to engage a Head Nurse for the General Hospital, on a stipend of from £100 to £120 a year, with a free passage out, and free passage back, in the event of failure in health. We now hear that intimation has been received in Madras that a selection from St. Bartholomew's Hospital, London, has been made, and that the head nurse is expected to arrive here by the next in-coming mail steamer.

LOCUSTS v. RAILWAYS.—On the 13th May a very large number of locusts settled on a portion of the Madras line of railway, covering the metals for some distance. A passing train crushed some thousands of them, and the glutinous substance from their bodies rendered the rails so slippery that the wheels refused to take the metals, and the engine had to be brought to a standstill, and the wheels and metals cleaned before the train could proceed. The train which followed was also detained by the same cause.

THE MAHARATTA OCULIST.—Some two months ago we informed our readers of a Maharatta oculist having arrived from Bombay, and made some marvellous cures among the natives of Madras in restoring sight to the blind and purblind. The man is said to have almost made his fortune in this Presidency. Ere his departure from Madras he was entertained by an opulent Mohammedan merchant in Armenian-street, and was handsomely rewarded for the unremitting care and attention paid to the merchant's wife, in having restored her sight. We learn from a correspondent that the oculist is now at Rangoon, where he has distinguished himself by operating on a Burmese man, stone-blind, and effected the desired cure in almost a couple of hours.—Madras Times.

MADRAS EXECUTIVE COMMITTEE.—The periodical statement of the Madras Executive Committee, dated June 1, says that most lamentable accounts are received from the Local Committees and officers of Government of ravages committed by locusts and grasshoppers. Many of these are young, in their wingless state, which shows that the swarms reported some months ago have bred, a contingency which was feared. The Salem and Coimbatore districts are those most affected. The authorities are using means to check the ravages of these insect pests, but meanwhile serious and wide-extending damage is being done. The charge brought against the Roman Catholic priests in the North Arcot district, of misappropriating relief funds, has been fully shown to be false. The native official Jubba Rodd, who made the speech at a public meeting imputing such baseness, has been compelled to tender his retraction and apology to Fathers Bacon and Darras. The reports from the agencies to the Madras Committee still urge the need of relief. Thus at Condavade the need for relief seems as great now as it has been any time within the last eight months. From Vizagapatam the Right Rev. J. M. Tirso reports, "During my pastoral tour I had the opportunity to ascertain that famine is not yet at an end." The approaching sowing season will be, for many cultivators, a very trying one, if the Committee do not come to their assistance, for they have sold their bullocks, and even their sowing implements during the famine.

INDIAN SURVEY DEPARTMENT.—The recent telegraphic determinations of longitude executed by the Indian Survey Department have resulted in the geodetical connection of Madras Observatory, the pivot on which the whole fabric of Indian triangulation rests, with Aden and Suez, and hence with Greenwich, the link or section between Greenwich and Suez having been carefully measured during the observations of the Transit of Venus in 1874. The result of this measurement is to establish a new value for Madras Observatory (80 deg. 14 min. 51 sec. E. of Greenwich), which will thus affect all Indian meridians, and which will have, theoretically, the effect of moving India 2,000 feet or so further from England. The Indian Government have it in contemplation to establish a further geodetical connection with Australia (Adelaide), using for the purpose the cable from Madras, via Penang and Singapore to Batavia, thence the land line, about 480 miles, to Banjiwanji, thence the cable to Port Darwin, and from that point the land line across the continent to Port Adelaide. These telegraphic determinations of longitude are most valuable as checks upon trigonometrical and astronomical values, and in the interests of geography we hope that they may be the precursors of similar operations, by which San Francisco on the one side, and the Russian stations on the Pacific on the other, may be brought into connection with the European geodetical systems.

STATION TALK.

MUSCAT, May 23.—The Gulf is at present patrolled by a single vessel of war, while India annually pays into the Imperial Exchequer a large sum for the service rendered. On the abolition of the Indian Navy H.M.'s Government contracted to guard our interests in these waters for a consideration. They engaged to maintain a Gulf squadron consisting of three gun vessels of the Royal Navy; but like all other engagements with India England's interests rather than that of India had profited by the transaction. Seldom, indeed, have we had the full complement of vessels on the station, and when it has been so on paper one of the vessels has either been recruiting at some Indian Port or been docked for repairs. It is no exaggeration to say that for the sum paid H.M.'s Government India might have maintained three vessels on this station, and the service would have been more efficient than it is at present with Royal Naval vessels. It is no disparagement to the British Navy to say so. The climate for six months in the year is deadly to the European constitution. With the thermometer indicating 106 and 110, and with occasional blasts from the desert, men are prostrated and rapidly invalided. If invalided for the preservation of life they are carried home at the expense of the State; if invalided for the preservation of health they must pay half the fare, and this without any corresponding advantage. Formerly the chances of occasionally taking a slaver compensated in some measure for the hardships of the Gulf service, but of late years even this uncertain compensation has altogether ceased, the Arabs having found the trade unprofitable owing to the vigilance of H.M.'s Cruisers on the East African Station; some compensation, and I should say material compensation, ought to be given the Blue Jackets for guarding these waters, or they should not be required to undertake the service.—A serious and unfortunate accident nearly deprived a gentleman here of life; three gentlemen were seated at an open window in the British India agency, watching the target practice of one of the port garrisons. The target was in line with the window and observing a soldier in a recumbent position adjusting his match and directly covering the target and window, Mr. Maguire, the senior partner of Messrs. W. J. Towell and Co., Agent B.I.S.N. Co., and Mr. Walker, Paymaster H.M.S. Arab, R.N., moved away. A young man, a recent arrival and junior partner of the aforesaid firm (Mr. Spriggen) kept his seat, however, and the bullet entered his leg within a few inches of his hip and passed out in close proximity to the spine. A medical man was soon in attendance and pronounced the patient not to be in danger of his life. He is rapidly recovering and will soon be convalescent. It was purely an accident, but the soldier is in durance vile at present.—The Arab is in harbour, her crew are suffering from the heat, which is very oppressive just now.—Bombay Gazette.

Miscellaneous.

POONA INSTITUTE.—An influential meeting was held at Poona on June 11th, to concert measures to secure an eligible building site and arrange details for the proposed Albert Edward Institute. Col. Pottinger was in the chair.

PUBLIC BUILDINGS.—The Secretary of State has, the Gazette understands, sanctioned the expenditure of Rs. 1,94,060 in excess of the original estimate (viz. Rs. 14,07,261) for the completion of the buildings of the High Court and Small Cause Court at Bombay.

SIR PHILIP WODEHOUSE.—To the indignant astonishment of everybody in the Bombay Presidency, says the Bombay Gazette, the name of Sir Philip Wodehouse, late Governor of Bombay, has been omitted from the list of honours for Indian officials contained in the Gazette issued on the Queen's birthday. Sir Philip's conduct as Governor of Bombay was the principal cause of any successful policy at all being carried out during the late famine.

MISSING.—The Bombay Gazette gives the following gratifying intelligence that Mr. Fuller, the "missing gentleman," accounts of whose disappearance have been given in the Madras papers, and whose conduct has been the source of much anxiety to the district police lately, has turned up all safe. He seems to have gone off by himself, without saying a word to anyone, for another village, where he has been staying quietly with a friend.

HEALTH OF BOMBAY.—According to the Times of India, the extraordinarily high rate of mortality in Bombay during the past year is engaging considerable attention at the present time. From eternis recently issued it appears that whereas in 1876 the deathrate was 32.55 per thousand of the population, an unusually high figure, last year it rose to 52.00 per 1,000. The deaths from cholera alone numbered 2,550, whilst in the previous twelve months there were only 378.

THE KHOJAS.—We take the following details of the murder of the Mookie of the Khojas from the Times of India:—For some time past there have been dissensions amongst the Khoja community, some of whom refused to recognise Aga Khan as the head of the caste. One of the malcontents, named Kelloo, who had been prosecuted at the police-court and fined for assaulting some of the orthodox Khojas, decided to wreak his vengeance on Hassumbhoy Goolamhussun, the mookie, to whom the decision of caste questions affecting the Khojas was left. He stabbed the mookie as the latter was leaving his house, and death ensued very shortly afterwards. In consequence of this it was feared that a collision would take place between the two parties, but owing to the arrangements made by the police, that was prevented. The murderer is in custody, and after the coroner's inquest will be committed for trial. The Times telegram states that the murderer of the leader of the Khojahs has been convicted and sentenced to death.

FATAL JUMP INTO A WELL.—A Coroner's inquest has been held at Upper Colaba on view of the body of Robert Don, a Gunner of the 8th Brigade, at present stationed at the Colaba barracks. Deceased had been suffering from dyspepsia, and he was accordingly treated at the Station Hospital by Surgeon-Major James Land, who in his evidence stated that deceased frequently complained of restlessness. He abruptly left the hospital, and went to see his brother in the neighbouring barracks. He complained to him of sleeplessness, but was persuaded to return to the hospital. He was taken back to the hospital, but some time after he disappeared. It was subsequently ascertained that deceased had jumped into a well close to the Colaba Lighthouse. Upon the evidence adduced the jury returned a verdict that the death of the deceased was caused by shock, the result of injuries received by jumping into a well whilst in a state of temporary insanity.—Times of India.

BORNEO COMPANY.—A local authority, the Sarawak Gazette, does not seem to entertain very sanguine ideas as to the success of the company under Baron Overbeck, which has lately obtained such large concessions in Northern Borneo. The difficulties before the country can be brought into a peaceable state are certainly considerable. There are, firstly, the numerous Pangerans, or nobles, to be won over. These, though nominally the viceroys and agents of the Sultan, do not acknowledge his authority, and are practically independent. A concession which lacks their sanction is wanting in most of its most essential ratifications. Then the people are by no means all a law-abiding peaceful race. There are tribes such as the Bajaus who recognise no suzerain, and who will hardly sit down quiet and see their liberties and rights signed away by a potentate whose authority they defy. Had the enterprise been contented for the present with a single settlement, say in Kimanis Bay, as a base of operations, got the surrounding country well in hand, and given subordinates a chance of gaining experience in their new and varied duties, extension might afterwards have been a comparatively easy matter. To rule such a large tract of country with its varied races, a number of experienced men would be required, and these are not always to be had.—Bombay Gazette.

SINDH MODEL FARM.—A new industry is springing up in Sindh, under the auspices of the Superintendent of the Government Model Farm at Salaru, in the shape of vine-growing. Mr. Strachan reports that in the garden attached to the farm there are in full fruiting order some twelve varieties of English vines, all of which do well, and produce fruit far superior to that obtained from any of the native varieties. The black Hamburg variety does not colour well, but the flavour is good. With the view of trying to improve the colour, a liberal supply of charcoal was dug into the borders last year and this spring. The Muscat varieties do very well, and he thinks there would be no great difficulty in starting a trade in raisins of no mean quality. Last season, in drying some of the best Muscat grapes for seed, he had about half a pound of raisins of quite as good flavour and appearance as any muscatels. The natives are going in strong for vine culture in the neighbourhood, and the supply of young plants has not yet been equal to the demand, and from the number of new gardens springing up all round, there is little likelihood of the number of indents on the nursery stock falling off for some time to come.

SHIKARRING ACCIDENTS.—A correspondent writing to the Times of India from Ahmednuggur on the 29th June says:—"One of those shikarring accidents that so often have to be recounted at this season of the year had just occurred here. Majors Barras and Sandwith and Mr. Francis, of the 15th N.L., when out for a few days' shooting about twenty miles from this station, drove a panther from a hill where he had established himself, down some distance into the plain below. The gentlemen followed it up, and, coming to some cactus bushes among which the panther was believed to have taken refuge, sat down in the shade of the bushes. One of their shikarrees was looking at the "pugs," when the panther suddenly sprang from the bushes upon the man, mauled him severely, and then came round the bushes to where the gentlemen were resting. The panther sprang upon Major Barras, and bit him severely in the right arm, but was driven off by a shot from Major Sandwith; which took effect rather far back. The panther then made off, and was followed up by Major Sandwith and Mr. Francis. It suddenly charged them from another clump of bushes; but both gentlemen had time to fire, and both their shots hit the panther fairly as it charged. This, however, did not stop the beast, which charged home and seized Major Sandwith by the calf of the leg, rolling him over into a small nullah, still biting him about the leg. Mr. Francis then rushed up and killed the panther while on Major Sandwith; its teeth were still in his leg when it died. Both the wounded officers arrived in camp this morning and are doing well; but Major Sandwith's wounds are very severe. —Pioneer.

LORD CRANBROOK'S DESPATCH.

A Blue-book has been published containing a copy of Correspondence between the Government of India and the Secretary of State for India on the subject of Act IX. of 1878—"An Act for the better Control of Publications in Oriental Languages." The following is the latest despatch in the volume, addressed by Lord Cranbrook to the Governor-General of India in Council :—

India Office, London, May 31.—My Lord,—I have received from your Excellency an authentic copy of an Act "For the better Control of Publications in Oriental Languages," which was passed by your Council for making Laws and Regulations on March 14, 1878, and which has subsequently been assented to by your Excellency. I have also received your Excellency's despatch (No. 23 of 1878, Judicial Department), dated April 18, 1878, and a copy of your Legislative Proceedings for March 14, which contain an abstract of the debate on the above enactment in your Legislative Council. These last-mentioned documents give a full account of the history of the measure and of the reasons which led your Excellency to submit it to the Council for making Laws and Regulations. It was carried through all its stages at a single sitting, but it appears to have been previously the subject of much discussion in your Executive Council, and of much confidential correspondence with the Local Governments.

2. The reasons for the measure are shortly stated in its preamble. It is there affirmed that "Certain Publications in Oriental languages, printed or circulated in British India, have of late contained matter likely to excite disaffection to the Government established by law in British India, or antipathy between persons of different races, castes, religions, or sects in British India, or have been used as a means of intimidation or extortion." It is added that "Such publications are read by and disseminated among large numbers of ignorant and unintelligent persons, and are thus likely to have an influence which they otherwise would not possess," and it is declared to be "necessary for the maintenance of the public tranquillity, and for the security of her Majesty's subjects and others, that power should be conferred on the Executive Government to control the printing and circulation of such publications."

3. The Statement of Objects and Reasons, which was appended to the Bill on its introduction into the Legislative Council, gives the following account of the system of control by which the measure now before me endeavours to secure the ends to which it is directed :—

(1.) The magistrate may, with the previous sanction of the Local Government, require the printer or publisher of any vernacular newspaper to enter into a bond binding himself not to print or publish in such newspaper anything likely to excite feelings of disaffection to the Government, or antipathy between persons of different races, castes, religions, or sects, and not use such paper for purposes of extortion. The magistrate may further require the amount of this bond to be deposited in money or securities.

(2.) If any newspaper (whether bond has been taken in respect of it or not) at any time contains any matter of the description just mentioned, or is used for the purposes of extortion, the Local Government may warn such newspaper, by a notification in the Gazette, and if, in spite of such warning, the offence is repeated, the Local Government may then issue its warrant to seize the plant, &c., of such newspaper, and when any deposit has been made, may declare such deposit forfeited.

(3.) As the provisions regarding the deposit of security and the forfeiture of the deposit would, perhaps, be found to press unduly on some of the less wealthy newspaper proprietors, clauses have been inserted enabling the publisher of a newspaper to take his paper out of the operation of this portion of the Act for such time as he pleases, by undertaking to submit his proof to an officer appointed by the Government before publication, and to publish nothing which such officer objects to.

4. I observe that there is a certain degree of correspondence between the first set of provisions and those of the English Acts of Parliament (60 Geo. III., c. 9, s. 8, et seq., 1 Wm. IV., c. 73, s. 2) which required printers and publishers of newspapers to execute a bond in a pecuniary sum to the Crown, the condition of the obligation being that every printer or publisher should pay any fine or penalty adjudged against him for a blasphemous or seditious libel, and any damages or costs recovered against him in an action for libel. Such bonds appear, in fact, to have been executed by printers and publishers of newspapers in this country down to so late a date as 1869. The second set of provisions answer with some closeness to Sections 30, 31, and 32 of the "Peace Preservation (Ireland) Act, 1870," 33 Vic., c. 9, from which statute the form of warning given in the Indian enactment seems to have been copied.

5. Your Excellency in your address to the Legislative Council has given expression to your regret that the duty has been imposed upon you of placing restrictions on a portion of the Press in India. The same feeling was expressed by the member of your Council who introduced the Bill, and by other speakers in the debate which followed its introduction. I strongly share this regret. I do not conceal from myself that the political system and institutions of British India must for an indefinite period of time exhibit material differences from those established in this country. I do not, again, forget that when the system of licensing newspapers formerly existing in India was abolished in 1835 the authors of that measure dwelt on the insignificance of the native press as one reason for considering their legislation to be prudent and safe; and I know that the native press of India has long since ceased to be insignificant. So large a part, however, of the great benefits which the British Government has conferred on her Majesty's subjects in India has consisted in the establishment of institutions more or less resembling those of this country that I cannot but hear with pain of a necessity having arisen for the even partial withdrawal of one of these institutions, and one so highly prized by Englishmen as the liberty of the Press.

But your Excellency and every one of the speakers in your Council for making Laws and Regulations have affirmed in earnest language the political necessity for this measure, especially at the present time. You state that it has been framed with the unanimous assent of all the members of your Executive Council. You say that it has the approval of all the Local Governments administering portions of India in which the Vernacular Press has any importance. It appears to have been passed by the Legislative Council without a dissentient voice, the non-official members of the Council, including the Maharajah Jotindra Mohan Tagore, uniting with the official members in their support of it. Her Majesty's advisers could not recommend her to disallow a measure seconded by such a weight of local authority, save under extreme circumstances, and with the greatest hesitation and reluctance. But, independently of the authority justly due to those immediately responsible for the public safety in India, I am bound to say that a strong case appears to be established for the further control of the class of newspapers at which the Act is aimed. I have carefully examined the extracts from Vernacular journals on which your Excellency, in your address to the Legislative Council, relies for the justification of the proposed enactment. The writers of these passages condemn the British Government of India, not for specific faults which might be corrected, but for characteristics which are among the conditions of its existence, such as the British origin of many or most of the persons who direct it. They hint at its feebleness, at the numerical inferiority of the forces on which it depends to the masses of the Indian population, and at a supposed decay of spirit in the nation from which it proceeds. It is scarcely necessary to look to the peculiar circumstances of India for the grounds on which such language may be pronounced to be intolerable. A judicial statement of the law, cited during the discussion in your Legislative Council, shows that many of these extracts do not even satisfy the tests of what is permissible to a journalist under the settled constitution of England :—

"The public journalist is entitled to canvass the acts, the conduct, and the intentions of those who may be entrusted from time to time with the administration of the Government by the Crown. He is entitled to canvass, and, if necessary, to censure those acts. He is entitled to comment on, canvass, and, if necessary, to censure the proceedings of Parliament. He is entitled to criticise and condemn the acts of public men. He is entitled to point out any grievances which he may think the people labour under, and argue for their removal, and suggest what remedies may occur to him for the purpose. He is entitled not only to publish, but to comment on, to criticise, and, if necessary, to condemn the conduct of judges and their decisions; nay, more, even the verdicts of juries are not exempt from fair and reasonable criticism." I have told you within what limits a journalist may exercise his opinion and his talents; but I should tell you also the things which he is not permitted by law to do. He must respect the existence of the form of Government under which he enjoys and exercises those very extensive rights and privileges to which I have referred. A public journalist must not, either covertly or openly, devote the pages of his journal to overthrow the Government. He must not sow disaffection and discontent generally throughout the land. He may, as I said, comment on the acts of the Government, and criticise them severely; he may, as I said, canvass and criticise proceedings in courts of justice, and the conduct and demeanour of the judges who preside; but he must not devote his journal to the purpose of bringing the administration of the law generally into contempt, and exciting the hatred of the people against the law; neither can he legally devote the pages of his journal to excite animosities between different classes of Her Majesty's subjects.

7. The Criminal Law repressive of seditious libel in British India is contained in a section of the India Penal Code (124a), which, though framed by the Indian Law Commissioners, was not added to that body of law till 1870 :—

"Whoever by words either spoken or intended to be read, or by signs, or by visible representation, or otherwise, excites, or attempts to excite, feelings of disaffection for the Government established by law in British India, shall be punished with transportation for life, or for any term, to which fine may be added, or with imprisonment for a term which may be extended to three years, to which fine may be added, or with fine." Under the scheme of this Code the following "explanation" is added to the above provision.

"Such a disapprobation of the measures of the Government as is compatible with a disposition to render obedience to the lawful authority of the Government, and to support the lawful authority of the Government against unlawful attempts to subvert or resist that authority, is not disaffection. Therefore, the making of comments on the measures of the Government, with the intention of exciting only this species of disapprobation, is not an offence within this clause."

8. As is stated in the third and following paragraphs of your despatch of April 18, my predecessor in office drew the attention of the Government of India to certain articles in a vernacular newspaper which appeared to justify the attempt to poison Col. Phayre at Baroda; and, after remarking on the evil effects of such publications, Lord Salisbury left it to the Government of India to decide whether the above provisions of the Indian Penal Code should be brought to bear upon them. Lord Northbrook's Government, after consultation with the Advocate-General, came to the conclusion that it was not desirable to institute prosecutions under the criminal law, since it appeared to them by no means certain how the provisions of the Penal Code would be construed in court, and they thought that "a prosecution, even if successful, would occasion greater public excitement than the occasional publication of such attacks." This decision seems to have been in harmony with the opinion of Sir George Campbell, who, as Lieutenant-Governor of Bengal, had stated that "a prosecution would probably involve an amount of litigation and scandal that would make the cure worse than the disease." At the same time, Lord Northbrook's Government announced its intention of expressing its views at some future time on the grave difficulties presented by "the questions of the tone of the native press, of the condition of the law, and of the propriety of altering it." Lord Northbrook having, however, retired from the Government shortly after this correspondence, the consideration of its subject appears to have been resumed by your Excellency, and I gather from the observations addressed to the Legislative Council by your learned Advocate-General that he has again advised your Excellency against prosecuting, under the penal code, the writers of the class of seditious libels which you desire to suppress. It would appear from the speech of the mover of the Bill, from your own remarks in Council, and from the 10th paragraph of your despatch of April 18, that you think the provisions of the Penal Code sufficient as a general law of seditious libel, but that you have been led to doubt whether an attempt to apply it to the special description of attacks on the British Government proceeding from the vernacular press would be successful, unless incitement to disaffection were followed by actual rebellion. Even, indeed, if a prosecution were successful, your Excellency considers that it would invest the prosecuted journal with a mischievous notoriety and artificial importance," and you are, on general grounds, more desirous of preventing than of punishing these libels. I will add a consideration which has presented itself to my mind. The cultivated native gentleman who sits on your Council for making Laws and Regulations, and who may be expected to know from what class of writers these libels proceed, states his belief that they are mainly under the influence of "folly and the spirit of braggadocio." Assuming this to be probably true, and remembering how few opportunities the experience of these writers has afforded them of understanding the limits of justifiable criticism, I am inclined to think that a system of pecuniary penalties, leviable under bonds, would be more applicable to their case than criminal prosecutions for an offence which may conceivably entail a punishment so heavy as transportation for life.

9. I entertain very grave doubts of the expediency of putting into action the portion of the Act which enables, and indeed encourages, the publishers of vernacular newspapers to withdraw themselves from its restrictive provisions by submitting their proofs to a Government officer. In India the difficulty of executing it would be unusually great. The vernacular newspapers are printed in a great variety of languages; no one officer could probably superintend them with effect. Every person charged with the duty of supervision must be acquainted with the niceties of native dialect, and most of these persons would probably have to be natives of the country. Such a system might give rise to great abuses. It is defended, I observe, in the statement of objects and reasons, on the ground that the hardship which the requirement of a bond and of the deposit of security might inflict on some of the owners of vernacular journals; but it seems to me that these provisions of the Act might be accommodated to the circumstances of each newspaper. The difficulties of establishing Government newspapers in the vernacular tongues were much dwelt upon in the debate in your Council, and I fully appreciate them, but I cannot but see that any censor of proofs will in fact write the newspaper which he revises. Her Majesty's Government request that you will refrain from putting this part of the Act into operation, taking power, by fresh legislation, to suspend or abandon it, if you deem this necessary.

10. I wish to record, further, my opinion, which I believe to be in accordance with that of your Excellency, that the principles laid down in the section of the Penal Code quoted above should be substantially adhered to in carrying out the provisions of the new Act. No criticism of Government or its measures should be discouraged if there is reason to think that it has been dictated by an honest desire for improvement. All the most experienced Indian administrators have felt that the great difficulty of Indian administration is the difficulty of ascertaining facts of social condition and political sentiment; and the vernacular press has always been considered one valuable means of getting at these facts, as is shown by the careful attention given by your Excellency's Government, by that of your predecessors, and by this office, to the translated extracts from native newspapers which are regularly supplied to you. Open or covert exhortations to disaffection cannot be allowed to be addressed to an excitable population, but mere censure of the officers or of the measures of Government, even if captious, ought not to be repelled. I agree with your Excellency that there is some danger of the native press being employed as an engine of extortion, and that this abuse should be prevented, but neither European nor native officials should be encouraged to exhibit too great sensitiveness, even under unreasonable blame.

11. I hope that the result of the measure thus limited and guarded will lead the writers in the vernacular journals to examine and expose genuine grievances, instead of indulging in the easier task of general denunciation, and that the improvement which has been noticed in the European and Anglo-Native press may gradually extend to the vernacular newspapers, so that special legislation for any class of publications may be found in no long time to be unnecessary.

12. Subject to the observations contained in paragraphs 9, 10, and 11 of this despatch, the Act will be left to its operation. —I have, &c.,

(Signed)

INDIA MISSIONS.

A missionary conference was held, under the auspices of the Society for the Propagation of the Gospel, on Friday last, in St. James's Hall. The Bishops of Bombay, Madras, and Colombo were present. The Bishop of Madras gave an account of the remarkable movement of which Tinnevely had been the scene, the conversions during the past year having reached 20,000, according to a telegram just received from Bishop Caldwell. For this wonderful success Bishop Gell thought that three reasons might be assigned:—First, the general labour during the last two generations; next, the especial work of the more recent times, owing to the increased action of Bishop Caldwell and his clergy, especially Mr. Rivington, who had even gained permission to preach in a heathen temple; the third and most moving cause appeared to have been the famine. The natives thought that Government aid would have to be repaid; but the free alms of the English people, as dispensed by the S.P.G. missionaries, caused them, when the matter was explained, to declare that they had never before heard of such a religion. Bishop Caldwell asked for £20,000 in the next five years to further the movement.

The Bishop of Bombay next read a paper on "Associated Missions in India. The Bishop urged that the home-feeling of a cœnobic community of clergy—however few in number; the drill and organisation, and the superior economy of associated missions, made them especially suitable for successful labour among the natives of India.

The Bishop of Colombo (Dr. Coplestone), described the population with which the Church had to deal in Ceylon as presenting four distinct elements; the English residents came first; next the mixed race, called Burghers—amongst whom existed a strong attachment to England and her Church; thirdly came the true natives, the Singhalese, missions to whom had been established by the Dutch before we came into possession of the country; lastly, there were the Tamil Christians, partly descendants of early immigrants of a far distant date, and partly themselves, recent immigrants employed in the coffee plantations. There were in Ceylon native missionaries who were the trusted ministers equally of Europeans and natives; and in St. Thomas's College, English and Singhalese youths learned and played together.

The Rev. R. Winter, of Delhi, read a paper written by his wife on "Zenana Work." Mrs. Winter spoke of the growing favour and success of women's work. In 1842, when a lady offered herself, Bishop Wilson said:—"I object on principle to single ladies coming out unprotected to so distant a place, with a climate so unfriendly, and with the almost certainty of their marrying within a month of their arrival." Since then very different views had prevailed; but Mrs. Winter complained of a want of union and sympathy amongst the workers, and above all of "the disastrous effects of ladies' committees in another country, without technical or real knowledge, attempting to direct such a difficult work." Mrs. Winter quoted a statement, the accuracy of which she had not seen challenged, to the effect that three-fourths of the Wesleyan, one-half of British, seven-eighths of the London Society, one-third of the Church of Scotland, and one-third of the Free Kirk Missions in India, were composed of members originally belonging to the Church of England. The model she desired to see adopted was Kaiserwerth, with some modifications and adaptations; but she suggested that a few married missionaries should be chosen as leaders. She recommended that the workers should live in common, with one of them at the head of all the domestic arrangements of the house. She suggested also that they should be paid. She thought, too, that it would be a great help if they adopted a distinctive dress, as it would save time and prevent jealousy. The branch of service which most needed recruiting was the medical, and Mrs. Winter dwelt long on the need of medical women, both on the score of humanity—for a hundred millions of women in India had at present no medical aid—and also on account of the opportunities which they possessed of spreading the Gospel. At present the staff at Delhi consisted of fourteen European Zenana missionaries, ten native Christian ministers, four parochial Mission-women, and twenty-six Hindoo and Mussulman female teachers.

Miscellaneous.

MR. FRANCIS H. PRYCE, late of the India Office, has been appointed agent to the Secretary of State for India Council, at Portsmouth.

WAR OFFICE, July 1.—The Queen has been graciously pleased to give orders for the appointment of George Hugh Wyndham, Esq., her Majesty's Secretary of Legation at Athens, to be an Ordinary Member of the Civil Division of the Third Class, or Companions of the Most Honourable Order of the Bath.—Gazette.

SOUTH INDIAN RAILWAY.—The warrants for the half-year's interest on the stock of the South Indian Railway Company have been forwarded to the proprietors, and are now payable at the Union Bank of London. The interest on the debenture bonds of the Company is also payable on presentation of the coupons.

ROYAL ASIATIC SOCIETY.—At the meeting of the above society, held on Monday, the 1st inst., Sir H. C. Rawlinson, K.C.B., President, in the chair, the following gentlemen were elected:—as Resident Members, Dr. Macartney, J. Wilson, Esq., and Gordon MacKinnon, Esq.; and as Non-Resident, W. H. Bellew, Esq., C.S.I., G. C. Stent, Esq., and Patrick Doyle, Esq. A paper was read, communicated by H. G. Keene, Esq., District Judge, Agra, entitled "Note on Maurique's Mission and the Catholics in the time of Shah Jehán." In this paper Mr. Keene gave an interesting account of Sebastian Maurique, an Eremite monk of St. Augustine, whose "Itinerary" was originally published at Rome in 1653. Maurique travelled through India about 1640, and spent some time at the Court of the Great Moghul, with whom he exercised sufficient influence to obtain the release of the Prior of Hugli, who had been imprisoned for eight years at Agra.

BILLS ON INDIA.—Tenders for £300,000 in bills on India were received on July 3 at the Bank of England. The amounts allotted (including Rs. 2,81,000 unallotted last week) were—to Calcutta, £280,100, at an average rate of ls. 8.075d.; to Bombay, £38,000, at an average rate of ls. 8.063d.; and to Madras, £10,000, at an average rate of ls. 8.125d. Tenders on all three Presidencies at ls. 8.16d. will receive about 76 per cent.; all above that price in full. Compared with last week's allotment the above results show a fall of 4 per cent. During the seven weeks (May 15 to June 26 inclusively) that 40 lacs were tendered for each week, the Council sold bills amounting in the aggregate to Rs. 77,19,000 at an average of close upon ls. 8.516d. It seems probable, from a result like this, and with a reduced amount tendered for, too, that the Indian Government will soon have, as usual, to raise a fresh loan here in order to prevent a disastrous relapse in the exchange.

THE COOLIE TRAFFIC.—A deputation from the Aborigines' Protection Society presented an address on the 3rd inst. to Sir John Smale, Chief Justice of Hong Kong, at the residence of Mr. W. H. James, M.P., 6, Whitehall-gardens. Mr. Chesson read the address, which, after presenting to Sir John Smale the Society's grateful thanks for his eminent services, remarked that the testimony was overwhelming, not only as to the nefarious means by which the Coolies had formerly been decoyed or kidnapped, and then brought to the baracoons at Macao, but also as to the barbarity with which they had been treated in China and Peru.—Sir John Smale, in reply, said his attention to the Coolie traffic began in 1861, when the Ville d'Agen, under the French flag, put in at Hong Kong, and he, as Attorney-General, was not slow to assert the rights of the Coolies in that vessel to liberty on their having been brought within British jurisdiction. Sir Hercules Robinson, then Governor, heartily entered into the work, and by his direction the story each Coolie told of his wrongs was reduced to writing, and every Coolie was returned to his home free. One kidnapped schoolmaster, whom he took into his house, gradually sank into a state of idiocy.

THE LAND MORTGAGE BANK OF INDIA (LIMITED).—The annual general meeting of the shareholders of the above bank was held on June 28, at the City Terminus Hotel, Mr. J. R. Boyson presiding. The report of the directors, with the balance-sheet for the past year, states that the company made a net profit of £14,033 on the tea business in spite of the bad season, and that the net profit realised on the entire business was £10,660 for the year. From this a dividend of 2s. per share is to be paid, leaving £1,098 to be carried forward. The current expenses in India were £5,717, and in London £2,818. The Chairman, in moving the adoption of the report, commented on its principal features. He said the general result of the year 1877, fairly viewed in connection with the difficulties of that period, were by no means unsatisfactory. Their anticipations at the outset of 1877 led them to look for a larger balance of profit. Their receipts in respect of current interest had been fully up to their anticipations, and if they had but made their full estimate of tea and realised the same price for it as they did in 1876 their net profit would certainly have been over £21,000, instead of some £10,600. The result of the realisations of the bank's property during 1877 showed an aggregate of £1,800 in excess of their estimated recoveries. The rate of interest which their Government and uninvested funds gave them during 1877 was nearly 5½ per cent., and this he considered very satisfactory, more especially when it was supplemented by the gain they made in realising their Government securities of 17,752 rupees. The report was unanimously adopted, and a dividend of 2s. a share—equal to 3.7-11 per cent. on the reduced amount of share capital—was declared.

EAST INDIAN RAILWAY COMPANY.—The thirty-first annual general meeting of this company was held on Thursday, at the City Terminus Hotel, Mr. R. Wigram Crawford in the chair. In moving the adoption of the report, the Chairman stated that the total length of the Main and Jubbulpore lines was 1,503½ miles, and that the expenditure on the maintenance of the permanent way and works during the half year ending December last was 8.30d. per train mile, as compared with 11.002d. in the corresponding period of 1876. This decrease was mainly owing to the exceptionally heavy renewals of permanent way materials on two of the district lines in the previous year. A large portion of the new goods-waggons and of the locomotives, the expenditure for which had been already sanctioned by the proprietors, had been shipped from this country, and the remainder were in course of shipment. The total number of passengers carried during 1876 was 6,296,085, whilst last year it had risen to 6,965,050. The tonnage in goods and minerals also showed a satisfactory increase of 651,921 tons. The line had undoubtedly fallen into pleasant places. The result of the year on the Main and Jubbulpore lines was a gross receipt of £4,065,577, as against £3,255,353, in 1876. The working expenses had been £1,294,910, as against £1,144,973, and the net earnings £2,770,667, as against £2,110,379. The amount to be distributed amongst the shareholders had been diminished to the extent of £19,209 in consequence of the loss on exchange. During 1877 a further sum of £62,352 had been repaid to the Government for advances on account of interest, making a total of £1,893,925 repaid in contributions. From the revenue £27,676 (a percentage on the receipts) had been paid to the provident fund, making a total payment thereto of £73,906. At the instance of the Archdeacon of Calcutta the company had issued an appeal of the Calcutta Additional Clergy Society for assistance towards supplying religious ministrations at stations on the line, which were at present without such aid. There were vast numbers of Europeans on the establishment of the company, for whom, with their children, it was necessary that means of religious consolation and instruction should be provided. It was obvious that the company had assisted in creating large communities, and it was desirable that those who took an interest in the welfare of their servants should do something to meet their religious wants. The board warmly commended the object of the society to the proprietors after considerable consideration. He congratulated the meeting upon the flourishing condition of the company's affairs, and it was a matter of great satisfaction to him to know that theirs was not the only Indian Railway company which was in a prosperous state. There was, and would be for years to come, ample room for all existing railways in India. Mr. George Lyall seconded the motion, which was, after some discussion, agreed to. The dividends, as recommended, were agreed to, the retiring directors were re-elected, and the proceedings terminated with the usual votes of thanks.

A MILITARY DIVORCE SUIT.—The suit of Major Nepean, of the Madras Staff Corps, for the dissolution of his marriage, was heard before Sir Robert Phillimore on Friday, sitting as judge in the Probate and Divorce Division, without a jury. Mr. R. A. Bayford appeared for the petitioner; Mr. Searle for Mrs. Nepean, the respondent; and Dr. Pritchard for Mr. Woolley, the co-respondent, a gentleman residing in Bayswater. Major Nepean stated that he and Mrs. Nepean were married in 1864 at St. John's Church, Madras. In the autumn of 1875, two children of the marriage having already been sent home to be educated in England, Mrs. Nepean left with a third to join them, with her husband's consent. He corresponded regularly with her till his return in February of 1877. Mrs. Nepean met him at Folkestone, and they then resumed cohabitation. She, however, was very unwell. One day the Major lighted his pipe in her sitting-room, and she at once remonstrated with him. Their eldest child, a boy, then present, said, "Why, mamma, you never objected to Mr. Woolley's smoking, why can't papa smoke too?" This caused Major Nepean to inquire who Mr. Woolley was, and Mrs. Nepean gave what her husband deemed a satisfactory account both of him and of the smoking, and the matter dropped. Some days afterwards a clean collar, marked A. S. Woolley, came home from the laundress, upon which Major Nepean again demanded an explanation. Mrs. Nepean stated that Mr. Woolley had one evening arrived to dine with a small party, having had his collar splashed by a passing hansom, and had changed it for a paper one in her son's room, leaving the dirty one, as it now appeared, behind him. Again Major Nepean's suspicions were allayed. Early in the present year, from information he received, the major instituted inquiries, the result of which tended to establish a certain cause for Mrs. Nepean's illness. The petitioner, who had heard rumours of her misconduct on more than one occasion, again spoke to her about them, imputing the illness on his arrival to the cause alleged. She denied most solemnly that these rumours contained one word of truth. On Mr. Woolley's name being put to her the explanation she gave was so plausible that for a time Major Nepean's distrust of her was transferred to his informants. Soon after this he suggested that there should be an amicable separation, which she declined. At the end of March, on conclusive information, he taxed her with having allowed Mr. Woolley to use her rooms on three successive evenings. She, taken by surprise, replied, "It's a lie; it was only one night." He took apartments for her from that time at various places, but never again resumed cohabitation, and she admitted her infidelity to him. The various witnesses requisite to prove the charge were in attendance, and did so, no questions being asked by either of the opposing counsel. On the conclusion of this testimony, Sir Robert Phillimore declared the petitioner's case to be substantiated, and pronounced a decree nisi for a divorce, with costs against the co-respondent, adding the usual order giving the petitioner the custody of the children of the marriage.

India in Parliament.

HOUSE OF COMMONS, MONDAY, July 1.—THE INDIAN NATIVE PRESS.—In reply to Sir GEORGE CAMPBELL, Mr. E. STANHOPE said the Secretary of State for India, being unwilling to do anything that would interfere with the full discussion of the Vernacular Press Act, would in this particular case allow the production of the dissents of members of the Council of India to the Act, in addition to the other papers, and these would be in the hands of members before Friday.

THE INDIAN SALT-TAX.—MR. E. STANHOPE, in answer to Mr. M'ARTHUR, respecting a letter in one of the newspapers respecting the India Salt-tax, said: Yes, Sir; I read the letter in question, but we have no information whatever at the India Office as regards the statement about opium. As regards the Salt-tax, we are aware that the Government of India is negotiating with the native States of Rajpootana and Central India for the abolition of the Customs Line, these negotiations, which are rapidly approaching completion, are described by Sir John Strachey as being intended to give to the people throughout India, at the cheapest rate consistent with financial necessities and with the least possible inconvenience, as much salt as they can consume.

HOUSE OF COMMONS, THURSDAY, July 4.—PUNISHMENTS IN MADRAS.—MR. P. A. TAYLOR asked the Under-Secretary of State for India whether his attention had been called to the apparently extreme severity of punishment to which certain prisoners were sentenced by the High Court of Madras on April 25 last, as reported in the Indian papers, viz., Syed Ahmed, convicted of picking a pocket, sentenced to "two years' rigorous imprisonment and to receive fifty lashes;" Yagen, sentenced, for stealing out of a carriage one of the carriage moons and book, to "three years' rigorous imprisonment;" Syed Mahommed, convicted of breaking into a house and stealing two cloths, to "two years' rigorous imprisonment and fifty lashes;" and whether he will cause inquiry to be made into the circumstances.—MR. E. STANHOPE: The newspapers to which the hon. member refers states the punishment to which these three prisoners were sentenced, and, also, as it seems to me, the reasons for its being of a severe character. The first prisoner admitted three previous convictions, the second four, and the third two previous convictions. In these circumstances there is no intention of making any further inquiry into the matter.

THE "Records of the Geological Survey of India," Vol. XI. Part I. for 1878, contains the Annual Report and memoirs by Messrs. T. W. F. Hughes, R. Lydeker, W. T. Blandford, and A. B. Wynne. We have in addition four parts of the "Memoirs of the Geological Survey of India," containing excellent descriptions and beautifully drawn figures of the Flora and Rajmahal group, of the crania of ruminants, the Flora of the Jabalpur group, of remains of ganoid fishes from the Deccan, and other examples of the Palæontologia Indica.—Athenæum.

THERE will be published in a few days a monograph entitled "The Punjab and North-West Frontier of India," by an old Punjaabee. The author, General H. Coxe, while making use of Cunningham's "History of the Sikhs," Blue-books, and official reports and papers, relies chiefly on personal observations extending over ten or twelve years. The General's object is, as he says in the Preface, "to present a rough sketch of a country and people destined to play an important part in the not very distant future, as some of us think."

BETWEEN the years 1758 and 1770, P. Marcodella Tomba, a Capuchin missionary, who principally resided at Bettia, in Bengal, but extended his travels also to Nepal, translated into Italian a number of Indian books, amongst others two cantos of the "Rāmāyana." His papers were recently discovered by Professor A. de Gubernatis in the library of the Propaganda and the Museo Borgiano. The professor is now engaged at Rome in preparing the greater part of these for publication, the volume being intended by the Italian Minister of Public Instruction as a present to the members of the forthcoming Oriental Congress.

REMSSION OF IMPRISONMENT OF AN EDITOR.—The sentence of imprisonment passed against the editor of the Malwa Akhbar, under the orders of his Highness Holkar, for the publication of seditious matter in that paper, has, says a vernacular contemporary, been remitted within the last few days, on due explanation being submitted to his Highness by the accused. The term of imprisonment allotted was three years, and not three months, as erroneously announced before; but the articles condemned as seditious, having in reality been copied from Anglo-Indian journals, the sources of which the editor had omitted through inadvertence to acknowledge in print, his Highness has set the prisoner at liberty with a warning. Which of the Anglo-Indian journals will take it?—Friend of India.

ABRIDGED PROSPECTUS.

The extraordinary success and popularity which have attended the working of well-regulated co-operative societies in England have induced the Committee of the Indian Co-operative Agency (Limited) to establish this Association for the purpose of supplying the officers and men of her Imperial Majesty's forces, members of the Civil and Uncovenanted Services, railway officials, contractors, planters, and all others in India, British Burmah, and Ceylon with every article in domestic and general use at the lowest possible price.

This Agency does not propose to establish store rooms or warehouses; it thereby avoids the large outlay which other societies have incurred. It will simply have offices in London, and a sample room, where orders will be received and the general business of the Association conducted.

It is not too much to say that the cost of most articles of general consumption in India is at least doubled before the goods reach the consumer. Under the principle adopted by the Indian Co-operative Agency the goods will be supplied to the consumer direct from the manufacturer or wholesale dealer.

In proportion to the support it receives from India, this Association proposes to develop itself into a general Agency on co-operative principles, in which entirely new features will be introduced, embracing educational, literary, legal, and service departments, and, as business extends, each department will be under the superintendence of an official of experience, specially qualified for the duties assigned to him.

The management of the affairs of the Indian Co-operative Agency is vested in a Committee of Gentlemen who have been long connected with India, and are intimately acquainted with the wants and requirements of the Indian public, or who command a large commercial acquaintance and influence in the City of London.

The Committee, all of whom are shareholders, and interested in the success of the undertaking, are not to receive any remuneration for their services until a dividend of 5 per cent. has been declared to the Shareholders.

An agreement, dated the 1st of April, 1878, and made between William Drew of the one part, and Thomas Woolams Holland, Lambert Cowan, and Frederick Montague Raynsford, on behalf of the Indian Co-operative Agency (Limited), of the other part, has been entered into, which can be seen at the office of the Solicitor of the Company.

Full Prospectuses, Forms of Application for Shares, and every information can be obtained on application to the Secretary, at the Office of the Company, 26, Holborn Viaduct, E.C.

WHITE'S MOC-MAIN LEVER TRUSS COMPANY (Limited).

WHITE'S MOC-MAIN LEVER TRUSS, Perfected and Exhibited in the Great Exhibition of 1861, is allowed by upwards of 500 Medical Gentlemen to be the most effective invention in the curative treatment of Hernia. The use of a steel spring, so often hurtful in its effects, is here avoided; a soft bandage being worn round the body, while the requisite resisting power is supplied by the MOC-MAIN PAD and PATENT LEVER, fitting with so much ease and closeness that it cannot be detected, and may be worn during sleep. A descriptive circular may be had, and the Truss (which cannot fail to fit) forwarded by post on the circumference of the body two inches below the hips being sent to the Manufacturer.

Mr. WHITE, 229, Piccadilly, London.

Price of a Single Truss, 16s., 21s., 26s. 6d., and 31s. 6d. postage, free. Price of Double Truss, 31s. 6d., 42s., and 52s. 6d.; postage, free. Umbilical, 42s., and 52s. 6d.; postage, free.

NOTES ON MUHAMMADANISM

BY THE

REV. T. P. HUGHES, M.R.A.S.,
C. M. S., Missionary to the Afghans, Peshawar.

Opinions of the Press on the First Edition.

"Altogether an admirable little book. It combines two excellent qualities, abundance of facts and lack of theories. . . . On every one of the numerous heads (over fifty) into which the book is divided Mr. Hughes furnishes a large amount of very valuable information, which it would be exceedingly difficult to collect from even a large library of works on the subject. The book might well be called a 'Dictionary of Muhammadan Theology,' for we know of no English work which combines a methodical arrangement (and consequently facility of reference), with fulness of information in so high a degree as the little volume before us."—The Academy.

"It contains multum in parvo, and is about the best outlines of the tenets of the Muslim faith which we have seen. It has, moreover, the rare merit of being accurate; and although it contains a few passages which we would gladly see expunged, it cannot fail to be useful to all Government employes who have to deal with Muhammadans, whilst to Missionaries it will be invaluable."—The Times of India.

"This small book is the most luminous, most convenient, and, we think, the most accurate, outline of the tenets and practices of Islamism that we have met with. It seems exactly the sort of comprehensive and trustworthy book in small compass, on this subject, that we and many more have often looked for in vain. The author has evidently studied his subject in a faithful, laborious, and scholarly manner, and has not only studied but mastered it. The work is of great value for general students, and for men whose work lies among the Mussulman population, such as Civil Servants and Missionaries, it seems to be the very work that is wanted."—The Friend of India.

"In brief compass it contains a large amount of reliable information. Instead of theories and fancies, facts are placed before us. Muhammadanism is represented as it really is, not as it is supposed that it might possibly be. Instead of retailing the speculations current in literary society at home, Mr. Hughes furnishes us with brief but incisive statements, which, so far as they go, leave nothing to be desired."—The Church Missionary Intelligencer.

"It is manifest throughout the work that we have before us the opinions of one thoroughly conversant with the subject, and who is uttering no random notions. . . . We strongly recommend 'Notes on Muhammadanism.' Our Clergy especially, even though they are not Missionaries, and have no intention of labouring amongst Muhammadans or consorting with them, ought to have at least as much knowledge of the system as can be most readily acquired, with a very little careful study, from this useful treatise."—The Record.

"Its value as a means of correcting the common impressions about Islam will reveal itself to the most cursory reader, while the author's evident scholarship and intimate knowledge of his subject bespeak for him a patient hearing on points the most open to controversy."—Allen's Indian Mail.

Summary and Review.

OUR latest advices by the Overland Mail are, from Bombay, June 21; Allahabad and Madras, June 19; Calcutta, June 18.

FROM Calcutta, Bombay, and Madras alike we hear that the heat of the week immediately preceding the burst of the monsoon has been unprecedented in its intensity. At Calcutta the chief engineer of s.s. Teniot and several seamen died from heat apoplexy on Saturday the 15th ult. At Allahabad during the last week in May the thermometer in the shade was 105 degs. The current month opened with 110 degs., the figures steadily rose day by day, until, on the 7th, 117 degs. was reached. For three days in succession 116 degs. was registered. Two soldiers of the 22nd Regiment died in the Fort from heat apoplexy.

DISTRESS is again rapidly spreading at Agra, as the numbers on the relief works are increasing at the rate of nearly five hundred a day.

TELEGRAMS to the Times of India (June 20) states that Mr. Tyrrell, C.S., Sessions Judge of Bareilly, was attacked by a native of Arrah while playing at lawn tennis in the public gardens. His injuries are not serious. The assailant was arrested, but there has been no inquiry yet.

SOME disquietude is reported on the Perso-Afghan frontier, either side accusing the other of being the offender. But no serious result is anticipated.

A CORRESPONDENT of the Times of India, under date Colombo, June 20, says:—A cyclone must have raged within 200 miles of this place for nearly a week. The wind and rain were nothing unusual for the monsoon, but the sea was persistently high, and cut away the foreshores, and undermined houses, including a large Romanist church. The seaside railway has also been damaged. The damage done to property amounts to several thousand pounds. One man has been killed and another severely injured. A boat from Merkara was upset yesterday and a number of packages lost. Some think the breakwater caused the damage by changing the course of the sea current, but that is not probable, as equal damage has been done to the south and north portions of the harbour.

It is announced in the last Gazette of India that on the recommendation of the Government of India, Her Majesty's Government has been pleased to confer good service pensions on Colonel A. B. Travers, Madras Staff Corps, from February 6, 1878, in room of Major-General W. Vine, Madras Cavalry, succeeded to Colonel's allowances; and also on Colonel A. C. McMaster, Madras Staff Corps, from February 8, 1878, in room of Colonel J. Mardall, Madras Staff Corps, who has also succeeded to Colonel's allowances.

A TENTATIVE and partial remedy, according to the Calcutta correspondent of the Times, for the existing evil of debt amongst the ryots, is now before the Legislative Council of India. Permission was granted, at a meeting held at Simla on the 20th ult., to introduce a Bill for the relief of indebted agriculturists in certain districts of the Bombay Presidency. Its objects are (1) to empower the Courts to adjudicate insolvency on the debtor's own petition; (2) to limit the power of the Civil Court as to the sale of land in satisfaction of money claims to cases where a specific pledge of land has been given as security; (3) to render obligatory the placing in writing of all contracts for the mortgage of immovable property, and the registration of all such documents.

THERE has been more rain in Mysore, and the ryots are busy ploughing and sowing—with very good prospects. There are now about 32,500 people on the relief works; the numbers declining. Nearly 11,000 of the labourers are on the State Railway.

HIS EXCELLENCY SIR GARNET WOLSELEY, according to the Morning Post, takes with him to Cyprus, Col. H. Brackenbury, R.A., and Col. Greaves, C.B., on his head-quarters staff.

WE understand upon good authority that vacant accommodation on board of H.M.'s Indian troopships either going out or returning home will be given to subaltern officers.

ACCORDING to the Bombay Gazette the Bolan route is very safe. Kafilas are daily going from Kurrachee by that route to Khorasan; on the 18th ult. a kafila of about eighty-eight camels, in charge of eighteen men, laden with piece goods and grocery, left Kurrachee for Khorasan.

THE English Cabinet has issued final orders on the dispute between the Government of India and the Nizam's Government with reference to the possession of the Berars. The question is not to be allowed to be opened again until the Nizam, who is at present a mere boy, comes of age, and the decision has been accepted by Sir Salar Jung and his co-regent, Vikr-al-Oomrah. Thus the dream of Sir Salar's great ambition has been peremptorily removed far away from realisation.

SOME discussion has been caused in the Indian Press by what has been termed the Kotah tragedy. Two English officers were tiger shooting in the district, when the local police invoked their assistance against a strong band of dacoits. What actually occurred is best related in the words of one of the actors in a letter addressed to the various morning papers:—

While in camp at Kunwas village, Kotah State, on the evening of the 6th May, 1878, at about 4.30 P.M., the thanadar of that village sent word to Lieutenant McCudden, 10th Regiment N.L.I., and myself that a band of dacoits, number unknown, had robbed a camel with a load of Rs. 5,000, belonging to a soukar of Kotah, and had also killed several villagers on their route. He asked us for assistance in capturing them. Lieutenant McCudden and myself immediately followed the thanadar, and running about two miles, we found the thanadar's party and the dacoits firing on each other, and also fighting with tulwars. The thanadar, on our arrival, requested us to fire on the dacoits, who were at that time overcoming the thanadar and the Kotah sowars, but we declined to do so. The thanadar then again called on us to fire. When Lieutenant McCudden called on the dacoits to surrender three times (the thanadar in the meantime moving on in pursuit); instead of doing so, the dacoits attacked the thanadar, who was alone amongst them on horseback, and would have killed him had not Lieutenant McCudden and myself fired on them. Two men dropped to the shots. On this five more dacoits laid down their arms, while the remaining three attempted to escape, two running to the right and one to the left. Lieutenant McCudden and several sowars pursued the two dacoits to the right, while I pursued to the left. The two dacoits to the right were captured, and one was immediately cut down by the sowars, though Lieutenant McCudden and myself did everything in our power to prevent it. The second, with great difficulty, we managed to save, though he was wounded with eleven tulwar cuts. The dacoit to the left was just escaping into thick jungle when I fired, and he fell, when he was immediately attacked and wounded by the sowars, whom I stopped. But he died in the course of the night from the effect of his wounds. On our return we found that the five dacoits who had surrendered had been brutally murdered by the sowars and villagers, while we were in pursuit of the other three dacoits. When we arrived, the dacoits were within fifty yards of an almost impenetrable jungle, and would have escaped almost immediately. The dacoits were armed with matchlocks, tulwars, and long lathes about ten feet in length. The number of dacoits was fifteen, ten of whom were covering the retreat of the camel with the booty, and the remaining five were with the camel. The band attacked was the covering party. The camel, owing to darkness coming on, escaped, though the Kotah sowars followed it. The following morning Lieutenant McCudden forwarded through the thanadar of the Kunwas to the Political Agent, Kotah, an official account of the affair, and received an answer thanking us for the service rendered in the suppression of dacoity. I may add that we were much horrified at the brutal manner in which the surrendered men were murdered by the Kotah sowars and villagers, but as we were in pursuit of the remaining three dacoits at the time we were powerless to prevent this slaughter.—JOHN S. ASHBY, Sub Lieut., 10th Regt. N.L.I.—Neemuch, June 4.—P.S.—Lieutenant McCudden having met with a severe accident in the jungle is unable to write on his own behalf.

It has been pointed out by correspondents of Bombay papers that these officers were bound by law to assist the police when called on, in the capture of any criminal, dead or alive. We may safely assert that the destruction of such human tigers as the dacoits was as useful as that of any man-eater.

THE Ceylon Times states that a telegram was received on the night of 24th May at Trincomalee, ordering H.M.S. Daphne to proceed to Port Blair, in the Andaman Islands, without delay. She immediately began to take on board stores and coal in the dark, and managed to get away in the early part of the afternoon of the 25th inst. It is conjectured that there is a slight outbreak amongst the convicts there.

REPLYING to a question asked by Major Nolan on Friday, Col. Stanley stated that the number of troops to be employed in the occupation of Cyprus would be 10,000 men in round numbers, consisting of the Indian troops now in Malta, and three British Battalions. Telegrams have informed us that the Indian sappers and miners have left in the Canara, to prepare barrack accommodation, and that the 25th Madras Regiment is under orders to follow.

THE various conjectures and prophecies as to the visit of all or some of the Indian Contingent to this country were fully answered when it was formally announced by Col. Stanley that these troops would garrison Cyprus. Perhaps the whirligig of time may yet bring round a permission for the visit to the Capital of the Queen-Empress, so eagerly desired by our loyal native soldiers.

THE volunteer movement in India is as yet but young, we may yet see an Indian Wimbledon meeting grow from such small beginnings as the rifle contest shot off on June 15 last, at the Military Butts, Colaba, between representative teams of the Bombay Volunteer Rifles and the Great Indian Peninsula Railway Volunteers. The Bombay Volunteers are armed with the Martini-Henry rifle and the Railway Volunteers with the Snider, and to equalise matters, it was decided that five shots should be fired at each range with the Snider and five with the Martini. The Bombay team won the match by eighteen points, scoring 568 out of a possible 800 at 200 and 500 yards, any position. A noticeable feature in the match was that the Railway men scored 26 more points with the strange Martini rifle than they did with their own Snider.

THE Regimental Committee of the Bombay Rifle Corps, recently passed the following resolutions:—"With a view to promoting the efficiency of the Bombay Volunteer Rifle Corps in target practice, and to stimulate each member in acquiring proficiency in the use of the rifle, it is proposed to form a Regimental Rifle Association, to be designated 'The Bombay Volunteer Rifle Association,' and to hold annually a Regimental Rifle meeting, to be conducted on a principle similar to those held annually at Wimbledon."

A VERY salutary hint was given by the Secretary of State in the House of Lords on Thursday evening to Indian claimants. The question of the succession to the Jaghire of Bungana Pally was re-opened by Lord Stanley of Alderley. He called the decision of the Madras Government in question, made in 1869, in favour of the nephew Futteh Ali Khan, and excluding the Nawab of Masulipatam, the son-in-law, and widow of the deceased Chieftain. Lord Cranbrook declined to interfere with the decision of the Madras Government arrived at after careful consultation with persons skilled in the Mohammedan law of inheritance and confirmed by the Duke of Argyll. He thought it very detrimental to the interests of justice that persons whose claims had been already decided should be encouraged to hang about the Houses of Parliament for years, and thus be put in a position which could only lead to misery and want.

THE Administration Report of Mysor for 1876-7 gives some valuable particulars regarding the mining interests of the Province. The Urigam Mining Company in the Kolar district has not yet commenced operations. Sheemogah and Chittledroog appear to be well favoured in the matter of iron, ninety-three mines being said to exist in the former and fifty-three in the latter. Eighty furnaces are in operation in Kadur. Without dealing, at present, with the commercial aspect of the question, it would have been very interesting to have the fullest particulars indicating the annual cost of working the mines, the rate of payment to the miners in the several years, their number, the rate of payment per ton, and such other information as would show the rate of progress. The geology of Mysor is pretty well known by this time, and its ironstone has always been well spoken of. The main seam, however, it is conjectured, has not yet been discovered. If it can be hit upon, very great importance must come to be attached to its working. We hope to witness then the commencement of a new industrial development, one scarcely to be equalled, it may be, in the commerce of the peninsula. With further opening out of the mineral resources of India, there must follow a development of collateral industries. How far the anticipations of their growing wealth are correct, time must show; there are many who take a very hopeful view of the matter, and for our own part, we hope to see the day when the miners, now reckoned by a few thousands, will be counted by hundreds of thousands.

THE Bishop of Rangoon has determined on holding a Diocesan Conference next December, consisting of the laity and clergy, to take into consideration several important questions bearing upon the welfare of the Church in the diocese.

A CONTRADICTION is given by Captain Campbell, of Ootacamund, to the report that Mr. Fuller had been found safe and well. The statement originated in a heartless joke on the part of a Government official. The unfortunate young gentleman had not up to June 20 been seen or heard of since he left Captain Campbell's house on May 17.

A SUCCESSFUL cotton spinner is to be found among the Indian Princes. The cotton mill belonging to Maharajah Holkar cost Rs. 2,01,000, and yielded a profit in 1876-77 of Rs. 1,06,000, the outturn was 526,287 lbs. cloth, and 4,586 lbs. yarn. More machinery has been ordered to meet the increasing orders. Holkar, says the Times of India, well deserves his rank as a.c.s.i., Grand Cotton Spinner of India.

A PROOF has been just given that there is no disposition to interfere with the healthy native newspapers. The Government of India, according to the Times of India, on a representation made by the Press Commissioner on behalf of the Vernacular Press, has ordered that vernacular newspapers shall henceforth be allowed to receive telegraphic messages for publication at the same rates and on the same conditions as their English contemporaries. The rules of the Telegraph Department relating to press telegrams will consequently in future apply equally to English and vernacular newspapers.

A NOTEWORTHY advance in the temperance, and consequently of the health, of our soldiers in India has been made. The quantity of rum consumed in the army canteens in the year 1877-78 was 137,726 gallons less than the annual consumption of the year ending March, 1870. The teetotal societies of the army, numbering now 10,000 soldiers, may be partly credited with the improvement.

SOME excitement has been caused amongst the officers and crews of the ships in harbour at Calcutta. A local magistrate decided that a ship's captain is able to disrate one of his officers and compel him to serve before the mast. Meetings of those interested were to be held to protest against a decision which certainly requires to be thoroughly tested.

AMONG the various attacks made by some of the Indian papers upon Sir George Couper, the imputation that he owed his promotion to having been a youthful play-fellow to her Majesty was freely thrown out. Personalities in political controversy are bad, but this was worse, for it was absolutely false. Sir George Couper is the son of a Peninsular officer, who was appointed Controller of the Household to the Duchess of Kent in 1840, the year of her Majesty's marriage.

THE sea customs revenue, excluding salt, and the salt revenue of India have both begun the year well. The first, in two months, exceeding 42 lakhs, being greater by half a lakh and more than the income for the same period of last year. The Indian salt revenue for April was not far off 48 lakhs; the average collections for the last five Aprils being less than 45½ lakhs.

THE following is quoted by the Times of India from the last report issued by the Maharaja's College at Jeypur:—"As a rule we have dispensed with the use of the rattan, as tending to blunt the softer feelings. Nothing is so telling to a boy as when he stands convicted by his fellow students for misbehaviour, or is praised by the teacher before them for conduct worthy of praise."

It is understood, says the Pioneer, that the principal subject to be discussed between Sir Ashley Eden and Sir Steuart Bayley is the question of the re-transfer of Assam to Bengal—a question which we believe is still before the Viceroy in Council. That such a change in the principle of its administration would benefit the smaller province, just as much indeed as change of blood at the head of it, seems beyond doubt. So far as we remember, the chief reason assigned for the severance some five years ago was that Bengal was of itself too big a thing to include the government of a second province. Assam was consequently brought under the rule of India, with the general result that its last state has become worse than the first. True, it is has had its local assignment after the fashion of other provinces, but the amount being strictly proportioned to the yield of its revenue, which is miserably small, the sum total available for internal improvements is in inverse ratio to the needs of a new and undeveloped country. Then, the machinery of its administration is not of the best. Assam is regarded by officials as a sort of refuge for the destitute—a place in which all hope of egress or advancement must be abandoned. In railway projects, in labour-recruiting operations, in dealings with frontier tribes, just as much as in natural boundaries, Bengal and Assam are completely mixed up. In fact, it is difficult to imagine any decent argument against their reunion, unless it be, perhaps, that their separation was decreed so recently. Five years, however, is surely life enough for any administrative experiment—especially for a failure. And if one need suggest one more reason why, under an outward form of the old order of things, a new one should be established, it is that both the Lieutenant-Governor of Bengal and the Chief Commissioner of Assam are believed to be strongly in its favour; whilst Bengal is both able and willing to share her ample resources with her needy neighbour.

FEMALE education in India must be of rather a mixed character; we doubt very much if our training schools could furnish candidates qualified to take high marks in an examination such as tested the Bengali competitors for the scholarships offered by the Uttarpara Hitakari Sabha, of which Lord Lytton is patron, and various baboos are members of the committee. The girls were asked amongst other things for an essay on the effects of intemperance in eating, "and support your conclusions by illustrations." Another essay asked for was on the qualities essential to the mistress of a household, a strong hint being given that "superintendence of the kitchen is a principal duty of woman." A third essay was on the result of exposing an infant to the sun directly after birth. A good deal was expected from the candidates in the way of history and geography; they were asked what they knew of Japan; what Lake Aral is famous for; what portion of Asia belongs to the Czar; and for a sketch of Lord Cornwallis' and Lord Canning's administration.

THE locusts which have done so much damage in the Madras Presidency, have been made the subject of a report by Surg-Major Bidie, Superintendent of the Madras Central Museum. The kind now swarming in the Madras Presidency is the Edipoda migratoria. This is the locust which once ravaged the Crimea and the southern provinces of Russia, and has been well described by Mr. Smirnov, Secretary to the Russian Embassy. The Arabs eat these locusts, which are said to taste like shrimps—a curious flavour for the Apostle to mix with honey. Dr. Bidie explains how locusts may be destroyed in their larva stage; and the Government of Madras has issued orders for the work. The heavy rains will doubtless materially assist in the destruction of these pests. A terrible illustration of their ravages is reported from Palghat, where an unfortunate cultivator, an Eruvan, at Konjecoode, hanged himself, his paddy crop having been totally destroyed by these insects.

WE have already stated positively, says the Pioneer, that the Stanley Engineers were to be put upon the same footing as regards pension as the Cooper's Hill men. The India Office has now sanctioned the proposal, and we believe that only one comparatively trifling question of detail remains to be settled before an official announcement on the subject is made—a question as to whether time for pension should count from the date of an engineer's landing in this country, or of his receiving his first appointment; but as the former very sensible rule is laid down in the existing Code, that would seem to settle the matter. A provision of considerable importance to some of the Stanley Engineers is to be added to the Code. It empowers the Government of India, in certain exceptional instances, to add a maximum period of three years to the time counting for pension, in the case of those who have joined the service above the rank of First Grade Assistant Engineer.

TEXT OF THE CONVENTION OF DEFENSIVE ALLIANCE BETWEEN GREAT BRITAIN AND TURKEY, SIGNED JUNE 4, 1878.

Her Majesty the Queen of the United Kingdom of Great Britain and Ireland, Empress of India, and his Imperial Majesty the Sultan, being mutually animated with the sincere desire of extending and strengthening the relations of friendship happily existing between their two Empires, have resolved upon the conclusion of a Convention of Defensive Alliance with the object of securing for the future the territories in Asia of his Imperial Majesty the Sultan.

ARTICLE I.—If Batoum, Ardahan, Kars, or any of them shall be retained by Russia, and if any attempt shall be made at any future time by Russia to take possession of any further territories of his Imperial Majesty the Sultan in Asia, as fixed by the Definitive Treaty of Peace, England engages to join his Imperial Majesty the Sultan in defending them by force of arms. In return, his Imperial Majesty the Sultan promises to England to introduce necessary reforms, to be agreed upon later between the two Powers, into the government, and for the protection of the Christian and other subjects of the Porte in these territories; and in order to enable England to make necessary provision for executing her engagement, his Imperial Majesty the Sultan further consents to assign the Island of Cyprus to be occupied and administered by England.

ARTICLE II.—The present Convention shall be ratified, and the ratifications thereof shall be exchanged, within the space of one month, or sooner if possible.

Constantinople, June 4, 1878.

ANNEX.

It is understood between the two High Contracting Parties that England agrees to the following conditions relating to her occupation and administration of the Island of Cyprus:—

I. That a Mussulman religious tribunal (Mehkéméi Shéri) shall continue to exist in the island, which will take exclusive cognisance of religious matters, and of no others, concerning the Mussulman population of the island.

II. That a Mussulman resident in the island shall be named by the Board of Pious Foundations in Turkey (Evkaf) to superintend, in conjunction with a delegate to be appointed by the British authorities, the administration of the property, funds, and lands belonging to mosques, cemeteries, Mussulman schools, and other religious establishments existing in Cyprus.

III. That England will pay to the Porte whatever is the present excess of revenue over expenditure in the island; this excess to be calculated upon and determined by the average of the last five years, stated to be 22,936 purses, to be duly verified hereafter, and to the exclusion of the produce of State and Crown lands let or sold during that period.

IV. That the Sublime Porte may freely sell and lease lands and other property in Cyprus belonging to the Ottoman Crown and State (Arazii Miriyé vé Emlaki Houmayoun) the produce of which does not form part of the revenue of the island referred to in Article III.

V. That the English Government, through their competent authorities, may purchase compulsorily, at a fair price, land required for public improvements, or for other public purposes, and land which is not cultivated.

VI. That if Russia restores to Turkey Kars, and the other conquests made by her in Armenia during the last war, the island of Cyprus will be evacuated by England, and the Convention of the 4th of June, 1878, will be at an end.

Constantinople, 1st July, 1878.

IMPROVED TIDE-GUAGE.—It is said that the Secretary of State has had under consideration a proposal made by the Government of India for the purchase, or construction in England, of an improved tide-calculating machine for use in connection with tidal observations on the Indian coast, and that such a machine will shortly be despatched to India. It is believed that a machine of this kind will be invaluable for the practical purpose of predicting the tides for Indian ports. It will enable tide-predicting tables of a much more accurate and complete character than any hitherto in use to be prepared from year to year for any port for which the requisite observations have been made by a self registering tide-gauge. The expense also of producing the improved tide-tables yearly will be considerably less than that incurred by the comparatively laborious means by which the less perfect tables hitherto in use have been prepared.

INDIAN ASSOCIATION FOR THE CULTIVATION OF SCIENCE.—At a special general meeting of the Indian Association for the Cultivation of Science, held on Wednesday, the 5th June, Dr. Rajendralala Mitra in the chair, the following resolution was carried:—"That this meeting receives with great pleasure the intelligence of the gift of Baboo Cally Kissen Tagore of Rs. 25,000 for the improvement of the Laboratory of the Association, and of the subscription by him of Rs. 300 per annum in aid of the funds of the Association, and desires that the most cordial thanks of the Association be conveyed to the Baboo for his enlightened and munificent liberality."

OUR NEW INDIAN OUTPOST.

THE convention between the Queen-Empress and the Sultan, announced last Monday, has been the one topic of the week. The words of the preamble proclaim to the world that England will not suffer any Power to menace the vital communications between the Western and Eastern portions of the Empire. The resolute front opposed by our Prime Minister to the Russian advance has been consistently maintained. Loud and long have been the clamours of the two extreme parties; one, counselling inactive sufferance, whether from motives of opposition which heeded only partisan interests, or fanaticism, which would break up the empire of the Turks as hopeless; and the other advocating an utter denial to Russia of any results of her victory. Between the two our statesmen have held the middle course. Turkey entered on the disastrous war, against the counsels of England, refusing advice or dictation, and expecting that our own interests would entail an early intervention. The loser in such a struggle must pay; the winner must receive. Russia announced loudly that she sought for no territorial aggrandisement, like the old Crusaders. She sought only the deliverance of the oppressed Christians of Bulgaria and Roumelia. Then came the struggle, much sharper and more prolonged than Russia had anticipated. The prolongation of the war and the grievous losses experienced served as an excuse to the victors to claim much more than they had ostensibly desired. Russia was to be augmented in Europe indirectly, and in Asia directly by the surrender of the Armenian fortresses and territory, as just and lawful spoils of war. The conditions of the Treaty of San Stefano affecting the European province of Turkey were such as could not be tolerated; but England could not claim a sole or special interest in this branch of the Eastern Question; it was common to all the great Powers. But our statesmen remembered, what the public and many even of the leaders of the public seem to forget or ignore—that the Empire of England is an Asiatic Power. This interest we share with none, save one, and that one, though not professedly, yet inevitably our rival and possible enemy. The conquests made in Armenia and the resolute determination to preserve those encroachments, brought on us the necessity of meeting the advance of the rival Power in Asia. Without fearing, we must recognise the steady advance of the Russians in Asia. We do not seek for increase of territory. We are not envious of the greatness of our neighbours, but that Empire, which we have won, and of which our Queen was solemnly proclaimed Empress in the capital of the Moguls, we will guard, whether it be on the frontier of India or in Congress of the assembled European plenipotentiaries. Far-sighted men long ago pointed out that step by step, if unchecked, Russia would advance to the shores of the Persian Gulf, by annexing separate districts of Armenia. Such an advance must threaten our communications with India in the future. In the present each step forward would vibrate throughout the empire from the hills of Kabul to the plains of Bengal. If we contented ourselves with leading articles, meetings in St. James's Hall, and useless catechising of Ministers in Parliament, the feeling would pervade Asia that Russia acted, while England debated. To the Asiatic mind debate means weakness, hesitancy and defeat; action imports strength and victory. The masterly policy of our Ministers, unbroken in its chain from its inception to its triumphant conclusion, has been that of truest, most recognisable action. Ready for war, we have won, or rather have had won for us, a bloodless victory in the diplomatic arena, nor can it be denied that the general approval—varied only by a feeble outcry from certain obscure political partisans—which has accepted Lord Beaconsfield's policy, indicates a relief of the public mind. Even those opposed to aid Turkey have felt uneasy as to India; of course no one feared anything, but there was a doubt of our being outwitted in diplomacy, and a lurking apprehension of a war being forced upon us; a sense of the insecurity attached to our Indian possessions. The publication of the Convention, the occupation of Cyprus, even the protectorate of Asiatic Turkey, produced a feeling as when one emerges from a dark passage of doubtful risks to the open sunlight and clearer air. Men have breathed again after long suspense, and felt that for the present at least all this incertitude, so far as is possible, is over; for we can hardly think that Russia will take Lord Stanley of Alderley's views, and forbid our occupation of Cyprus. England has at all events declared that no Power shall even indirectly menace her Indian possessions. She has vindicated her determination in the Councils of Europe to allow no judgment to be passed upon her right therein. True, she has undertaken a task that to many seems hopeless; it seems easier to fight for Turkey than to reform the administration, and restore law and order. We believe the task will not be so hard; the extravagant rule of a lunatic, the licentious avarice of corrupt Pachas have fearfully injured the Asiatic provinces, but even there we find some good and active Pachas; the letter from Baghdad, which we publish to-day, gives an apt illustration of this. However, England has a strong right to interfere, and the Porte knows it will be exercised; her rival knows it will not be abused; but in any case she must accept the duties of her greatness. Turkey consolidated and reformed is to be upheld; and the same strong wisdom which has succeeded in combining reform with the maintenance of the native rulers in Indian feudatory States will be exercised to advance the prosperity of our ally. The splendid resources of Asia Minor under reformed Government will recupe- rate the wasted revenues of Turkey, and the absence of oppression will remove pretexts for insidious interference. Meanwhile, we have acknowledged the duty, and we have hoisted our flag in the Island of Cyprus in pledge that we mean to discharge it. The occupation of this well-chosen outpost will be at once a defence of our own interests and a guarantee to our protected ally. While under British administration it will be a model for the Pachas of Asia Minor to copy in their own provinces. Garrisoned in part, at least, by the Indian Contingent, it is indeed the outpost of our Asiatic Empire. Distant only two hundred and forty miles from Port Said, about one thousand miles from Malta, and within a few hours of the Syrian Coast, it affords an admirable station whence to watch the great Canal on one side and the highways of Asia Minor on the other. Of its present condition, its harbours, its climate, and capabilities, a full report will be made when Sir Garnet Wolseley shall have assumed his command. But of its essential use to the nation which connects the East and West by its Imperial and commercial interests, and which is therefore vulnerable on the lines of communication which pass through foreign territory, its past history gives ample proof.

The traders of Tyre, whose commerce, like our own, bound the East and West together, were its earliest historical possessors. After an interval of two centuries of turbulent autonomy the great naval Powers and the lords of Western Asia contended for the possession of this fertile island. Egyptians and Greeks, Greeks and Persians, incessantly warred to gain or retain the jewel of the Syrian sea. As a possession of Persia it became a part of the empire which Alexander lived long enough to conquer, but not consolidate, at the division of his spoil. The Ptolemies gained, and, with brief breaks, held the island, until with all the Mediterranean countries it was absorbed into the Roman world. The province for three centuries of prosperous peace was the resort of traders seeking wealth, valetudinarians seeking health, and pilgrims to the Paphian shrine of Aphrodite. The division of the Roman Empire gave Cyprus to the Byzantine Emperors. The Arabs in A.D. 648 commenced a new series of conquests, and re-conquests, which only ended in 1570. Constantine Copronymus regained it in 746; but fifty years after the Saracens seized and held it for 160 years, till it was won back by Nicephorus II. in 964. Isaac Comnenus succeeded in establishing himself as King of Cyprus in 1182, only to provoke our own Cœur de Lion's wrath by his inhospitable treatment of the shipwrecked crusaders. Richard stormed Famagusta, deposed Isaac, and handed over the island to Guy de Lusignan, King of Jerusalem; the Royal knight errant contenting himself with the lovely Berengaria as his share of the rich conquest. The civil wars of the fifteenth century were terminated by Caterina Cornaro's abdication in favour of the Republic of Venice. The Adriatic mistress of the Eastern trade, after a century of possession, yielded to the overwhelming power of the Ottomans, and from 1575 to the present time Cyprus has been a Pashalic of the Turkish Empire. The new chapter in the history of the ancient Chittim, which now opens, will be indeed one of change for the better. The dwindled population of 100,000 may again reach its former number of a million. The rich mineral treasures, the agricultural wealth of the Island will be developed and increased, when the banner of England floats once more over the ancient ramparts and Highlanders and Madras sepoy together keep watch and ward where Othello commanded the soldiers of Venice. But there is a position of strangely new importance that this island may probably occupy. Just one month ago Sir F. Goldsmid read a paper at the United Service Institution, in which he boldly advocated the selection of Cyprus as a tête du pont to cover the terminus on the mainland for a railway from Alexandretta to the Persian Gulf. As the Times says something will be heard again of the Euphrates Railway project. Sir F. Goldsmid advocates the line as a necessary subsidiary communication; as a corollary he proposed the occupation of Cyprus. We must say that the prescience which selected this island, then overlooked, and now the "cynosure of neighbouring eyes," should not be passed by without mention. Our Government have chosen Cyprus as the avant garde of the Canal and of India; we venture to predict that the next session of Parliament will hardly pass without at least an inquiry into the advisability of constructing the Euphrates Valley Railway, and thus still further strengthening our communication with India.

Sebastopol Trenches, and Five Months in Them. By Colonel Reynell Pack, C.B., 7th Fusiliers. London: Kirby and Endean, 1878.

This easily read volume of little more than 200 pages is a useful and intelligent contribution to the story of the Crimean War. The five months' experience of the author are from January to June, 1855, in which latter month a severe wound necessitated his removal from active duty and eventual return home. Chapter IX., describing the assault on the Redan, is perhaps the most interesting part of the book; and would well repay perusal if it contained no more than the few lines relative to Brigadier Yea's death, and the brief record of Captain Cooper's gallant ride to the Quarries. But it is otherwise replete with attractive matter; and Captain Biddulph's illustrative sketch of the ravine dividing the right and left attacks is a most acceptable accompaniment to the narrative in the text. In so deadly and determined a struggle as that of Russia and the Allies, it was not unnatural that some of the participating combatants should have experienced that "premonishment" of coming death to which Colonel Pack alludes; and more than one instance might be cited in which the presentiment was unerring. But something must be allowed for temperament, and something for particular circumstances in these cases. According to our author, "soldiers engaged in active warfare, in the excitement and daily perils of this life, do not usually dwell on the certainty of dying on the battle field or in the trenches: on the contrary, such is the buoyancy of the human mind, they rather calculate on the chances of escape, or at least with escape possibly wounded, and they shelve and put away from all contemplation, generally, the subject of death."

Is not a straightforward soldier's narrative like that we are noticing somewhat impaired by the substitution of the Editorial "we" for the first person singular? There is a strangeness of sound in the following line, which commences a new paragraph, after mention of the fatal shot which struck Brigadier Yea:—"Being the senior major, the command of the 7th Fusiliers now devolved upon us." F. J. G.

BENGAL POSTAL SERVICE.—We learn that the postal divisions of Dacca, Jessor, Mymensingh and Chittagong, are to be removed from the jurisdiction of the Postmaster-General of Bengal, and placed under the Deputy Postmaster-General, who will be immediately subordinate to the Director-General. The number of European Inspectors throughout Bengal, Behar, Assam and the new circle will be greatly increased, and the salaries of Postmasters and Deputy Postmasters generally will be placed on a higher scale than that now ruling. These arrangements when carried out will involve a very heavy outlay, as the present cost of the several large establishments will be more than doubled. What increased facilities, advantages, or security, we ask, is the public to expect in return for this enormous expenditure?—Behar Herald.

SERICULTURE IN ORISSA.—The monthly meeting of the Agricultural and Horticultural Society of India was held on May 2. Mr. D. B. Horn, Assistant-Secretary, Government of Bengal, P.W.D. submitted communications on the proposed introduction of sericulture in the canal banks in Orissa from the Superintending Engineer, Orissa Circle, and the Executive Engineer Mahanadi Division, describing the result of some experiments made by Mr. Atkinson, Supervisor, on the rearing of silkworms and the silk obtainable, from the cocoons. "The subject is one," observes the Chief Engineer, "on which I can offer no opinion; but as Government has now under consideration certain proposals for planting trees on the square lands adjoining our canals and distributaries, perhaps you may deem it worth while to have the opinion of some experts on the quality of the enclosed silk, so that a proportion of land available may be reserved, if considered advisable, for the cultivation of mulberry." Messrs. J. Thomas and Co. had kindly reported on the cocoons and raw silk, and the report is altogether favourable, so far as the small quantity would enable them to judge. The Secretary added that he had replied, to the best of his ability, to the other queries in Mr. Horn's letter.

THE VERNACULAR PRESS ACT.

TO THE EDITOR OF "ALLEN'S INDIAN MAIL."

SIR,—As few persons only will have time to read the documents which have been issued regarding the Vernacular Press Act, and the public generally must be left to form its opinion of the measure, upon the representations of the Press it becomes a duty to point out any error which such representations may appear to contain, in order that misapprehension on so important a question as the freedom of the Press, may be prevented as much as possible. I venture, therefore, to call the attention of your readers to certain passages in a leading article in last Monday's Times, which are calculated to create the impression that the remarks and instructions conveyed in the Secretary of State's despatch assenting to the Press Act greatly obviate the objections that might otherwise have been made to that Act—an impression which is certainly not confirmed by an examination of the despatch itself.

The following are among the chief objections which have been taken to the Vernacular Press Law:—1. No necessity has been shown to exist for special legislation with regard to the native newspapers in India, very few of the incriminated articles being of a seditious character, and the Penal Code containing ample provisions for the punishment of sedition, and even of attempts to excite feelings of disaffection. 2. By withdrawing Press cases from the cognisance of the Law Courts, and constituting the executive both prosecutor and judge in such cases, the Act encourages the abuse of power, and is calculated to produce the very worst effects. 3. By abolishing the freedom of the Vernacular Press the Act deprives the Government of the valuable means it has hitherto possessed of ascertaining facts of social condition and political sentiment, the knowledge of which is essential for the safe guidance of the administration.

If we now turn to Lord Cranbrook's despatch of 31st May last, which is referred to in the article in the Times, we shall find it to conclude with the following words:—"12. Subject to the observations contained in paragraphs 9, 10 and 11 of this Despatch, the Act will be left to its operation." It is therefore in those three paragraphs that we must look for the modification which the Times has represented as obviating much of the objections to which, in its original condition, the Act was open.

Paragraph 9 says:—"I entertain very grave doubts of the expediency of putting into action the portion of the Act which enables, and indeed encourages, the publishers of Vernacular newspapers to withdraw themselves from its restrictive provisions by submitting their proofs to a Government officer. Her Majesty's Government request that you will refrain from putting this part of the Act into operation." The Act which has been objected to on account of its unnecessary stringency is thus rendered more stringent and oppressive by an important privilege, which it originally conceded, being withdrawn by this paragraph.

Paragraph 10 says:—"I wish to record my opinion that the principles laid down in Section 124A of the Penal Code should be substantially adhered to in carrying out the provisions of the new Act. No criticism of Government or its measures should be discouraged, if there is reason to think that it has been dictated by an honest desire for improvement." Is it reasonable to expect that this rule will, in general, be carried out fairly and impartially, while the Executive, whose conduct is assailed by the Press, is left to judge of the motives and honesty of its assailer? Even the Irish Law, which was enacted as a temporary measure for putting down undoubted sedition, left to the publisher the right of having his case tried by independent judges uninterested in the result of their decisions. The mitigation which this paragraph has been represented to afford must, therefore, be considered simply as illusory. The remainder of the paragraph saying how valuable the Vernacular Press had always been in keeping the Government informed of the social condition and sentiments of the people, and enjoining that "neither European nor Native officials should be encouraged to exhibit too great sensitiveness, even under reasonable blame," may, at the outset, have some restraining effect, but affords no justification whatever for the hope that these remarks of the Secretary of State will, as a continuance, have any appreciable effect in counteracting those dangerous provisions of the new law whereby the Executive in India are virtually released from all practical responsibility, in the working of a measure which offers the greatest temptation to the exercise of arbitrary power, and leaves free scope to vindictiveness on the part of officials.

Paragraph 11 is not likely to produce any effect at all, either good or bad; it simply expresses "the hope that native journalists will expose genuine grievances instead of indulging in general denunciation, and that the improvement which has been noticed in the European and Anglo-Native Press may extend to the Vernacular newspapers, so that special legislation for any class of publications may be found in no long time to be unnecessary."

On the whole, therefore, with the exception of paragraph 9, whereby the stringency of the measure has been increased, the Secretary of State has left the Act in its original condition; an Act which was drawn up and passed with undue precipitancy and to which the Secretary of State hastily telegraphed his sanction, without having its provisions discussed by the members of his Council and ascertaining their opinions on a grave measure intended to reverse the policy which had been followed for half a century with the happiest results, as all official reports hitherto published attest.—I am, Sir, your obedient servant,

THE PRESENT STATE OF THE DECCAN.—I.

The public are indebted to the Khandeish and Deccan Famine Relief Committee for sending Dr. Macdonald into the famine districts to report upon and describe the true state of the country. It is comparatively easy, to get up a famine, and to procure circumstances which will support the conclusion of any one who chooses to believe there is a famine; but it must be difficult in a matter in which sentiment is so apt to play a part to procure a witness who will give thoroughly trustworthy evidence. A few weeks ago Mr. Daval, the reporter sent out by the Khandeish and Deccan Committee, made a number of startling statements, the acceptance of which, without some attendant explanation, would have left the public no alternative but to believe that there are parts of the Deccan in which famine is still raging with great severity. We were told of people eating grass seeds, and of course it was natural to suppose that if people were doing so they must be on the verge of starvation. The explanation, however, that in the Deccan there are many kinds of seeds grown which are perfectly nutritious, and that there are plenty of people who prefer living on these seeds to the labour of sowing the ordinary kinds of grain, puts a very different complexion on the matter; for when it is made we see that the Deccan is very much the same as usual, and that there is no cause for feeling alarm as to its present condition. Dr. Macdonald, with rare self-denial, has gone into the districts at this season of the year, and, braving the fierceness of the sun, the scarcity of European food, and the discomforts of travelling in a bullock gharry over rough roads, has investigated the condition of many parts of the country with great minuteness, and, as his reports bear the stamp of conscientiousness and truth on their face, we think the public may accept them as a genuine standard of the condition of the Deccan. Dr. Macdonald's reports do not represent a completely satisfactory state of affairs in the Deccan. There is evidently a great deal of distress still, and if the monsoon does not speedily raise food from the earth there may be more distress and also considerable mortality. But Dr. Macdonald takes considerable care to point out that this state of affairs is an after-effect of the famine. The majority of those who are weak and sick now have been weak and sick from the beginning of the distress. How they have lived through it is a marvel; but there they are; and unless they have especial bad fortune now they will get over the famine altogether. We find that Dr. Macdonald's principal fears are held with respect to the bursting of the monsoon. The people are for the most part living on the seeds of certain leguminous plants (erroneously called grass seeds by Mr. Daval), and as without this source of food the people would have absolutely nothing to live upon, it follows that any stoppage of the source of supply might be followed by serious results. Now, a fall of rain may put an end to this food supply; and Dr. Macdonald says that already the supply has been curtailed in places where showers have fallen. The real period of danger, therefore, will be between the bursting of the monsoon and the ripening of what the people have planted in the earth. What the people who are in distressed circumstances will do then it is difficult to say. Dr. Macdonald says it is a problem to be solved. We suspect that it will be solved in a very natural fashion. When the monsoon bursts there will be plenty of agricultural labour available, and those who are now living on seeds, and who are not doing a stroke of work so far as we can learn, will be compelled to do something for a livelihood. Others who know from experience what the effect of the monsoon is upon the supply of seeds will take care to lay in a large store before the first shower falls. On the whole, therefore, we do not fear that the bursting of the rains will be followed by a heavy mortality. The people who have already survived the famine, have shown considerable fertility of resources, and at the present moment they do not appear to be very badly off. Clothing does not appear to be over-plentiful, and many Mahratta women are described as being very badly clothed; the loss in cattle has of course been very great, and many of the agriculturists will find it difficult to cultivate their holdings; but these facts are about the worst that can be stated in the situation. The ryots have kept their agricultural implements—a certain sign that they were not and are not now reduced to dangerous extremities. As for disease, Dr. Macdonald says there has been in the villages a remarkable immunity from sickness, and “the deaths are very few, so that it cannot be said that people are dying for want of food.” No notice is taken of those startling mortality tables which were supplied to the Committee by Mr. Daval. Dr. Macdonald has interviewed the koolkurnies of many villages, and obtained the mortality lists so far as these primitive village clerks could supply them; but instead of the figures showing an abnormal mortality of a terribly severe description, they only show, in Dr. Macdonald's hands, that the mortality has been low, and that there has been a remarkable immunity from disease. We should, therefore, like to know where Mr. Daval procured those figures which showed a mortality of nearly forty per cent. in the villages of the Sholapar districts. For certain reasons, the Committee who sent Mr. Daval's reports to the press would not take the responsibility of their publication; and now we have Dr. Macdonald going over the same ground, in company with Mr. Daval, and finding evidences of general health instead of high mortality. On the whole, we think that Dr. Macdonald's reports show that there is not much reason to believe that the population of the Deccan are now in a precarious situation. They have tided over the bitterest period of their distress, and the approaching rainfall opens up to them a pleasant prospect of plenty. But they will have to work. One of the worst effects of the famine has been demoralisation; but if they get over their disposition to do no work and to live on wild seeds, which require no cultivation, the time should not be far off when the Deccan will be once more the home of a people who are contented with little.—Bombay Gazette.

THE NEW DISTRICT OF KHULNA.

The project of Sir Richard Temple to create out of the Southern portions of the districts of the Twenty-four Parganas and Jessor a new district, has, we believe, been again mooted, and is now under consideration of the Local Government. As the scheme is an important and advantageous one, we propose to notice it somewhat in detail. It is contemplated, we are informed, to incorporate the sub-divisions of Satkhira and Basirhat in the Twenty-four Parganas, and Khulna and Bagerhat, in Jessor, into a new district, with its head quarters at Khulna, which place is justly called by Mr. Westland, in his well-known Report on Jessor, “the capital of the Sundarbans.” These sub-divisions now form the lower parts of their respective districts, and each one of them comprises within its boundaries a portion of the Sundarbans, stretching southward down to the very sea-board. A glance at the map in either the first or second volume of Dr. W. W. Hunter's “Statistical Account of Bengal” will show that these sub-divisions are almost on a line with one another, and that combined together they would form a very fair sized and compact district. It will also show that Satkhira in the Twenty-four Parganas and Bagerhat in Jessor are very far away from the head-quarters of their respective districts, and as they, as well as the other two sub-divisions, are reached only by boat, they can hardly but be, and as a matter of fact are, very rarely visited by the district officials. Among other disadvantages, the inhabitants there do not derive as much benefit from the road cess fund as those of the other sub-divisions more favourably situated. Again, there can be no doubt that the illicit manufacture of salt is carried on unknown to the local authorities to a considerable extent in this out-of-the-way saliferous tract of country, now that there is no special agency, such as the salt chauki department of former days, to detect and check these practices in distant and scattered locations such as the Sundarban grants. This unquestionably affects the public revenue, and, as such, it is of consequence to every taxpayer. With regard to the extent of the proposed district and its inhabitants, we gather from Dr. Hunter's two volumes before referred to that the aggregate area of the four sub-divisions amounts to no less than 2,440 square miles, exclusive of the vast tract of Sundarban lands, and that the total population considerably exceeds one million, being exactly 1,315,024 in number. Including the Sundarbans in the limits of the new district, which it is proposed to establish as a second-class one, it would exceed in dimensions either the Twenty-four Parganas or the Jessor district. It is an undisputed fact that the bulk of the inhabitants of the above four sub-divisions have not progressed in material prosperity equally with those of the remaining sub-divisions, and this is, we believe, owing more or less to their great distance from the head-quarters of their respective districts. Undoubtedly the establishment of the new district would effectually remove this obstacle to their advancement. Of Khulna, the proposed head-quarters of the new district, it may not be out of place to furnish a few additional particulars. It has the Bagerhat sub-division to the east, and the Satkhira and Basirhat sub-divisions to the west, and is the most important of any one of them. It is not only the oldest sub-division in its district, but the first established in all Bengal, dating as far back as 1844. It is beautifully situated at the confluence of the Bhairab and Rupsaha rivers, and the amount of traffic that passes through it by water is immense, as all boats laden with produce from the North-Western Provinces, bound for Calcutta, proceeded via Khulna in the cold weather, and those from the Eastern Bengal districts all the year round. No river whatsoever separates it from the station of Jessor; and when the projected railway to Jessor is completed, which ought to be as soon as possible, it could be easily extended to Khulna, which would be its natural terminus, and steam communication thence to Bakarganj and other parts could be easily established. Khulna is a healthy locality, and is already the headquarters of the Sundarban Forest Conservancy, a department which bids fair, from all we hear, to out-rival in unpopularity even the police. And we do not know any reason why the Sundarban Commissioner's Office should not be removed there from Alipur in the Twenty-four-Parganas, which is not centrally situated, as Khulna is, but at one extreme end of the Sundarbans. It is also far better adapted in every respect for the headquarters of the Executive Engineer, Circular and Eastern Canals Division, than Writer's-buildings in Dalhousie-square! While taking away the sub-divisions of Khulna and Bagerhat from Jessor, it is proposed, we learn, to add to it, by way of compensation, the sub-division of Kushtia in the Nadiya district; but we cannot, we confess, see any advantage in this latter arrangement. We think the Jessor district, as it is, too extensive to be properly administered by any single executive officer, however able and energetic he may be; and stripped of the two sub-divisions referred to, it would just be of sufficient size to be efficiently controlled by one district officer.—Englishman, June 7.

THE EMPRESS BRIDGE.

ADAMWAHAN, June 8.—The bridge over the river Sutlej at Adamwahan was opened by Sir Andrew Clarke this morning in the presence of some 300 Europeans and many thousands of natives. The report of the Director of State Railways (Colonel Peile, R.E.), gives a full description of the bridge, so I will not say more of it than that it is handsome and good; that it looks as if made for all time, and exactly the kind of work that makes the natives look up to and feel the superiority of the English, who are able to control and bridge their wildest rivers, and meet difficulties only to overcome them by their indomitable perseverance and engineering skill. The arrangements for the opening were excellent, and with the exception of one or two trifling delays, such as a hot axle at Multan on one of the carriages of the special, and the running over a stray camel by the same train at Adamwahan, everything went very smoothly. A special train of twenty-two carriages, containing the guests invited on the Lahor and Jhelum side, left Lahor at 8.15 P.M. on Friday. On arriving at Multan about 5.30 A.M., chota hazri was provided on the platform, and, after about an hour's stoppage, the train proceeded to the Sutlej Bridge, having picked up at Multan eight more carriages and a number of ladies and gentlemen. On arriving at the station of Adamwahan close to the bridge, we found the buildings prettily decorated with the long grass (which seems almost the only form of vegetation in that howling wilderness,) and palm branches. Banners were introduced overhead and in the groups of palm, and over the entrance to the bridge was an immense white banner, on which was in large crimson letters “The Sutlej Bridge.” When the ceremony of naming was performed, this banner was reversed and showed “The Empress Bridge.” When the train drew up at the platform, the Nawab of Bahawalpore, who had arrived before us, was introduced to Sir Andrew Clarke by Colonel Graham, the Commissioner of Multan, by command representing the Lieutenant-Governor of the Punjab. The guests then walked on the bridge, and when in their places a procession was formed, consisting of Sir Andrew Clarke, the Nawab, Colonel Graham, the Bishop of Lahor, the Rev. W. H. Tribe, Colonel Peile, Mr. Rayne, Engineer-in-Chief of the Indus Valley, Mr. Bell, who has completed the bridge, and others. On arriving at the bridge, Colonel Peile (the Director) presented Sir Andrew Clarke with a brief history of the bridge. Then followed an impressive service, read by the Lord Bishop of Lahor and the Rev. W. H. Tribe; after which Sir Andrew Clarke, in a few well-chosen words, congratulated those engaged on the bridge, on behalf of the Empress and Viceroy, on the completion of their work, informed the company of the Empress's permission that the bridge should be called after her, and handed down to posterity as the Empress Bridge, and proclaimed the bridge open for traffic. Long and hearty cheers were then given for the Empress Queen, the band struck up the National Anthem, and the party went back to their carriages in the special train. To this train a gaily decorated engine was attached, and took us steadily across the bridge. The first train crossed amid the cheers of thousands of native workmen who were clustered over the structure. The train was then run down the bund to enable a good view of the bridge to be obtained, and then, for the first time, we recognised how vast and splendid a structure it was. The train then recrossed the bridge and disembarked the passengers at Adamwahan station, where 250 guests sat down to a déjeuner, presided over by the Engineer-in-Chief, Mr. Rayne, supported by Sir Andrew Clarke and the Commissioner of Multan. The Bishop of Lahor, the Nawab of Bahawalpur, Major Grey, &c., were also present. After the appropriate toasts had been duly honoured and responded to, the special train started back for Multan, where it was timed to arrive at 6.20. A large dinner was given at Captain Sparkes's house, at which about sixty sat down, including Sir Andrew Clarke and the other officials who had been present during the day. The special left Multan about eleven o'clock, and was timed to reach Lahor at two o'clock on Sunday morning. All those concerned are to be congratulated on the arrangements made, and so well carried out. The heat was, as may be imagined, somewhat overpowering; the thermometer standing at 116° in the centre of the carriage, and when at the window at 134°. There were in addition to the déjeuner a dinner to the subordinates, two feasts for the natives, and 300 maunds of sweetmeats distributed among the native workmen, of whom there were some 5,000 or 6,000 employed.

UPPER ASSAM.

May 31.—Rather a severe cyclone took place on the 19th instant at Tiphook (in the Sibsagar district), a garden lying near the foot of the Naga Hills, and about twenty miles from the station. The manager and his assistants were aroused at dawn of day by a very severe storm of wind and rain, and had barely time to get out of their houses before the wind burst on them in all its fury. The direction of the storm was first from the south-east and then suddenly changed to the north-east. The severe wind did not last more than five or six minutes, but in that short period a vast amount of damage was done. The assistant's house, which must have been in the centre of the cyclone, was a perfect wreck, he himself having only just time to get out of the house when the walls came down with a crash on his bed. Half the iron roof of a tea house was carried off. Leaf houses and a new godown were levelled with the ground, as also all the European cook-houses and numbers of coolies' huts. Numberless trees were felled in the neighbouring forest, and the Ladoighur (the high road through the forest) was impassable for some time owing to the block of trees across it. Scarcely a building in the garden escaped damage of some sort or other. At Deopany, a neighbouring garden, large pieces of ice are said to have fallen. None of the other gardens appear to have suffered in the least. As the Jhansi Sky Races were fixed for the 23rd and 24th at Tiphook, the cyclone came rather as a wet blanket. The best, however, was made of matters, and a very jolly Sky meeting held notwithstanding the weather, which was stormy throughout. On the morning of the 25th, when the visitors were resting after the dancing, racing and late hours, there came another cyclone as bad as the first, and did almost as much damage. A number of gentlemen who were having breakfast in the tea-house were startled by seeing the iron roof over them carried away, and simply had to rush out and hold on to any thing they could to prevent being blown away themselves. Another iron building was brought to the ground with a crash, and the grass huts which some of the visitors had erected for themselves were simply nowhere. The garden was covered with fallen trees. It was a grand sight to see the bigger ones come crushing down like reeds. The damage done to the leaf was luckily nothing. This cyclone, also like the last, was quite local, as none of the other gardens felt it. A severe storm was reported from Jorhaut a few days back. Altogether the weather in the district has been extremely boisterous, but this has been made up by its having also been wonderfully cool. Fancy the end of May, and punkhas scarcely necessary!

STATION TALK.

UMBALLA, June 2.—A gloom has been cast over this station by the deaths of two officers of the Carabiniers, which took place yesterday—Paymaster and Captain Earle meeting his death by a fall from his horse; he sustained concussion of the brain, from which he died six hours after the accident. The second case was Riding-master Walters, who had been ill with typhoid fever about a month; he died at five p.m., only four hours after Captain Earle. Both officers had only recently joined the regiment; but their loss is much felt by their brother officers. Riding-master Walters was a young man of great promise, a good horseman, and thoroughly understood his responsible duties. Captain Earle, by his cheerful disposition and genial manner had, notwithstanding the short time he had been in the regiment, made himself popular with all ranks. Both officers were buried at the same time this morning, the funeral starting from the late Captain Earle's house. The coffin containing his body was carried on a gun drawn by six horses of the Royal Horse Artillery, the procession being headed by a firing party of 100 men of the Carabiniers with carbines reversed. Then followed the gun carrying the coffin; behind the coffin was the deceased officer's charger, followed by the whole regiment; behind the men coming the officers, juniors in front; and in rear of all, the officers of the station, who came to pay their last respects to the memories of the two deceased. At the gate of the Cavalry Hospital the procession halted to allow the gun carrying the coffin of Riding-master Walters to fall in, his charger being in attendance, when the whole cavalcade again moved on, the band playing, soon after starting, the "Dead March." The cemetery reached, both coffins were removed from the guns and carried on men's shoulders to their last resting-places, the graves being side by side. The funeral service was solemnly and impressively read by the Rev. J. W. Irwin, Chaplain of Umballa, assisted by the Rev. Robert Hine; and then three volleys were fired over the graves, between each volley a flourish of trumpets, the whole ceremony concluding by each man in the regiment passing the graves for a farewell look at the coffins containing their former officers.

Miscellaneous.

ANOTHER NATIVE PRINCE.—The Nawab of Tonk has offered his troops to the Government of India for foreign service. They consist of 2,500 infantry, a battery of artillery and about 500 cavalry.

COLONEL WILLIAMS, R.E., Deputy Secretary of Government in the Railway Branch, is about to take furlough. Colonel J. S. Trevor, of the Bombay Engineers, will officiate for him.

HYDROPHOBIA.—A fatal case of hydrophobia has occurred amongst the 19th Bengal Lancers at Meeran Meer. The victim was a non-commissioned officer, who had been bitten by a dog two months previous to his death.—Pioneer.

OPIMUM REVENUE.—The revenue from three sales of Bengal opium and two months' pass duty on Malwa opium has amounted to Rs. 2,13,83,650, which is Rs. 30,82,650 in excess of the estimated revenue.

DEATH OF CAPTAIN HAMILTON.—We regret to hear of the death at Deoli, on Friday last, of Captain Hamilton, of the 4th Bengal Cavalry. Captain Hamilton was Brigade-Major at the Imperial Assemblage Camp, and has more recently been employed on famine relief duties in Madras. He was a smart and promising officer.

RIVER STEAMERS.—In view of improving the means of communication with Assam, the Government of India have invited tenders for the service of a subsidised fast line of steamers between Dobru-gar and some point near Dhubri; the speed to be fifteen miles an hour, and the time of service five days for the up, and 3½ days for the down voyage.

CIVILIAN'S ALLOWANCES.—Some months ago the Secretary of State sanctioned the grant of graded allowances to civilians in Oudh. The order came at the time in such a shape that it could not be acted on; but the North-West Government has now received from the Government of India an unconditional order granting the allowances to Oudh civilians on the same terms on which North-West Provinces' civilians enjoy them, and with effect from May 1876, when they began to be drawn in the North-West.

TIRHOOT RAILWAY.—Complaints reach the Englishman that the Tirhoot State Railway is far from being such a convenience to the people who make use of its services as a carrier as it ought to be. The indigo planters are particularly indignant at the extreme carelessness displayed in the transit of their last season's indigo. The delay seems chiefly to occur at the two banks of the Ganges, and to be caused by an insufficiency of coolies to remove the packages from the wharves to the steamer, and from the steamer to the train; the work being apparently in the hands of a thickkadar who underpays his coolies. Mofussil residents are also loud in their murmurs, saying that carts sent by them are almost invariably delayed for several days before the expected goods arrive, and they are thereby put to great cost and inconvenience.

A SERGEANT of the Royal Artillery, named Gilbert, nearly lost his life at Quetta on the 31st May. Returning from his duties at the fort to breakfast, and just after he had passed poor Hewson's grave, he heard footsteps behind, and turning round he received a thrust from a fanatic Pathan's knife on the head. No doubt the thrust was aimed at his neck, but from his stopping so suddenly and turning round, it struck his helmet, and only slightly wounded him. The Pathan then closed with Gilbert and threw him, but the Pathan was under, and the Sergeant seized the knife and called for assistance; a mistry of the D.P.W. ran up and gave the fanatic a blow which laid him senseless, and he died a few hours afterwards from the effects of it. He is supposed to have been the father of a man who was recently hanged for the murder of a Kakar of the 32nd Pioneers.

June 12.—Hot westerly wind. Four thousand five hundred persons employed on relief works during week ending May 31. Health good. Prices almost stationary. Agra, June 11.—Still some cholera. Slight west wind. Meerut, June 12.—Weather seasonable. Harvest got in. Prices steady. Bareilly, June 12.—Weather hotter. Harvesting completed. No disease. Kumaun, June 8.—Weather fine and seasonable. Getting hot very rapidly. Lucknow, June 12.—Day and night heat intense. Sitapur, June 12.—No rain. Great heat. Wind west. Fyzabad, June 12.—No rain in week. Winds now easterly and damp. Partabgarh, June 8.—Agricultural prospects ordinary. Summary.—Hot dry weather throughout the province, except Fyzabad. Harvesting completed.

CENTRAL PROVINCES.—The report on the police administration of the Central Provinces for 1877 states that there were 21,262 thefts of all kinds, showing an increase over the year previous of 2,366. Offences relating to coin, stamps, and Government notes numbered one hundred. Four cases of grievous hurt were reported, and the most serious was committed by a head constable, an informer, and two employees of the Barasambar zemindar, who for the sake of extorting confession from an old offender severely maltreated him after hanging him by a rope to the branch of a tree. The amount of property stolen was estimated at Rs. 4,24,649, of which Rs. 1,59,282 were covered. A daring dacoity was committed by some twelve men, who, with lighted torches and armed with matchlocks, entered the house of one Bhugu Gowli, an old man of seventy years of age, and asked him for his money, on the refusal of which they tied him and his son by the heels to a bambo. They were, however, afterwards arrested, but three of them escaped, and one, named Purma, though re-captured, escaped on three different occasions, but was finally caught in January last, and sentenced to seven years' rigorous imprisonment, with a fine of Rs. 100, or in default to one year and nine months more.

THE BARISAL OUTBREAK.—We take these further particulars of the outbreak in the Barisal Jail from the able correspondent of the Indian Daily News, under date June 7:—Careful inquiry has been made into the circumstances and causes of the emeute last Saturday in the jail here. It is not easy for an outsider to get at all the facts with entire accuracy. And even officials who are making the inquiry do not find it altogether an easy task to reach the exact truth. The combination to escape from jail was, it appears, confined to about twenty of the prisoners, who kept their own counsel till the time for action came; most of these were long-term prisoners, though, strange to say, one of them was in prison only for a few months, and had but six weeks longer to remain in confinement. The leader of the party was a notorious character, bold, daring, and reckless; before his first arrest, when pursued by the police, he had resisted them with violence. When the men got out of jail they were soon followed up by the police guard and warders. The first four or five men who had got free from their shackles—the leader being armed with a musket and the others with daos—advanced upon the police, and kept them at bay while their companions broke off their handcuffs and leg irons. Then they retreated, every now and then making a rush at their pursuers, whom they attacked with bamboos, daos, and hammers, used for breaking bricks in the jail, which they had brought out with them; they also used bricks as missiles, hurling them at the advancing police. Thus a sort of running fight went on for some time on the public road. After a time some of the police fired their guns in the air, and then one more adventurous than the rest fired at the escaped prisoners, and one of them was hit, then the guns were fired off more frequently, and the leader was shot down, and others badly wounded. By this time the District Superintendent of Police, who had been summoned from court, where he was prosecuting a case, arrived; he immediately stopped the firing, and ordered his men to remove the caps from the guns. It was then found that three of the prisoners had been killed outright, and three others were severely wounded by the guns, one having a bayonet wound. One of the men got clear off, and has not since been heard of; all the rest, bruised and mangled more or less, and three dead, were brought back to the jail. I understand that forty-seven cartridges in all were used by the police, but how many were used with deadly intent it is not easy to say. The general opinion here is that the police used their fire-arms in self-defence, and that not much blame, if any, is to be attached to them under the circumstances. It was reported at first that Mr. Rochfort, the District Superintendent of Police, gave the men orders to fire; but this is impossible, as he was at the time of the outbreak in the Sessions Court, and the mischief had all been done before he arrived on the scene of slaughter. Mr. F. B. Peacock, the Commissioner of Dacca, arrived here on Wednesday to make an inquiry into the affair. The Inspector-General of Jails, I suppose, will be here soon. The results of this affray might have been more disastrous, if the leader of the prisoners could have found the caps for the police gun which he seized from the sentinel at the gate of the jail. He had, it is said, the leather pouch containing the caps, but could not in his hurry get at them, as they were in an inner pocket of the pouch. He was quite determined enough to have used the gun with deadly effect. Many of the police are much bruised and cut about by the hammers and daos and clubs used against them. When the prisoners in the conspiracy had got outside the jail there was an instant ferment of excitement among the other prisoners, and a number of them made a rush for the gate, and would have got out but for the prompt action of a good-conduct prisoner and two warders, who closed and secured the gate in time to prevent any further escape. Some interesting facts are coming out which will require serious attention hereafter. It is clear that the jail is enormously overcrowded; it ought not to hold more than four or five hundred prisoners, instead of which six hundred and seventy are stowed away in it. A large number of these are among the worst of the criminals of this district, and, having been sentenced to long terms of imprisonment, ought long before this to have been sent away. One of the reasons for detaining them was that no guard of police could be spared to accompany them to Calcutta. The police force in this district has, it appears, been reduced lately from motives of economy. The prisoners have recently been much annoyed about the food, both as to the quality and quantity, supplied to them; they blame the new jailor for this—rightly or wrongly I cannot say. Then, worst of all, an order has recently been issued and carried out here for the cropping of the beards of Mohammedan prisoners. Thus, it happened that venerable and saintly criminals, whose beards reached nearly to their waists, were shorn of their most highly prized passport to the Mussulman paradise. This indignity and deprivation irritated them exceedingly, and probably had much to do with the outbreak.

Madras.

MR. W. A. PORTER, M.A., Madras Education Service, has been appointed to act as tutor to his Highness the Maharaja of Mysor. Mr. Porter is a Cambridge man of the highest academical distinction, as he was a fellow of St. Peter's College and Third Wrangler.

HARBOUR WORKS.—The Madras Harbour works still go on, the harbour slowly creeping out seaward. In March last there was fair weather, and the progress made was, in the Governor's opinion, encouraging. In April, though the fair weather still lasted, some time was lost: for there were not enough blocks of laterite ready. The expenditure up to the end of April almost reached 17½ lakhs of rupees.—Pioneer.

THE MONSOON IN MADRAS.—The telegraphic report of the monsoon in the Madras Presidency, dated the 19th June, states that the monsoon is heavy on the coast, and has fairly commenced in the extreme south of the Presidency. To the east and north it has not yet properly begun; but some rain has fallen everywhere. The monsoon broke at Octacamund very lightly on the 14th, but the rain ceased on the 17th. The fall for three days averaged 40 cents. Prospects are considered to have improved generally, though the season seems late and not quite normal. Prices of rice and dry grain are still rising in most parts of the Presidency. There was an increase last week in the numbers on relief works of 10,000 and a decrease of the numbers on gratuitous relief of 4,000. The numbers now relieved are, on works 135,000, and gratuitous 71,000—total 206,000.—Times of India.

DAK GHARRIES FOR THE NILGIRIS.—The rumour that Government were about to start in competition with the Carrying Agencies from Matapolliem to Ootacamund and Coonoor looks very like truth, as several vans are expected from Madras to be put upon the road, and halting-places of change of horses are being provided with stables for accommodating relay animals. The idea, though not quite fresh, is a very good one, and Government will deserve the lasting thanks of the community. Under present arrangements, one can never tell within a couple of hours when his letters, &c., will arrive. On grounds of humanity, too, it will be as well to abolish the antiquated system of tappal runners. It may be very easy work running to the sound of bells on level roads, but it is quite another sort of business when it comes to trotting up hill. The Carrying Companies deserve dishing, as their charges are very high, and there are no special features to recommend them to preference.—Madras Times.

QUARANTINE RULES.—The quarantine rules for the ports of the Madras Presidency were recently under revision, and the general question has been before the Home authorities. The Secretary of State thinks that whatever rules may be finally settled on, the example of the Bombay Government might, with advantage, be followed in the non-application of quarantine for diseases already established in the country, such as cholera, small-pox, measles, &c., and in its limitation to plague and yellow fever. Measures for guarding against excessive detention, or needless annoyance, in the case of foreign vessels, when it is found necessary to impose quarantine in respect of cholera vessels proceeding to Europe or the Red Sea are also recommended.—Times of India.

MUNICIPAL ADMINISTRATION.—The Times of India states that the general results of Municipality Administration in the Presidency of Madras during the year 1876-77 have lately been reviewed by the Government of India, and have been declared to be decidedly satisfactory. Though the year was one of distress, the Municipal collections of towns in the interior of the Madras Presidency were only 1 per cent. less than those of the preceding year. The average incidence of Municipal taxation is 9 annas 11 pie per head, and nowhere exceeds Rs. 1-3-3 per head except at the Sanitarium of Ootacamund, where it is Rs. 1-15-7. It is a notable fact that barely 10 per cent. of the total available income is spent on executive establishments, while 25 per cent. is spent on conservancy and sanitation, 18 per cent. on hospitals, dispensaries, and vaccination, and 6 per cent. on Municipal schools, most of which are subsidised by grants-in-aid on the payment-by-results system, and at which 18,245 boys and girls are receiving elementary education.

THE GRENVILLE CLUB.—A club has been opened at Bishopville, Vepery, Madras, called the Grenville Club, the President of which is Mr. H. C. Conny, Vice-President Mr. John Upshon, Managing Committee, Messrs. A. J. Atkinson, McDowell, Bigwood, J. Franklin, G. H. Aubrey, E. J. White and Frederick Lavery, and Hon. Secretary T. W. Taylor Wheeler. The object which has been principally kept in view in the formation of this Club is the more general establishment of a mutual and intelligent sympathy among Anglo-Indian young men in Madras. It has been often regretted that no institution exists in Madras in the nature of a club of refined tone where the young men of our colleges and public offices might meet and spend their hours of leisure in congenial companionship and with mutual profit and enjoyment. Such a want the Grenville Club aims at meeting. It contains a library and debating and reading room, where the local journals and some of the best English journals and magazines may be seen. Means of amusement are afforded in tennis and badminton courts, and a billiard table is also to be obtained. Members are elected by ballot.—Madras Times.

COBRA BITE.—A medical student of the Madura Local Fund Board's Medical School, while out on the maidan at Negapatam, heard the hiss of a snake, and immediately took to his heels. He found, however, to his astonishment, that the snake had inflicted a wound on the back of his right foot. The wound consisted of three small cuts running in a parallel direction to each other, from each of which some blood was found to escape. He very promptly put on a ligature above the ankle and hastened to the home of the Civil Surgeon, who kindly attended to him. The doctor united the three incisions by a deep flesh cut, and favoured bleeding by bathing the part in tepid water. This proceeding occupied about thirty minutes, when it was thought expedient to walk him up and down the verandah, while every symptom was carefully noted. His skin at this period was very cold and bathed in perspiration, while his pulse was full and regular and he seemed to be in a state of great mental anxiety. He was kept walking for two and a-half or three hours, during which time one oz. of brandy and thirty drops of strong solution of ammonia was administered every half hour. At the end of the third hour he was allowed to lie down, continued very restless until 2.30 A.M., when he fell asleep, from which he awoke in the morning quite well. This has been an exceedingly interesting case, and justifies the plan of treatment so strongly advocated by Dr. Fayer, namely, that the best treatment in cases of cobra bite is, 1, a ligature above the seat of bite; 2, a free incision; 3, the free use of stimulants, as brandy and ammonia; and 4, to adopt such means as shall encourage bleeding from the part incised. The bite of the cobra is identified by two small punctured wounds about one inch apart, inflicted as it is by the canine or poison teeth of the upper jaw. The dhuboia and some vipers inflict generally four small wounds, arranged in two rows, while non-poisonous snakes inflict eight to twelve wounds, arranged in four rows. So that the case in question looks more like the bite of a viper than that of a cobra, as three distinct and one very indistinct wounds were visible. If death can be prevented by so simple a plan of treatment, and when we come to consider the very high death ratio from snake bite annually, we wonder how it is Government have not devised some plan so that any one may be enabled to adopt the plan of treatment advocated when bitten by a deadly snake.—South of India Observer.

BYCULLA BRIDGE.—We are glad to learn that Government have at last taken active measures to ensure the immediate erection of the long deferred new Railway Bridge at Byculla. The present Byculla passenger station is to be removed, and re-built on another site. The company at first proposed to build the new bridge of a width of fifty feet, and with a gradient of 1 in 40 and 1 in 30. But on the suggestion of Mr. Pedder, the width is to be sixty feet and the gradients 1 in 40 and 1 in 35. The increased cost of the greater width and better gradients is to be borne by the Municipality.—Times of India.

STATION TALK.

BAGDAD.—On the morning of the 16th of April I got back to Bagdad. On the 18th the British Political Agent, Colonel Nixon, paid a round of official visits, and I, as a guest at the Residency, accompanied him. The streets are too narrow and tortuous and uneven to admit of carriages in any case, and too dirty and crowded to make walking at all agreeable or on State occasions even possible. Of necessity, therefore, Colonel Nixon, myself, and the dragoman of the Residency were on horseback. We rode in single file through the streets and busy bazaars, preceded by half-a-dozen stout camasses to clear the way of porters carrying burdens, and laden donkeys, and obstinate mules, so that the cavalcade could get along without being brought to a stand at every step. The British Consul General was, I noticed, saluted with great respect, and even cordiality, by people of all classes and creeds, Mussulman, Christian, and Jewish. The first visit was of course to the Governor-General, Kadree Pacha. His Excellency was at work in his office when we arrived, but came out at once and ushered his visitors into the reception-room. This was a large apartment, plainly furnished in the European style, with the modern divan, which is gradually approximating in height and appearance to the Western sofa. An interpreter was not needed, the Pacha speaking French with facility. After the usual compliments, conversation very naturally turned upon the present phase of the Eastern Question. In an article which he had just read in the Revue des Deux Mondes, the peculiar attitude of England and its causes, as well as its consequences, were very ably examined. Mr. Gladstone's influence was answerable for a good deal, and the vacillation of Lord Derby was also very unfortunate. But the well-established and sound policy of England was to maintain the balance of power in Europe, and she was certain to revert to that sooner or later. Kadree Pacha discussed the question with great good sense and acuteness, and without the least trace of bitterness or heat. I have heard from people not usually given to praising Turkish officials that Kadree is a man of capacity and energy, and, so far as is known, of probity. If he is left five years in the Governor-Generalship he will doubtless leave his mark on the next province committed to his charge. But it is the misfortune of Turkey that no official is sure of his post from month to month, or at all events from year to year, unless he be willing to secure it by bribing those who have the patronage in their gift. And to get the means of bribing others, a man must take bribes himself. This is one of the causes of the laxity and corruption which paralyse the Turkish administration all over the empire, and endanger its very existence. Kadree Pacha is, I am told, setting his face very resolutely against the perfunctory or corrupt performance of public duty, and one cannot but wish him well. He is very active, and has created great consternation by visiting the different departments unexpectedly and overhauling matters on the spot. This is a portentous innovation for a great official in Turkey. Having left the Serai or Government House we proceeded to the Persian Consulate to see Mohamed Ali Khan, the representative of the Shah in these regions. The Persian Consul's national costume is very European in complexion and appearance, and he speaks French perfectly. He told me that he had travelled all over India, having been to Lahor, Delhi, Lucknow, and the other great cities, as well as Bombay. With respect to the pilgrimage of the Persians to the shrines beyond the Euphrates, he said that the conditions which were being negotiated between Turkey and Persia had not yet been finally settled, and that the old rush of pilgrims will not set in until all the difficulties have been removed. From what I hear, I am inclined to think that the Court of Persia is in no particular hurry to remove these difficulties, whatever they may now be. While Col. Nixon was at the Persian Consulate, a singular looking man, wearing an enormous Indian turban, was, at his own request, brought in to see "the English Beg" and ask the "protection of the British flag" in a case which may be mentioned as a sample of the complicated affairs which consuls at Bagdad have sometimes to deal with. Two houses in Bagdad, the property of a former king of Oudh, were sold thirty years ago to a Persian subject. But they were not sold by the King, to whom they belonged, but by his son. The King, when he heard of the sale, repudiated it, but the Persian, having paid his money, kept the houses. In due time the King died, and the two houses with other property fell to forty-seven of his Majesty's heirs. The forty-seven or their representatives have now sent this man with the enormous turban to recover the two houses from the Persian. He is not a British subject, but an Osmanli ; but representing forty-seven British subjects, he claims the protection of the British Political Agent, and asks him to make the Persian give up the two houses. The Persian Consul is, on the other hand, besought by the Persian who paid for the houses to see justice done. But the houses are neither British nor Persian, but Turkish. Therefore the Ottoman Courts must decide the question of their legal ownership. "What is the use of going to the Ottoman Courts without your protection?" said the Osmanli with the Indian turban, when Col. Nixon told him where his legal remedy lay. "If you give protection, it will be all right, but if not the houses will never be got out of the hands of the Persian!" Whereupon the Persian Consul smiled blandly. Possession is nine points of the law in Bagdad as well as elsewhere.—Times of India.

Miscellaneous.

HEALTH.—At a recent Town Council meeting Mr. Kirkham protested against the erroneous calculations of the rate of mortality in Bombay. These have been reckoned on a basis of a population of 650,000 ; whereas there is little doubt that the real estimate of inhabitants might be taken at 800,000.

GOA.—On receipt of an official intimation of the death of the Governor General of Goa, both the Government of Madras and his Excellency the Governor of Bombay addressed letters of condolence to the Government Council of Goa. Sir Richard Temple, after remarking that he had the pleasure of a personal acquaintance with the late Governor, expresses his deep sympathy with the inhabitants of Goa, and says that the untimely death of their Governor has been a calamity to the country. A Lisbon telegram states that the vacant appointment has been offered to Senhor Caetano d'Andrade e Albuquerque, now Governor of Angola.

THE "HOPE BRIDGE."—The Hope Bridge over the Taptee River at Surat has been successfully raised several feet higher than it was before. As the bridge is more than half-a-mile long the feat of raising it was creditable to Indian engineering. The bridge was originally opened for public use by the Hon. Mr. Rogers on the 1st May, 1877; but its height being less than that given in the design of Mr. T. C. Hope, the former Collector, Government ordered that it should be raised to the required height at an additional cost of Rs. 120,000. The Surat Municipality and the Broach Local Fund contributed Rs. 30,000 each to make up the above amount; and the work commenced on the 15th November, 1877, and has now been successfully completed. To celebrate its completion in a fitting manner, Mr. W. H. White, in charge of the bridge, invited a number of European gentlemen to a tea party on June 12, while several native gentlemen were also invited to be present on the interesting occasion. Among the Europeans present were Mr. Ollivant, the Collector, Mr. Scannell, Superintendent of Police, Dr. C. Joynt, Col. Plumer, Captain Relling, Captain Tinley, Lieut. Job, and others. The workpeople had a few hours' holiday, and, in the presence of the assembly, gave ringing cheers for the success which had attended the work on which they had been so long employed.

DEATH OF LIEUT.-COL. T. H. TURNER.—We regret to announce the sudden death by heart disease of Lieut.-Col. Thomas Hawkins Turner, Examiner, Pay Department, which melancholy event occurred on June 18. In respect to the memory of the deceased officer, all the Military Finance Offices were closed. Lieut.-Col. T. H. Turner completed twenty-six years' service on the 12th June. In the early part of the month, he went to Khandalla on ten days' leave, and since his return to Poona complained much of the heat. On the 18th instant he attended office as usual, and left at 4-30 P.M., looking unusually pale, but apparently in his wonted health. In the evening he drove out with Mrs. Turner, and at the usual dinner hour sat down with Mrs. Turner and Major-General Worgan to dine; Lieut.-Col. Turner had partaken of some soup, when feeling a little sick he left the table and went to his bed-room and was in the act of vomiting, when he was seized with spasms, and sank into a chair in which he died within five minutes. The following are the late Colonel Turner's war services:—T. H. Turner served with the Bombay Artillery Persian Expedition 1856-57, in the action at Reshire, surrender of Bushire, advance on Borazjoon, and action at Khooshal (charger killed), served as Deputy Assistant Commissary of Ordnance with the expedition to Mohumra; present on the mortar raft in the attack on Mohumra, and for the last four months of the campaign served as Brigade Major of Artillery (Medal and Clasp.) The deceased officer was buried with full military honours on the 19th inst.—Poona Observer.

THE KHOJAHS.—The following particulars as to the chief actors in the recent murder among the Khojahs are furnished by the Bombay Gazette:—There have been several splits in the Khojah community, of which the acknowledged head is Aga Khan, who is by many believed to be a direct descendant of the Prophet. Within the last six or seven months several young Mohammedans of the Khojah community determined to secede from the main body of their co-religionists, and the result was a great deal of bitterness, which terminated in a tragedy. The seceders, numbering not more than two dozen, we believe, discredited Aga Khan, and the result was that they were excommunicated, so far as Mohammedans can excommunicate each other from caste. The murderer of Hussanbhoy Goolam Sin Jain, mookhie (practically headman), was one of those seceders, and he appears to have incurred the most bitter enmity of those who remained orthodox in the community. A short time ago he was fined Rs. 50 for being concerned in an assault more or less attributable to religious bitterness, and he says that in the course of this week he was served with another summons for an alleged assault he had committed on some members of the Khojah community, and the issue of this summons he appears to have attributed in some way to Hussanbhoy. Hussanbhoy Ghoolam Sin Jain was a mookhie in the Khojah community, and the manager of the Jamatkhanah, a gigantic building near the Babool tank, where the Moguls and Khojahs hold their caste meetings and celebrate those weird Mohurram ceremonies connected with the massacre of Hossein and Haseein. He was at one time a merchant of considerable importance in Bombay, and at the time of his death he was the owner of at least one steamer. Besides his wealth, his position as the trustee of the great Jamatkhanah gave him a position practically at the head of the Khojah community; so that while Aga Khan was the religious leader, Hussanbhoy might be considered as the secular leader. He was a man highly respected for his private character, and in difficulties with the Mohammedan community he was considered a good man to go to by the authorities, who always found him intelligent and willing enough to throw his whole influence into the scale of law and order. Last Mohurram his good offices were solicited, and he gave them cheerfully. He was for many years in Zanzibar, and on the death of the last mookhie of the Bombay Khojahs he was requested to come here and take up the vacant appointment, which he held with much honour till he was murdered. Kuloo Cootie, the murderer, was a broker or dahal, and his friends say that his religious zeal affected his mind. It is certain that he was a bitter opponent of Aga Khan's régime, and it may be that his excommunication by the orthodox Khojahs inspired him with the idea that he could make himself a martyr for the new belief which he and a few of his countrymen had chosen to set up; and reasoning in this fashion he murdered old Hussanbhoy.

BOMBAY UNCONVENANTED SERVICE FAMILY PENSION FUND.—At the annual meeting for the year ending 31st March, 1878, held on the 3rd June, Mr. W. Maidment addressed the meeting as follows :—"The institution in connection with which we have assembled this evening was established in October 1848, close upon thirty years ago, and I think we have reason to congratulate ourselves on the progress which it has made and the success which it has achieved. Now when it is considered that its affairs were not subjected to the scrutiny of an actuary until 1874, and that they then passed through a satisfactory ordeal, I think it will be admitted that much credit is due to the directors to whom the management of its affairs has from time to time been entrusted. I will not anticipate the details which will be laid before you in the annual report, but I may be allowed to say that the capital of the Widows' Branch has been increased since 1st April, 1877, by nearly Rs. 49,000, more than one half of that sum by "Deposits," and the remainder by interest. The amount to the credit of this branch in H.M.'s Treasury has thus been increased from Rs. 3,68,568.13.4 to Rs. 4,17,435.9.0. There has been a net increase of eighteen to our roll of subscribers which on 31st March last numbered 318. There have been six casualties by death, to which extent the widows' pension list has been increased. As a set off against such increase, however, must be taken into account two widows having died during the year. In the Life Assurance Branch there have been three accessions, against one member deceased. The Children's Branch, which is its infancy, does not call for remark beyond noting the gratifying fact, that the Secretary of State for India has authorised 6 per cent. interest being allowed on the balances to its credit. You will observe that the affairs of the institution have been engaging the attention of the Government of India and in view to give effect to their wishes, I have given notice of two motions, which I shall move at the proper time."—Bombay Gazette.

On the 5th ult. there was a disastrous fire in Entally; nearly a thousand huts were burnt down, and five children perished.

EAST INDIA PUBLIC WORKS COMMITTEE.

The examination of Sir William Muir, a member of the Council for India, and a late Lieutenant-Governor of the North-West Provinces, was resumed on Thursday, July 4; Hon. E. Stanhope in the chair, in the absence of Lord George Hamilton.

Sir Wm. Muir, on his first examination, had given evidence on the conditions under which revenue was obtained from the land in the North-West Provinces. It appeared that the chief source of revenue obtained in Sirhind came from irrigation works of modern construction. Before these works—consisting of the Sirhind Canal and a system of smaller canals supplied by the rivers and lakes—were made, very much of the land in this part of India was sterile and unproductive, and consequently no revenue was derived from the hilly country. Sir Wm. Muir now gave evidence regarding the important series of irrigation works that have been constructed and are still in progress. The Sirhind Canal, as stated, is the principal work; other works, being a system of minor canals, have been also constructed by the Government in the course of the last ten years. By the energy of the Government and the activity of the Public Works Department, a wide area of country has become irrigated where before only wells and unused tanks existed. As irrigation in the hills progressed, the soil was opened up to production; cultivation succeeded beyond expectation, and as the result the condition of a poor population became greatly ameliorated. The old wells have been rendered more serviceable, the numerous tanks or reservoirs repaired, and certain new reservoirs constructed. Thus the irrigation of the land has proceeded under circumstances of improvement unknown to the districts before. There is now a large population here which has increased and found employment for their labour by means of the extensive system of irrigation established. The first attempts at irrigation works were made out of local funds. But the Government of Lord Canning, finding that the municipalities raised funds for furthering irrigation in an irregular manner as regarded the settlement rules, came forward and applied the local funds, with the addition of more capital, in extending irrigation on a wider scale than any local means could ever have provided. The result has been that under the direction and management of the Public Works Department, and the assistance of Government capital, the present important and valuable system of irrigation works has been carried out. A once sterile land has been rendered fertile and productive, and revenue obtained where none was ever obtained before. While describing these improvements, Sir William Muir said that, as a late lieutenant-governor of the North-West Provinces, he wished to avail himself of the opportunity to state that the people of the North-West Provinces were most thankful to the Government which had done so much good in undertaking the great public works, by which a class once steeped in poverty was benefited and thriving in their labour.

Sir Wm. Muir proceeded to notice further projects for irrigation undertaken by the Government in the districts he had been referring to. After the last famine in Behar, surveys were made with the view of extending irrigation works, and thus contending against drought and its consequences, famines. The results of the surveys have been the commencement of several new works, including the recovery of a number of neglected tanks to be utilised in irrigating a new sterile area of land. The tanks or reservoirs recovered are situated in the hill districts near the foot of the Himalayas, and may be fed from neighbouring lake districts. Some of these tanks, now again to be utilised, were originally constructed by order of Government about thirty-five years ago; but others are old works once used by the natives, but which lapse of time had allowed to decay.

In furtherance of greater improvements Sir William Muir recommended an extension of the canal system of the country. The chief work of the Sirhind Canal had been constructed for navigable purposes; it had been found therefore an important work in creating traffic by means of the transport of the produce of the districts. There was, the witness said, every encouragement to proceed with the development of communication and traffic in the North-West Provinces; also to proceed with irrigation works. The revenue had increased year by year as the canal system of Sirhind had developed itself, but what was also important was that the material condition of the people had been so rapidly improving under the operations of the public works.

After some further evidence—viz., in regard to the working of the Ganges Canal and the two Jumna canals, and on other subjects, Sir William Muir's examination concluded, and that of Sir Arthur Cotton was resumed; but shortly afterwards the committee adjourned.

The committee again met on July 11, and examined Lord Napier, late Governor of Madras, on the irrigation system of the Madras Presidency, Lord G. Hamilton in the chair. Lord Napier's views and opinions related to the following subjects. He thought that irrigation on a still more expansive system than prevails at the present time should be introduced in the Madras Presidency. It should be now extended more particularly to the prevention of famines. But there are parts of the country where irrigation would be injurious rather than beneficial, as causing miasma or malaria. Those districts are well known. There would be great difficulty and expense in entering upon a general repair of the numberless old and disused tanks or reservoirs of the Presidency. The three great deltas suitable for irrigation purposes are those of the Cauvery, the Godavery, and Kistna. In these districts a system of valuable and productive canal works exist, known as General Cotton's irrigation works. But there are projects before the Government of India for the construction of a series of new and minor canal and other irrigation works. These schemes he (Lord Napier) looked upon with suspicion; at all events the works appeared to be of a very complicated character, and included a too general interference with the tank or reservoir system. To carry out the works proposed in that part of the Madras Delta intended to be operated upon would be an undertaking involving the Government in large expenditure and probable loss. With regard to the further development of the irrigation system in continuation of the Godavery works, that alone would be sufficient for the present to employ all the resources and energies of the Public Works Department, aided as it must be by loans, or the assistance at least of local funds. In the Madras Presidency, besides the canal system in connection with the Godavery, the Kistna and Coleroon rivers, there are minor canals that take their water from the Palar, Pennar, and other rivers; there is also the important work undertaken by the Madras Irrigation and Canal Company. This canal commences in the Tungabudra river at Sunkasala; it will give irrigation as well as navigation to the country between Sunkasala and the sea coast at Nellor. As to the views entertained that the irrigation canals should also be used for navigation, transport, and traffic, he (Lord Napier) thought the projects, in their very inception, antagonistic. Irrigation canals provided good water for the irrigation of the land, but if they were subserved for navigation purposes, the water would become deteriorated, and ultimately the people who required it must find the supply diminished, if not rendered useless, for irrigation and household purposes.

Lord Napier proceeded to state his views for carrying out irrigation works in districts liable to drought and consequent malaria, fever, and famine. The Kistna and Cauvery canal system well deserved attention, and should be completed without delay. The rivers of Burnah were sources from whence canals might spring with great benefit to cultivation and the condition of the labourers in that province. With regard to the re-opening of the tanks of the Madras delta, great caution, as he had already said, must be exercised so that suitable selections should be made. The proposed irrigation works for the interior of the country involved considerations of a complex character, and an expenditure which no possibilities of revenue return could meet. There is, however, one ancient and reservoir project connected with the Ganjam river which deserved the attention of the Government as promising great benefits by an extensive system of storage of the water of the river.

Lord Napier concluded his evidence by recommending the institution of a sinking-fund to meet the progressive cost attendant upon the completion of the large delta irrigation works and the improvement of the tank system of the Presidency.

Miscellaneous.

EXPORT OF SPECIE.—The whole of the £224,583 taken by the Peninsular and Oriental steamer Poonah on Thursday was in dollars, with the exception of £20 in gold coin for Malta; £29,000 being for Penang, £17,333 for Singapore, and £178,230 for Shanghai. The same company's steamer Assam has left Melbourne for Galle with 32,000 ounces of gold and 83,000 sovereigns, together a total of about £211,000.

BILLS ON INDIA.—The tenders for £300,000 in bills on India were received on July 10 at the Bank of England. The amounts allotted were—to Calcutta, £238,800, at an average rate of 1s. 8<sup>0</sup>/<sub>13</sub>d. and to Bombay, £61,200, at an average rate of 1s. 8d. Tenders on both Presidencies at 1s. 8d. will receive about 15 per cent., all above that price in full. The whole of the amount for which tenders were received has again been allotted, and the price obtained is only the merest fraction below last week's.

A COBRA CORPS.—An elaborate plan for the extermination of the cobra has been formally submitted for the consideration of the Government of India by a gentleman living near Chelmsford. The following is a quotation from the official application:—"My suggestion is this—Select a band of native soldiers, men of decision, discreet, and valiant. The exciting warfare in which these men would be engaged, the destruction of the Cobra, would render it of the first importance that they should be protected against both the bite and crushing coil of the creature. This, I further suggest, may be done by means of a cuirass of thick leather covering the entire body, studded with steel spikes about two inches in length. The spikes whilst preserving the men would destroy the enemy, or at least force him to loose his hold, and thus afford the men an easy victory by despatching him. The weapons employed would, I think, for the most part suggest themselves, such as spears, knives, hatchets, revolvers, and what else besides I know not. . . . In order to give freedom to the combatants whilst in action, the leathern dress should be somewhat loose, and the several parts secured by means of thongs, or perhaps straps and buckles. In this matter the wearer would be the best judge. The head, I consider, should be inclosed in a helmet of the same material as the dress with an iron vizor, or thick bent plate glass. In the latter case some means of ventilation would be necessary. I may here perhaps be permitted to mention that a thought came over me to the effect that the climate of India would operate as a bar to men being encased in leather. I expressed this doubt to a soldier who has just returned from India, and who was himself within an ace of being attacked by a cobra. The remarks made to me by this man entirely removed the doubt from my mind."

THE COOLIE TRADE.—On January 25 the Earl of Derby wrote as follows to the Marquis d'Harcourt, in regard to the importation of coolies from India to French Guiana:—"With reference to my note of October 16, and previous correspondence respecting the question of the resumption of coolie immigration to French Guiana, I have now the honour to transmit to your Excellency a copy of the report of her Majesty's Consul at Cayenne on the mortality among Indian emigrants in that colony during the first half of the year 1877. Her Majesty's Government have read with painful interest this report, from which it appears that, notwithstanding the efforts of the Colonial Administration for the welfare of the coolies, the colony still appears, on account of its climate, to be very fatal to the Indian population, and I am informed by the Secretary of State for India that until a diminution of this mortality can be obtained by the supply of a sufficient number of medical men, and by the provision of hospitals on every plantation and placer where a fixed number of emigrants is employed, the Government of India will be unable to permit the resumption of the immigration from that country. With regard to this matter your Excellency will observe that her Majesty's Consul states that Article 31 of the Immigration Act, to whose stipulations he draws attention, is a dead letter. Your Excellency will also observe that her Majesty's Consul draws attention to an article in the Revue Scientifique, entitled "Les Coolies de la Guyanne," from which he gives quotations in translation, which gives a sad description of the condition and treatment of the immigrants, and Lord Salisbury trusts that the attention of the Commission of Inquiry referred to in your Excellency's note of the 25th May last will have been drawn to this article by the French Government, and that the commission will be able to suggest remedies for the evils therein set forth. Lord Salisbury, on the other hand, has expressed his gratification at learning the very favourable results which have attended the efforts of Dr. Francois on the two plantations on which he has been employed; and, as her Majesty's Consul is convinced that the system adopted by that gentleman may well be followed on other estates, his lordship hopes that the proprietors will take advantage of his experience. With regard to the concluding observations of Mr. Woodbridge's report, in which he refers to the measures which should be taken before immigration from India to French Guiana is renewed, Lord Salisbury observes that the French Government is already aware of the requirements of the Government of India on this subject, and he trusts that they are fully alive to their importance."

THE NATIVE PRESS OF INDIA.—On Thursday were issued the protests made by three members of the Council of India, namely—Sir E. Perry, Sir W. Muir, and Colonel Yule—against the Indian Vernacular Press Act. Sir E. Perry considered the Act such a retrograde measure, so much opposed to the large and liberal policy pursued in India for the last fifty years, and so likely to irritate the natives by brandishing before them invidious distinctions of race, that he thought it his duty to struggle to the utmost to get it expunged from the Statute Book. In the first place, he believed there was no immediate danger to the State which called for the passing of the measure at a single sitting. It appeared to him to be quite open to the Secretary of State to say, when it was apparent that there was no pressing danger to be apprehended, that the Act ought not to remain permanently on the Statute Book, and that legislation must be resorted to in order to extinguish the censorship created by the present law, opportunity should be taken, in communication with the Home Government, to frame a Press Law of less stringency. He was further of opinion that any restraint on the native press beyond what was imposed on the European would be injudicious, and that any restraint on either beyond that of the laws was not requisite. Sir W. Muir maintained that a despotic law like that in regard to the control of the native Press of India was only to be justified by some imminent risk or danger, and then only as an exceptional and temporary measure, and that no ground was shown for the apprehension at the present time of any such danger. India was never quieter or more secure; and even under the pressure of new taxation was never more amenable to the Imperial power. The Eastern Question only served to evoke manifestations of dislike towards Russia; and even our unfortunate relations of late with Kabul failed to elicit sympathy with the Ameer. There was absolute tranquillity throughout the land. The thunderbolt startled the nation, falling, as it did, on the Press from a serene and cloudless sky. A further, and, to his mind, a fatal objection was that a law which fettered the native and exempted the English Press was based on hurtful principles. The distinction was invidious, because tending to perpetuate the sentiment already (rightly or wrongly) felt, that our administration was partial and exemptive of the European. It was, moreover, gratuitous, for any measure needed in respect of the native Press was at least equally needed in respect of the English. In conclusion, he adds that the time selected for the measure was singularly inopportune. He (Sir W. Muir) had been told by one who had conversed with them that the administrators of Central Asia were puzzled by our free press in India, which was, in fact, a standing proof of our confidence in the people. We had now, in abolishing it, cast a slight upon our own Administration, and created the impression that we distrusted our native subjects, just at the moment when our free and equal laws, and our reliance on the loyalty of India under them might well have been our special boast. Col. Yule regarded the measure as retrograde, and objected also to the manner in which it had been passed. The measure, he urged, was not good in itself; that is to say, it was suspension of law, and a revolution in policy, without proof, without trial, whether the ordinary process of law, with or without amendment, would not suffice to check the pernicious tone adopted by certain native papers. And the measure assumed an aspect which still less commended itself, in the light of the unusual circumstances which had attended its enactment, circumstances calculated to bar discussion, even in the council, till too late. Mr. R. A. Dalyell did not vote, his reasons for abstaining being that he regarded the Act as in many instances objectionable, that the period selected for bringing it forward was unfortunate, and that the exceptional course adopted in passing the Bill through the Legislative Council in Calcutta was unnecessary.

India in Parliament.

HOUSE OF COMMONS, MONDAY, July 8.—MR. FAWCETT gave notice that on going into committee on the Indian Budget he will move a Resolution affirming the necessity of establishing further guarantees beyond those contained in the Government of India Act for protecting India against being compelled to maintain a larger force than is necessary.

HOUSE OF LORDS, THURSDAY, July 11.—THE JAGHIRE OF BUNGANA-PALLY.—Lord CRANBROOK replying to Lord STANLEY of ALDERLEY, who called attention to the case of the succession to the Jaghire of Bungana-Pally, and moved for papers, declined, having carefully considered the whole of the case, to disturb the decision of the Government of Madras, which had been confirmed by the Duke of Argyll. He could not conceive anything more detrimental to the interest of the native states of India or to the interest of those who thought they had claims that such persons should hang about the Houses of Parliament seeking for that sort of redress which, except in cases of real grievance, was never given. He need not say how much he regretted the absence of the Duke of Argyll, and the cause of that absence, but he trusted he had shown that the present succession was in conformity with the last, and in conformity with Mohammedan usage; and furthermore, there had been no complaint upon the part of the people.—After a few words from Lord NAPIER and ETTRICK, the motion for papers was withdrawn.

HOUSE OF COMMONS, THURSDAY, July 11.—VERNACULAR PRESS ACT.—MR. FAWCETT, who was received with cries of "Oh," asked the Chancellor of the Exchequer whether, in order to secure a full discussion of the motion to be brought forward on Tuesday next by the right hon. member for Greenwich, in reference to the Indian Vernacular Press Act, he would propose a morning sitting for that day. (Renewed cries of "Oh.")—THE CHANCELLOR OF THE EXCHEQUER: I am fully conscious of the importance of the motion to which the hon. gentleman has drawn attention; but in the present state of the Session, and of public business, the Government could not afford to give up Tuesday's morning sitting.

INDIAN TROOPS.—Colonel STANLEY, in reply to Sir G. CAMPBELL, said he believed the committee to inquire into the cost of Indian troops employed in Europe would be nominated nearly next week. As he stated when he assented to the committee, he did not anticipate the inquiry would be of a very prolonged character.—MR. CHILDERS: When will the instructions to the committee be laid on the table?—Colonel STANLEY: The reference to the committee will pretty well cover the instructions.

OCCUPATION OF CYPRUS.—Several questions were put to the Government in reference to the acquisition of Cyprus.—MR. SAMUELSON asked a series of questions as to the roadsteads, the cost of the necessary works, the failure of the crops, &c., to which the CHANCELLOR of the EXCHEQUER, whose return to the House after his recent accident was warmly cheered from both sides, replied that the Government was obtaining information on all these points, and it would be more convenient, therefore, not to attempt an answer now.—In reply to Major NOLAN, Colonel STANLEY stated that the occupying force would amount in round numbers to 10,000 men, and would consist of the Indian troops now at Malta and three British battalions.—In answer to Sir A. GORDON, Mr. EGERTON said that an Admiralty chart showing the harbours on the coast of Cyprus had been hung in the news-room, upon which Sir J. GOLDSMID asked whether there was any harbour in the island, and Mr. EGERTON said that though, technically speaking, there might be no harbour, there were very fair anchorages where troops might be landed with ease.—Sir A. GORDON gave notice that he will ask what number of troops the Sultan has engaged to furnish in the event of the Treaty of Guarantee ever coming into operation, and whether any British troops are to be stationed in time of peace nearer to the Russian frontier than Cyprus.

SCHWEITZER'S COCOATINA

Anti-Dyspeptic Cocoa or Chocolate Powder.

Guaranteed Pure Soluble Cocoa of the Finest Quality,

with the excess of fat extracted.

The Faculty pronounce it "the most nutritious, perfectly digestible beverage for Breakfast, Lunch, or Supper, and invaluable for Invalids and Children."

Highly commended by the entire Medical Press.

Being without sugar, spice, or other admixture, it suits
all palates, keeps better in all climates, and is four times the strength of Coconuts thickened yet weakened with Arrowroot, Starch, &c., and is IN REALITY CHEAPER than such Mixtures.

Made instantaneously with boiling water, a teaspoonful
to a Breakfast Cup costing less than a Halfpenny.
COCOATINA A LA VANILLE is the most delicate, digestible, Cheapest Vanilla Chocolate, and may be taken when richer Chocolate is prohibited.

WHITE'S MOC-MAIN LEVER TRUSS COMPANY (Limited).

WHITE'S MOC-MAIN LEVER TRUSS, Perfected and Exhibited in the Great Exhibition of 1851, is allowed by upwards of 500 Medical Gentlemen to be the most effective invention in the curative treatment of Hernia. The use of a steel spring, so often hurtful in its effects, is here avoided; a soft bandage being worn round the body, while the requisite resisting power is supplied by the MOC-MAIN PAD and PATENT LEVER, fitting with so much ease and closeness that it cannot be detected, and may be worn during sleep. A descriptive circular may be had, and the Truss (which cannot fail to fit) forwarded by post on the circumference of the body two inches below the hips being sent to the Manufacturer.

Mr. WHITE, 228, Piccadilly, London.

Post-office Orders payable to JOHN WHITE, Post-office, Piccadilly.

NEW PATENT.

ELASTIC STOCKINGS, KNEE CAPS, &c.—The material of which these are made is recommended by the Faculty as being peculiarly elastic and compressible, and the best invention for giving efficient and permanent support in all cases of weakness and swelling of the Legs, Varicose Veins, Sprains, &c. It is porous, light in texture, and inexpensive, and is drawn on like an ordinary stocking. Price 4s. 6d., 7s. 6d., 10s. to 16s. each; postage, free.

DR. J. COLLIS BROWNE'S CHLORODYNE.

THE ORIGINAL AND ONLY GENUINE.

CHLORODYNE is admitted by the Profession to be the most wonderful and valuable remedy ever discovered. CHLORODYNE is the best remedy known for Coughs, Consumption, Bronchitis, Asthma. CHLORODYNE effectually checks and arrests those too often fatal diseases—Diphtheria, Fever, Group, Ague. CHLORODYNE acts like a charm in Diarrhoea, and is the only specific in Cholera and Dysentery. CHLORODYNE effectually cuts short all attacks of Epilepsy, Hysteria, Palpitation, and Spasms. CHLORODYNE is the only palliative in Neuralgia, Rheumatism, Gout, Cancer, Toothache, Meningitis, &c.

Earl Russell communicated to the College of Physicians that he had received a despatch from her Majesty's Consul at Manila, to the effect that Cholera has been raging fearfully, and that the ONLY remedy of any service was CHLORODYNE.—See Lancet, 1st Dec., 1864.

CAUTION.—BEWARE OF PIRACY AND IMITATIONS.

CAUTION.—Vice-Chancellor Sir W. PATER Wood stated that Dr. J. COLLIS BROWNE was, undoubtedly, the inventor of CHLORODYNE: that the story of the Defendant, Freeman, was deliberately untrue, which, he regretted to say, had been sworn to.—See Times, 13th July, 1864.

Sold in bottles at 1s. 1½d., 2s. 9d., 4s. 6d., and 11s. each. None is genuine without the words, "Dr. J. COLLIS BROWNE'S CHLORODYNE" on the Government Stamp. Overwhelming Medical Testimony accompanies each bottle.

Sole Manufacturer, J. T. DAVENPORT, 33, Great Russell-street, Bloomsbury, London.

Summary and Review.

OUR latest advices by the Overland Mail are, from Bombay, June 28; Allahabad and Madras, June 26; Calcutta, June 25.

THE more recent news given by the Times telegram of 14th inst. reports heavy rainfall throughout Rohilkund, and a fair rainfall throughout most districts of the N.-W. Provinces and Oudh. More rain is still wanted in some districts; from Madras rain is reported, and everywhere the prospects have slightly improved.

FROM the Bombay papers we learn that the monsoon has at length set in there, and a corresponding reduction in the temperature proved very grateful after the excessive heat of the previous fortnight. There has been a good supply of rain, about fourteen inches having falling. According to the latest weather reports, the rains appear to be setting in all over India. The report of June 25, states that the temperature is diminishing, and the humidity increasing rapidly in the North-Western Provinces. There has been heavy rain at Akyab and Darjeeling, and moderate rain in Western Rajpootana; slight rain in Bengal, Behar, and the Central Provinces. The telegraphic weather report of the 26th is as follows:—"Barometer rising over the whole of India, except Assam, Behar, and Madras. Easterly winds over the North-West Provinces and at Lahor. Moderate rain in Bombay, the Central Provinces, Bengal and Assam. Weather showery and squally in the North-West Provinces. Two inches of rainfall at Bareilly, one at Lucknow, fourth-tenths at Roorkee, two-tenths at Allahabad."

THE weather of the last fortnight observes the Englishman, of June 25, has already proved sufficiently abnormal to make any reasonable forecast regarding the probable character of the monsoon specially interesting. While the monsoon had prevailed all along the Western Coast of India for the past ten or twelve days, and has also reached the Eastern Coast of the Bay of Bengal, the only rain worth speaking of which had yet fallen in Calcutta had come with storms, partaking rather of the character of north-westers, while nowhere on the West Coast of the Bay had there been anything like monsoon weather. Considerable quantities of cloud had passed over from the south-east, but they appear to have been exhausted on their way up the Bay. The peculiar character of the season would seem to have attracted the attention of the Meteorological Department, and an important notice by Mr. John Eliot has been published in the Gazette of India regarding the probabilities of the coming monsoon. Judged by present meteorological observations and experience of recent years, he regards the conclusions as only partially trustworthy owing to the insufficiency of the data. The conclusions are, first, that a persistent excessive pressure over Northern India at the present time tends to diminish the baric gradient between Southern Asia and the mid-Indian Ocean, and if this is not compensated by increased pressure over the sea area to be South of India the monsoon current will be below its average strength. Secondly, that as there appear to be no strongly marked abnormal variations of pressure over Northern India, it is therefore probable that the rainfall will be much more equally distributed than last year. Thirdly, comparing the present year with 1865, it is probable that the heavy rainfall during the cold weather, and more especially in May, will slightly retard the advent of the monsoon in Upper India. Fourthly, the probable effect of the relatively low pressure along the Bombay coast cannot be determined except by comparison with last year; but it appears to promise fairly abundant rain over that portion of the country.

THERE were on the 26th ult. 96,000 people receiving Government relief in the North West Provinces and Oudh. The distress is reported to be increasing.

THE first set of telegraphic weather reports from fifty stations were despatched to Simla on Saturday, 22nd of June. The Daily News finds them too lengthy, and suggests condensed forms for the journalists, according to Presidencies.

THE Indian Daily News announces with regret, the death of an old and valued native officer, Subadar-Major Dabedeen Misser, of the 16th Lucknow regiment, now quartered in the Fort. Dabedeen Misser joined the service in August, 1840; he was all through the siege of Lucknow, and had his breast covered with medals; he also won the Order of Merit, and served as extra Aide-de-Camp to His Excellency the Commander-in-Chief at the Imperial Assemblage.

A REUTER'S telegram from Malta, dated yesterday, July 18, states that [the Himalaya, with Sir Garnet Wolseley and Staff, the 42nd Regiment, and part of the 101st on board; the Tamar, conveying the 71st Regiment and the remainder of the 101st; and the Orontes, with the Indian Staff and part of the 26th Regiment, proceeded for Cyprus. They were accompanied by the steamers Madura, Goa, Malda, Bengal, Suez, Nankin, and Marina, and five sailing transports, taking one battery of field artillery, the Bombay Lancers, and the 9th, 13th, 25th and 31st Regiments. The embarkation was effected expeditiously and without difficulty, the only mishap being the detention of the transport St. Osyth, with the 2nd Goorkhas on board, in consequence of her coal bunker catching fire. She will proceed to-morrow with the Macedonia, Trinacria, Brambletye, and Duke of Athol, which convey the commissariat stores, together with a supply of ponies, mules, and Maltese carts. A second battery of field artillery, the Bengal Cavalry, and the rest of the 26th Regiment remain for the present, until the transports can return and take them up. It is estimated that 7,000 troops and 1,000 followers were embarked. The transports Baron Colonsay and Hannibal have left for Plymouth with time-expired men and invalids. The Times correspondent adds that forty-eight men of the 9th Bengal Cavalry are sick through poisoning by carbolic acid, served instead of lime-juice from mislabelled boxes. The heat in the tents here is oppressive. Fear is entertained that the suffering may increase in the greater heat of Cyprus. There is a deficiency of hospital marquees. The Commissariat Officer of Cyprus telegraphs that he has arrived, and that the land transport is plentiful and cheap also.

We have the pleasure to announce that Mr. Francis H. Pryce, formerly of the Military Depot, India Office, has been appointed agent at Portsmouth to the Secretary of State for India.

THE numerous aspirants for service or employment in reformed Asia Minor will find a useful preparative in a manual of the Turkish language by Captain C. F. Mackenzie, late of Her Majesty's Consular Service, which is about to be published by Messrs. Allen and Co.

THE Famine Commission have issued an exhaustive series of questions, to which answers are invited from all who can furnish information, whether officially addressed or not. The questions are included under four chapters. The first deals with the condition of the country and people; the second with relief measures, during the earliest stages of distress; the third with famine relief, both by provision of labour for the able-bodied and of gratuitous aid to all unable to work. The great question of means of prevention of famine, especially by irrigation, is the fourth and most important.

THE Governor of Madras has shown a provident care to be in readiness for any possible demand on the relief resources in case of the present monsoon proving a failure. The Bombay Gazette gives an instance of this. In the Locomotive Department of the Madras Railway there are about a dozen engine drivers who came out on a special one-year's covenant in August last. Their services were specially required in the transport of the immense quantities of grain up-country, and although these men will complete the terms of their covenant in a month's time, the Duke wishes to allow them to continue in the service for three more months, in view to arrangements being made for their extended employment in the country. This looks as if he means to take time by the forelock, and be ready for an emergency.

A MINUTE of Forest Conservancy in the Deccan has been recently issued by Sir Richard Temple as the result of his sojourn at Mahableshwur. The principal fields in which he believes that the district collectors, in conjunction with the forest officers, might, by preserving or increasing the vegetation, increase the regular supply of water, are thus described:—

The points to which additional attention should be directed seem to me to be the protection of the forest, the jungle, and the vegetation—Firstly, on the water-shed line of the Sahyadri range, commonly known as the Western Ghats; secondly, on the springs, sources, and head-waters of the rivers which spring from that range; thirdly, on the top ridges and upper slopes of the cross ranges of hills which branch off eastwards from the main range of the Sahyadri. As regards the first point, the water-shed which really divides the Deccan from the Konkan is always to be traced as a clear line of physical geography, and is spoken of by the hill-people as the "Ghat Matha." It supplies the sources of all the rivers that flow eastwards through the Deccan. It is naturally clothed with forest and undergrowth, preserving the moisture which is ultimately to feed the river-courses with water. For the sake of these rivers, then, and of all the great interests depending on the rivers, it is necessary that the vegetation, trees, and brushwood on the ridge of the water-shed, and on the steep side on the eastern slope especially, should be most carefully preserved. The western slope may be indeed of equal importance; that, however, affects the Konkan, whereas it is the Deccan which we are now considering.

A careful regard to the interests of the cultivators is shown in the remarks as to preserving inviolate the villagers' tenure of lands. The over-zealous foresters are warned to protect all private rights in the lands which may be for the public good brought under the forest conservancy, and to arrange that all the reasonable requirements of the people in the jungles shall be satisfied.

THE report of the Administration of Bhopal in 1875 written by H.H. the Nawab Shah Tehaw Begum, K.C.S.I., and recently translated, contains some sensible reforms, as well as wholesome specimens of what may be called maternal, if not grandmotherly legislation. The influx of Arabs into Bhopal was checked; the villagers were forbidden to throw their dead into the Nerbudda; the reward for killing a tiger was raised from Rs. 5 to Rs. 10; some obstacles were put in the way of usurious money-lenders, and a rule was laid down "enjoining that if children having jewels on their person be allowed to go about without proper protection, the officers of the State are empowered to confiscate the jewels." Some rules aimed at gamblers and other immoral people should be a warning to offenders in British India. Punishments were provided "for the offences of gambling and indulgence in intoxicating drugs, &c., and for the commission of lawless acts." And a new section was added to the Bhopal Code of Criminal Procedure, providing for the dismissal of public servants who had been twice convicted of gambling, or of the other offences.

THE Deccan Herald states that the British Government have presented to the Maharajah Holkar three hundred and sixty square miles of land in the Khandesh Zillah, in honour of the Assumption of the title of Empress of India by the Queen of England, at the Delhi Assemblage. There had formerly been a dispute between the Maharajah Holkar and the British Government about this land, which was decided to belong to the latter. It has, however, been most gracefully handed over to the Maharajah as the gift of the Empress of India.

RECENT reports from Cabul state that the Ameer has been much perplexed by a message from the Russians, that they propose to send an Envoy of rank, on a special mission to his Court, and request that he may be suitably received. The Ameer, while awaiting the counsels of his Durbar, has sent his usual reply, requesting that no European officer be sent into his country, as the people are disorderly. Some fanatic or enemy of the Ameer might harm the Envoy.

It is reported from the frontier that Bahu Khan, a resident at Peshawur, has been arrested at Cabul as a foreign spy, and shot by the Ameer's order; also that the Ameer intends to inflict a heavy punishment on the tribes who lately refused to pay the State revenue and the poll-tax.

A HORRIBLE murder was committed on Sunday June 23, at Neriad, between Baroda and Ahmedabad. A gosain (religious mendicant and fanatic) seized a boy from amongst several of his play-fellows and stabbed him in the throat, and afterwards tore out his entrails, which he positively commenced eating before assistance arrived in answer to the calls of the poor boy's comrades. The murderer made no resistance, but calmly told his capturers that the boy was an enemy of his god Rama, and he was moved by the god to kill him.

EXTRACTS quoted from more than a dozen native journals by the Times correspondent show that the Vernacular Press has united in a chorus of enthusiastic rejoicing over the employment of our Indian contingent. The opposition of Mr. Fawcett "as a well-wisher of India" has caused great surprise; but the Education Gazette expresses still more astonishment that Mr. Bright, among others, attacked the participation of Indian troops in European war, and is surprised to see "excellent and wise Englishmen evince a kind of disgust for people of another religion."

AN exception to the general jubilation of the Vernacular Press has been found in the person of the proprietor of the Kiran, a native paper published in Pana, who was called up by the Collector of Puna for publishing certain articles on the Indian Expeditionary Force, which were hostile to Government. The proprietor was warned by the Collector not to publish such articles in future, and discharged.

THE River Steam Company have lost the flat Arracan at the junction of the Bhola and Mamkhola rivers. She was being towed up to Assam by the Company's new steamer Cashmere, which left Calcutta on the 4th instant. She struck a snag at the mouth of the Bhola river, and in four hours was under water. It is said there is very little chance of being able to raise her, and we hear that only 100 packages of cargo were saved.

TENDERS for the lease of the great Coco Island have been invited by the Governor-General in Council, to be sent in within one year from June 4. The term of lease will be not exceeding fifty years, at a rent not less than one-sixth of the gross produce. The lessee will, in addition, defray the expense of maintaining peace, and administering justice; this expense is guaranteed not to exceed Rs. 20,000. The lessee will not, however, exercise any patronage, as the Government will appoint all officials. The profits will arise from the produce of the soil, subject to the maintenance of the same number of cocoa-nut trees as may be growing when the island is handed over, the exclusive right of fishing for one mile from high-water mark, and the use of timber, stone, &c. English speculators will find all particulars in the Gazette of India of June 15, and can send their tenders to the Secretary of State.

It is said that an unusual number of courts-martial are taking place at Mooltan. Four district courts are now in course of procedure, a general court is threatened, and there are sundry prisoners whose cases may probably lead to the assembly of other tribunals of a similar character. An extraordinary amount of military crime accruing at any particular time should always be made a matter for inquiry, for the removal of its causes generally demands an exercise of common sense only, while the causes themselves cannot be neglected without danger.

In reference to the brief discussion on the officering of the Native army, the Globe points out a vital difference between the old irregular system and the new staff corps plan. Under the old regime a young officer appointed to an irregular regiment, was certain to remain in it many years; he thus became personally acquainted with his men, and they with him; now the officers are constantly shifted from one corps to another; and thus the strong personal ties between the European officers and the Sepoys are wanting.

A LETTER from Dehra mentions a wonderful bag of tigers lately made in the Nepaul jungles by "Mr. Wilson: Shikari Wilson who with his two sons and Mr. Peach returned in May from a very successful tiger-shooting trip across the Sarda, via Bunbussa, in the Nepaul jungles, where they accounted for sixteen tigers and captured a ferocious cub. The cub was offered to the Calcutta Zoological Gardens; the authorities are said to have accepted the gift, on condition that the playful pet was delivered at the donor's expense f.o.b. the gardens!

VISITORS to the Westminster Aquarium who have delighted in watching the graceful movements of the maiden ray-fishes, have little thought that skates are fond of oysters, and show a decided taste for pearls. The Ceylon Times states that great destruction has been caused on the pearl banks by the inroads of the skate, "a large voracious fish, provided with powerful and capacious jaws, which it employs in crushing oysters in order to feed on the flesh of the bivalves. We learn that so destructive have these creatures proved on the south coast of India, that the expected pearl fishery at Tuticorin will not come off, the whole of the deposit of oysters on the banks having been destroyed. When Captain Donnan was engaged in his recent examination of the Aripo banks, he found a large number of boats crews busily engaged fishing for skate, which they had caught in great numbers, some of them measuring six feet in length and three feet in thickness, veritable monsters of the deep. We should think it would be well if Government would give all the encouragement in its power to this skate fishery, as independently of the numbers taken, there is no doubt that the fishermen scatter the shoals of these fish and send them in other directions, by their nets and lines.

Mechanics' Institute, 1877-78 was held on June 19, when Mr. Selim Solomon presided, and there was a pretty good attendance of members. The committee's report was adopted, and the accounts for the past year were approved and sanctioned. The thanks of the members were voted to the office-bearers. It was resolved to keep the reading-room open at night during the monsoon months from June 15 to September 15th. It was also resolved to admit soldiers and sailors as readers, provided they be duly recommended by their respective commanding officers, at a reduced rate of subscription—namely, four annas per mensem; and that the Institute be closed on Christmas Day and Good Friday. A gold medal of the Institute was awarded to Mr. W. Adams for his essay on the "Utilisation of Solar Heat;" a silver medal and a premium of Rs. 150 to Mr. P. R. Colah for his essay on "the Cotton Factories in India;" and a silver medal and a premium of Rs. 150 to Mr. Dorabjee Bhickajee Rabadina for his design of a bridge. The proceedings, terminated with a vote of thanks to the Chairman.

THE Burmese have gone in for a novel way of swindling the new railway and supplying rolling-stock on their own account. A short time ago, a trolley made wholly of wood, body, wheels, and axles, was discovered somewhere on the railway, the Burmese using it for carrying bamboos and merchandise. The wonder is that it was not smashed by a train, which would have caused a serious accident. It has been a source of wonder among the officers of the line how an accident has not happened.

THE readiness of the natives of India to copy European customs, received a new illustration at Trincomalee. According to the Ceylon Times correspondent, two enterprising young gentlemen of Trincomalee had a pony tandem out for the first time. The novel arrangement evidently struck the native mind, for on the following Sunday a native had one out also. The wheeler was an enormous coast bullock, the leader a most Lilliputian donkey. This turnout was driven in triumph round the esplanade, and then two or three times past the house of the gentlemen to whom the proper tandem belonged.

WE have been favoured with the perusal of the journal of an unconscious pioneer of the future overland route, which was published in London for T. Kinniersley, in 1758, a hundred and twenty years ago. Mr. Bartholomew Plaisted, in the East India Company's service, made a journey from Calcutta to Busserah, and thence across the great desert to Aleppo, and from thence to Marseilles, and so to England. He embarked at Scanderoon on board a French vessel, which touched at Cyprus, and afforded the observant traveller time enough to record his impressions of the island, supplemented by the remarks of a traveller of great credit, and that of Mr. Drummond, who had made the tour of the island." His head-quarters were at Larnica, a place of great trade, a mile from which is Salines, so named from the lakes where the Venetians manufactured salt, but the containing walls had decayed, and the salt was so mixed with dirt as to be almost valueless. The air about Larnica is described as "so impregnated with salt that it even sticks to the skin of the inhabitants." A noteworthy phase of Turkish rule is given in the mention of the aqueducts constructed by Bekier Bashaw, at a vast expense, to bring water from a distance of six miles to the city. They were not finished for three years after the resignation of this improving Pacha, though he had left money for the purpose.

THE general description of the Cyprus of that time is of a mixed character. "The air is far from being good, though very temperate, or rather it is very unhealthy. The inhabitants are very fond of good living and great haters of labour; the soil produces spontaneously whatever is sown wherever there is any moisture, so that the natives, if industrious, might make the island a perfect paradise, the want of rivers being sufficiently supplied by springs, rivulets, and winter rains. As a drawback, it is confessed that the water is brackish, and that the country is sometimes infested with locusts, which consume everything that is green on the island." Nevertheless, the tourist describes a succession of fertile and beautiful spots. Nicosia, with its plantations of olives, almonds, oranges, lemons, mulberries, and cypress interspersed among the houses, the silk gardens of Chitty, the lands watered by the river Gamba, where he met with the perfume of roses, honeysuckles, and aromatic shrubs, and the valley of Sollia, with its pleasant villages and well-wooded hills of citron, "one continued chain of gardens," watered with living streams. Thus he passed through everywhere rich and "extremely pleasant country," and everywhere found the ruins of ancient greatness or piety; often, indeed, only the sites of former renowned temples, as that of Queen Venus on Mount Olympus, and traced the imperishable track of Rome in the causeway to Salamis and Famagousta.

Odds and Ends.

THE REV. T. A. C. PRATT and the Rev. Barry O'M. Deane have been permitted to retire from the Madras Ecclesiastical Service on a pension each of £365 per annum.

It is said that Dr. Burnell of Madras is about to be relieved of his official duties for a short period, in order to enable him to resume the compilation of his catalogue of the manuscripts in the Tanjore Library, a work which is yet far from completion.

THE REV. W. ELLINGTON, a very zealous Missionary of the Church Missionary Society's Telugu Mission, died on the 13th June at Bezvara, aged forty-four.

COLONEL J. F. TENNANT, R.E., is confirmed in the office of Mint Master of Calcutta from the date on which Colonel Hyde retired.

RAJA KALI NARAYAN RAI, Bahadur, the well known zamindar in the Dhaka district, died suddenly on June 16.

It is said that fever prevails in Swat to a great extent this year.

MR. B. RATTRAY, District Superintendent of Police at Maldah, has been transferred to Birbhum, and Major R. M. Skinner, from Muzaffarpur, is transferred to Shahabad.

CAPTAIN FEATHERSTONHOUGH, R.E., Director of Torpedo Operations to the Government of India, has arrived in India and been attached to the Adjutant-General's Department, with the rank and pay of Assistant Adjutant-General.

THE local paper says that red spider had been largely on the increase in many of the hill gardens near Darjiling, during the past fortnight, but it was hoped that the rains, which had apparently set in, would get rid of the pest.

THE annual distribution of prizes and diplomas to the students of the Medical College and Campbell Medical School came off on June 15th and was a great success.

THE Metropolitan left Calcutta, on tour, on the 24th ult. His lordship will spend a month at Nynsee Tal, Raneekhet, and Almorah, and then proceed to Rajpootana, Central India, and the Central Provinces.

THE Government of India have sanctioned the appointment of Mr. J. Westland, C.S., Inspector of Local Account Offices, to examine and audit the accounts of the Bank of Bengal, as has been done in the case of other Presidency Banks.

THE BISHOP OF COLOMBO has been pleased to appoint the Venerable Walter Edmund Mathew, M.A., Archdeacon of Colombo, as his Lordship's Commissary during his absence from the island.

THE Allypore College is now in a flourishing condition. It had a few years ago about fifty students and now it has one hundred and fifty-eight. The expenses of the College are about fifteen thousand rupees per annum.

THE classes for Sub-Lieutenants at Lucknow and Sealkot will be closed at an early date. Captains Gunter, Parker and Morris, Assistant Garrison Instructors, have been instructed to rejoin the head quarters of their respective regiments.

A STRANGE item of news is reported in a Ceylon paper from Kurunegala, the chief town in the North-West Province. A rumour having been spread that the names of the natives were taken down with a view to enlisting them in case of war with Russia, most of the villagers abandoned their homes, hiding their property in the jungle.

THE spidant "Hon. Mrs. Yelverton," who was in the East some years ago on literary adventures bent, is once more in the tropics. She has arrived at Colombo.

INFORMATION has reached Madras of the death, from dysentery, of Mr. W. R. Kershaw, B.A., Inspector of Schools, of the First Division.

A PROPOSAL has been made by the Mint Master of Bombay to increase the size or extend the area of the Mint, and arrangements are being made with the authorities of the Port Trust for a plot of land adjoining.

FROM Bangalore we learn that the past few days have been marked by violent wind. The rains which ought to have come down abundantly by this time are still keeping back. The ryots' prospects are still dubious.

THE church at Kandy was broken into on June 12 and the poor box carried bodily away. This makes the second robbery in the week, a coat having been stolen from the vestry during divine service on Sunday.

THE native merchants and tradesmen of Calcutta held a meeting in the Town Hall on Wednesday, 19th ult., to protest against the License-tax. They have formed themselves into a native Trades Association.

IN the first four weeks of May last, as compared with the corresponding period of last year, the quantity of wheat carried by the East Indian Railway shows a decrease of 12,200 tons, representing a diminution of Rs. 2,72,700 in the receipts.

THE resignation of her Majesty's Bengal Civil Service by Messrs. H. Bell and W. Le F. Robinson is notified in the Gazette of India.

THE Calcutta and Darjiling Carrying Company have reduced the rates of freight for tea between Darjiling and Siligori.

ONE Abbas Khan, who has been found guilty of raiding upon the Panjab Frontier, has been ordered by the Government of India to be detained as a political prisoner.

ON the 20th ult. no less than eighteen natives fell down dead in the streets of Allahabad City, through heat apoplexy; even cattle and horses were affected.

ACCORDING to the latest reports from Nepal, dated the 11th of June, rain had done good to the rice and Indian corn. The weather was threatening, and there were signs of the monsoon.

THE stocks of rice in Calcutta and the immediate neighbourhood are lower than they have been since the end of last year. Out of about seven and a half lakhs of maunds in hand, seven lakhs are reckoned as available for exportation at sea.

A MILITARY SCANDAL.—The Delhi Gazette is responsible for the following strange story from a neighbouring station, of a colonel in command, having used personal violence towards a Station Staff Officer. If the story be true, the particulars are these:—The Colonel was enraged at the omission from the order-book of some order to which he attached importance. The "Station Staff" denied that he had received any such order. The colonel in his anger used unparliamentary language: the station staff asked permission to retire. The colonel seized the sword of the station staff: the station staff declined to surrender it. The colonel seized the station staff by the collar: the station staff lost sundry buttons and his helmet. The colonel tried to snatch away certain books: the station staff would not give them up. The colonel ordered a native orderly to arrest the station staff: the orderly did not obey. The station staff went home, and was placed under arrest. We hope the story as it reaches us is exaggerated. If not, a very pretty military scandal has cropped up, for which the weather must be, in some measure, held responsible. We have names and other particulars, which we think it advisable to suppress for the present.—Indian Daily News.

COURT-MARTIAL.—At a general court-martial assembled at Umritsur, on May 11, gunner J. Watt, of No. 10 battery, 9th brig. R.A., was arraigned on the following charges:—First charge: With insubordination, accompanied with personal violence, in having, at Fort Govindgarh, Umritsur, on or about the 21st April, 1878, used violence against acting bombardier Edward Wyatt, of the same battery, by striking him in the face with a knife, and therewith wounding him; and in having therewith afterwards wounded the said acting bombardier in the hand, the said acting bombardier Edward Wyatt being his superior officer, and being in the execution of his office. Second charge: With having at Fort Govindgarh, Umritsur, on or about the 21st April, 1878, been drunk.—Finding: The Court finds that the prisoner is guilty of both charges.—Sentence: The Court sentence the prisoner to suffer penal servitude for the term of five (5) years.—JOHN A. ANGLO, Col. R.A., President.—Umritsur, May 11.—Approved and confirmed: The graver part of this offence would not have been committed had acting bombardier Wyatt discharged his duty in a strict and correct manner. The prisoner is a young soldier, and his character has hitherto been "fair;" I therefore commute the sentence of five years' penal servitude to one of two years' imprisonment with hard labour.—FRED. P. HAINES, Genl. C-in-C. in India, Simla, May 24.

CASUALTIES BY DEATH IN THE INDIAN SERVICES, &c., REPORTED SINCE LAST PUBLICATION.

H.M.'s BRITISH FORCES IN INDIA.—Capt. R. Stratford, 1-6th regt., at Delhi, June 12. Lieut. Col. H. D. Jackson, Retired List, R.A., Kashmir, June 9. Capt. Joseph Hogarth, late 43rd L.I., at Grange, Edinburgh, July 11. Colonel Arthur Leahy, Royal Engineers, at Netley, July 13.

THE NEW OVERLAND ROUTE.

THE move on the Asiatic chess-board, which was our reply to the advance in Armenia, has been at once met by a far distant countermove. According to the Temps, General Kauffmann's plan of campaign in Central Asia will be carried out as Russia's reply to the Cyprus Treaty. The troops left Tashkend on the 11th ult., and may now be understood as on the march, not indeed to invade India, but to occupy a region which will bring them nearer to it, that is Bokhara, and the country up to the foot passes of the Hindu Koosh. "It is a far cry to Lochow," involuntarily occurs as a comment on the news, if true; but what, more probable, nay certain, that as we openly strengthen our means of access to India, on the one hand, and on the other oppose a barricade to Russian advances in Southern Asia, our Asiatic rival will clear the ground, and advance her outposts in Central Asia? We have advanced a castle to the Cyprus square, the opposing player has moved forward a knight ready to take advantage of any opening. What is our next move? Leaving the Metaphor, what may be looked for as the utilisation of Cyprus towards the strengthening of our Asiatic Empire? We are not concerned now with the tempting prospects of rich mines to be worked, or fertile lands to be cultivated. It is no question of limited companies to yield large dividends, or posts, civil and military, to be filled by some of the hundred expectants who now think of nothing but Cyprus. Our occupation of the island as a military post can hardly be said to strengthen the defences of the Armenian frontier. Were England to be called upon to carry into effect her guarantee, and send an expedition to oppose the invaders of Asiatic Turkey, this could scarcely be the base of operations, so at least military critics have pointed out. We referred last week to the strangely prescient discussion introduced by Sir F. Goldsmid, which revived the question of an alternative route for our Indian communications. At the time the uncertain eventualities of the position caused him to speak of what would be desirable in case of a Russo-Turkish convention. Sir A. Kemball, combating the proposed line from Tripoli to the Persian Gulf, advocated our "turning our attention to Egypt," in other words, we presume, taking military possession of their country, so as to become guardian of the Suez Canal.

The Times in an able, though adverse article, doubted whether "it was worth while to throw ourselves into the jaws of Turkey, on the assumption that the Czar and the Sultan might some day unite to deprive us of India." The Anglo-Turkish convention so changed the condition of things, that in perusing the controversy of last month we seem to be reading an appendix to the Report of 1872. Respect for the feelings and interests of our neighbours has forbidden us to touch Egypt. The Suez Canal, so far as we are concerned, runs the same risks as before. We have not thrown ourselves into the jaws of Turkey, but we have taken her Asiatic existence under our wing, and the probability of having either to negotiate with the Sublime Porte for a railway concession, or fight with the Ottoman assailants of the constructed line to India may be looked on as a past-away dream. Yet it seems more than ever necessary that the long-talked of, much recommended, and hitherto neglected Euphrates Valley Railway should at once be seriously taken in hand; whether we regard the due development and consequent consolidating of Asia Minor, or more selfishly think only of our own Indian interests. We are not going to discuss the rival routes, which are the same as those whose relative merits were considered by the Select Committee in 1872. These were a line starting from Alexandretta, formerly known as Scanderoon, or from Suedia, at the mouth of the Orontes, passing through Aleppo to the Euphrates at or near Taber Castle, and so by the right bank to the port of Grane, or Koweyt in the Persian Gulf. 2nd. The line approved of by Sir F. Goldsmid, starting from Tripoli, and proceeding by Palmyra, Homs, and Damascus to the Euphrates. Against these Euphrates routes were advocated the Tigris Valley route, with the same starting points, but making a detour either by the right bank or the left bank of that river, tapping the line of traffic at the old emporium of Baghdad. The upholders of both these rival plans or groups of plans eschewed the heavy and unremunerative task of the long land line by the coast of the Persian Gulf to Karachi; nor did they consider it within their scope to deal with the opening up of the internal communications of Asia Minor. At that time (1872), the administrative system, and the financial resources of Turkey had not collapsed, and a Turkish guarantee was regarded as a safe security. [We have good hopes that there will soon come a time when that will be the case, but it will be the result of the improvements that follow on the track of the iron horse. The commercial advantages of the longer Tigris route were weighed indeed against the gain in distance, and so in time, of the shorter Euphrates Valley line; but the cheapness and natural advantages of the latter when taken together with the saving of distance, estimated at 723 miles, and at the least ninety-two hours, between London and Bombay, turned the scale in its favour. The relative difficulties of the pestilential marshes and the Beilan Hill, of Alexandretta, then as now, had to be compared with the cost of making a harbour at Suedia, so as to gain the engineering facilities of the Orontes Valley. The waterless and trafficless nature of the desert route was then, as now, attacked and defended by reference to the possible restoration of the ancient wells and vegetation, and the probable attraction of traffic which Sir F. Goldsmid so aptly illustrated in the recent controversy. Without dwelling on this, the conclusion of the Committee as to the general question of the utility, not to say need, of establishing one or other of the rival railways was "that the two routes, by the Red Sea and by the Persian Gulf, might be maintained and used simultaneously; that at certain seasons and for certain purposes the advantage would lie with one, and at other seasons and for other purposes it would lie with the other; that the political and commercial advantages of a second would at any time be considerable, and might under possible circumstances be exceedingly great, and that it would be worth the while of the English Government to make an effort to secure them." These words were true six years ago; we venture to say that they are, if it were possible, truer now.

We hear from Constantinople that capitalists are already in the field. In the headquarters of Engineering the rumour is confirmed. Application has been made for concessions to construct railroads in Asia Minor—commerce will select the most profitable route for the realisation of dividends. We look to see, combined with the traffic lines, the shortest and speediest route for sending troops to India—and more. The Indian contingent, with the full enthusiastic approval of the Indian people and the native Indian press, has come to the front beyond the frontiers of India. We claim the speediest route for the future reliefs of our Asiatic outpost garrison, and one that shall diminish as much as may be the hardships, so patiently endured, of the long sea-voyage. Which-ever quarter we look to—whether the North-West Provinces need a rapid reinforcement of European forces, or the lesser Asia demands a far stronger contingent to assist in repelling invasion—between Cyprus and India, between London and Karachi, every day's gain of time, each hundred miles of distance saved, will be well worth purchasing as a storage of power against the day of need. We thoroughly believe that the establishment of the new overland route to India is no longer a visionary project of the ideal future, but a pressing necessity, of which the details alone require to be settled previous to instant accomplishment. The veteran advocates of the line, Mr. J. P. Andrew, Sir Bartle Frere, and others, have long ago insisted on the advantages of the cooler transit by the Persian Gulf over the Red Sea. They have shown how precious in time of scarcity would be the opening up of the grain countries of Mesopotamia, especially when the waste of waters which now represents the lower Euphrates shall have been retained within the old channels. All the arguments so long yet so vainly urged have received now so powerful an ally in the pressing need of rapid communication for our troops, European and native, as to be surely irresistible.

LEGISLATION FOR THE RELIEF OF INDEBTED AGRICULTURISTS.

TO THE EDITOR OF "ALLEN'S INDIAN MAIL."

SIR,—Great difficulty is being experienced in the collection of the land revenue in India. The cultivators are represented in the Times' telegram of the 8th inst. as "ground down to the very dust under the weight of debt" and in a condition of "perpetual poverty." The correspondent of the Times observes thereupon—"It is unreasonable to expect satisfaction and contentment with British rule as long as the sense of irredeemable debt burdens the people." It is manifest, therefore, that an evil of very great magnitude threatens India, affecting the chief source of State income, and, at the same time, the loyalty and attachment of the people; and that our administration, which has so frequently been lauded for the soundness of its principles, instead of conducing to prosperity and contentment, has resulted in poverty and dissatisfaction. The Government attribute the evil to the "merciless exactions of the money-lender, enforced through the law courts, and they propose as a remedy to pass an Act limiting the power of the law courts, as to the sale of land in satisfaction of money claims, to cases where a specific pledge has been given as security; and rendering obligatory the placing in writing and the registration of all contracts for the mortgage of immovable property. Such a law, however, can afford no relief to the ryots, since their loans are invariably contracted on the pledge of their farms; and if they are compelled, irrespective of their usual acknowledgments, to have formal deeds drawn up and registered, the measure can only have the effect of adding to their difficulties.

The indebtedness of the peasant in India is primarily due, not to the exactions of the money-lender, but to the precarious tenure of land, consequent on the power which the Government retains of periodically enhancing the land tax, whereby land is rendered of scarcely any value as a security; all farms attached for arrears of revenue being sold free from encumbrances. The cultivator has thus very little security to offer for the money he has to borrow for his cultivation and his maintenance, and even for the payment of the land tax; and the risks of his adventure are virtually borne by the capitalist whose money is embarked in the operation. This will at once account for the very high rates of interest which are charged for loans to agriculturists in the provinces where the land tax is periodically liable to enhancement, and for the comparatively moderate rates which prevail in those districts where the tax is permanently fixed and where the cultivators are therefore able to offer substantial security for the accommodation they need.

The results of the two systems are very forcibly brought out in the condition of the respective provinces where they prevail. In Madras and Bombay, where the land tax is periodically liable to enhancement, the peasantry are in a chronic state of indebtedness and destitution; the land revenue is never collected in its entirety, and every unfavourable season causes millions of human beings to depend upon public charity. In Bengal, on the other hand, where the tax is permanently fixed, the Lieutenant-Governor says:—"The agricultural classes are as prosperous, as independent, and as comfortable as the peasantry, I believe, of any country in the world; well fed, well clothed, free to enjoy the full benefit of their own labours;" and the Minute of 5th January, 1877, contains the following remarkable passage:—"The land revenue in Bengal is collected with that completeness and punctuality which are to be expected in provinces under a permanent settlement. The fiscal advantages of this settlement were most severely tested during the famine of 1874, when the revenue was collected without any postponement or remission or default, or any failure whatever."

The remarkable contrast thus presented clearly indicates the nature of the measures which are needed as a remedy for the deplorable condition of the agricultural classes in Madras and Bombay.—I am, Sir, your obedient servant, J. DACOSTA.

RICE AND REMITTANCES.

TO THE EDITOR OF "ALLEN'S INDIAN MAIL."

SIR,—Your were pleased in your article of the 7th of January last to express your approval of my letters on Indian Export Duties. In the Money Market Article of the Times newspaper of this morning you will find this confirmation of your remarks published six months ago:—"It seems probable, from a result like this, and with a reduced amount tendered for, too, that the Indian Government will soon have, as usual, to raise a fresh loan here, in order to prevent a disastrous relapse in the exchange."

There are at present only two legitimate means of sustaining the value of the rupee:—

- 1st. By abolishing the export taxes on Indian produce.
- 2nd. By the temporary expedient of borrowing money in London to supply the India Office Treasury.

1st. Six months ago you remarked that the export duty on rice produced half a million sterling per annum; but I wish to urge that the loss to Government in its exchange operations amounts to more than half a million sterling. The money which Government pockets by inflicting double taxation on the cultivators of rice it has to disgorge into the capacious purses of the exchange jobbers. The truth is, that since 1866 the Indian Government has been without a financier, and its blindness regarding its true interests in exchange operations has caused it to waste millions of public money, and to inflict terrible losses on every one who wishes to send home money to England. From the Viceroy who sits on his throne to the ensign who wishes to assist his widowed mother, all have had to pay heavy percentages to the millionaire exchange brokers.

Secondly, the Times newspaper is only now awakening to the necessity of borrowing money in London. Ignorant politicians have been crying out that the borrowing should be in India; this borrowing of two-and-a-half millions sterling in India, instead of doing good, has done unmitigated harm. The whole of the two-and-a-half millions borrowed has to be sent home, and thus Government has to outbid private remitters. The poor ensign, when he is asked to pay four or five per cent. extra, is not aware that the mischief has been caused by Government's borrowing in India, and by its competing with him in the market in order to send home the borrowed money.

Till October next the millionaire capitalists will increase their enormous fortunes by taking advantage of the necessities of Government and of their unfortunate servants who must send money home.—Your obedient servant,
T.

Notices of Books.

[As the Editor is not responsible for the opinions of Reviewers, all contributed articles will bear a nom de plume, or initials.]

Bengaliana: A Dish of Rice and Curry, and other Indigestible Ingredients. By Shoshee Chunder Dutt. Calcutta: Thacker, Spink and Co.

This book, although it does, as its complete title infers, contain some indigestible matter, at least for European readers, has much in it which is commendable.

The "Reminiscences of a Kerani's Life" are photographic portraits, so to say, of men and things, and as such have a special value as coming from one who took them at his leisure and from a native point of view. Much credit is due to one who, having entered the service as a "mere boy," and, subjected to the necessary duties of routine, had sufficient literary taste to jot down his observations of and opinions on surrounding circumstances.

The descriptions of the various officials he came in contact with are no doubt true enough; yet they are somewhat tinged with reproach to the "sahibs." He talks in feeling tone of the "despised nigger," and takes care to remind his reader as frequently as possible to the harsh treatment the native races were subjected to in former times. Yet the description he gives of his own countrymen is not prepossessing. Cringing for favour to the extent of imitating the foibles of their superiors, they submit even to unjust chastisement from the hands they fear. Even among the higher classes, the "Baboos," or the "millionaires," as Mr. Dutt delights in describing rich men, this craven spirit seems to exist. Mr. Dutt tells us: "It is very seldom that an Englishman returns the visit of a native gentleman; yet my countrymen are too mean-spirited to resent this." The native officials when promoted seem also to give way to the vice of drunkenness. Several instances of this are recorded, one more prominently than others, that of a certain widow's son, called Judoo, who got into a Government office and earned promotion by steadiness. But "unfortunately he got into an office in which there were pickings to get besides pay, and these fluctuating additions to his income undid him." In short, the unhappy Judoo gave way to a taste for brandy and loose habits, which led to his dismissal and subsequent utter ruin. Mr. Dutt has used his pen with much candour in these reminiscences, and presents the reader with a series of entertaining pictures of office life.

In "Shunkur" we have rather a painful tale of a painful period, namely, that of the Indian Mutiny of 1857. The story is well told, but the incidents of the plot are not chosen to favour the British character. In fact, the narrative is interspersed with reflections not flattering to the ruling race. For instance, we are told of Englishmen in India—"They do not feel in common with the races they have conquered; there is no sympathy on one side, and no confidence on the other: The women scamper off in fear whenever they see English faces in their vicinity; the children look up towards them with alarm; and even the men never come to ask for any favour or assistance from them in difficulties, if they can help it." This is, indeed, a sorry picture of the state of things. We trust that the author may here represent the past more than the present, but if such distrust still exists between the races in India we ought to be thankful for the candour which points out such a dangerous condition.

The last part of the book, the "Tales from Indian History," is the best, and well worth reading. The author here gives us a series of interesting stories illustrative of his country's history, a subject but too little known to the English reader. We shall not anticipate the pleasure of the readers of this part of the volume, but give it our best commendation. In fact, the whole volume is worthy of perusal, the more so as it is written by one to whom English is a foreign language. The influence of "official" phrases may, indeed, be traced, and we might inquire since when the word "funky" has been introduced into our language.

R. J. :

A Vision of Sumeru and Other Poems. By Shoshee Chunder Dutt. Calcutta: Thacker, Spink and Co.

If prose writings in an acquired tongue are difficult, the successful achievement of poetry is much rarer and more laudable. The varied contents of this volume include a piece de resistance in the shape of a vision of the Hindu Pantheon, disturbed by the cessation of the wonted offerings. The deities convened by Brahma assemble to discover the cause, which is found in the predominating influence of an unknown divinity. The imagery is luxuriant, and the ancient myths furnish the bard with a crowd of poetical beings. Their assembly is well painted, and the various attributes of several deities are brought out in flowing, if not always accurate rhymes. The catastrophe of the repulse of their combined assault on a Christian Church is somewhat grotesque, but the concluding stanzas rise to an earnestness of thought and strength of diction which we trust may be truly prophetic. The Indian ballads, which recall now Scott, and again the lays of the sweet Irish poet, are fairly versified lyrics on the most romantic episodes of Indian history; perhaps the most genuine poetical power is to be found in the simpler expressions of "Stanzas" whose theme is the ever new one of the disappointments of human hopes. We cannot pass unnoticed the last poem, composed by the author's grandson, as an ode of welcome to the Prince of Wales, with its loyal address to England:—

"And will the rugged Northern Bear
To break this rest, to us repair,
Then let him well armed be,
From Himalay to far Ceylon,
The races all will rise as one
All true alike to thee."

ARMIES OF NATIVE CHIEFS.

In spite of the disclaimers of certain officials, it would seem that the account given some time ago by the Englishman of the Government policy in the matter of the armies of Native Princes was accurate. It has really been resolved, after a careful inquiry, that these forces would be of no substantial use to us in an Imperial war. In times past it was otherwise. Jheend marched with the van of our army to the siege of Delhi, and remained with the besieging force until the city fell. The natives had not then forgotten in a protracted peace the lessons of generations of soldiers; and, moreover, the standard of our requirements was not so high then as it has since become. We have now passed the stage in which the co-operation of troops not trained in the best European methods, supplied with the latest arms, and officered by Englishmen, can be of any use. It would be positively embarrassing; a source of real danger. Scindia has the best of the native armies; a good soldier himself, he is the head of a warlike nation. But the reports which we have seen as to the condition of his forces show that, however excellent from a native point of view, they would be in our way as allies in a campaign against a formidable enemy. An English General could treat them only as the Duke of Wellington did the Belgian horse at Waterloo, when he ordered them off the field. To put it plainly, our future wars will take the form either of expeditions to mountainous countries on our frontier, or campaigns against a first-rate European Power. The armies of the tributary States have not been organised for such work as this, and they are not fit for it. Neither can it be maintained that the dependent Kings require large forces for their own defence. Guards for their person, and to endure them with respectability and safety, are indeed necessary; and also a sufficient number of trained men to put down riots, and preserve order. But by these narrow bounds the requirements of such States are limited. The protection of the country from foreign invasion is a matter which Government reserve in its own hands. It is not to be supposed that Holkar will ever be allowed to attack Scindia, or the Nizam to invade Mysor. Wars between native chiefs are as much a thing of the past as some of those which were formerly waged between English barons. It is really as much of an anachronism for these distinguished citizens of a peaceful country to make extensive preparations for fighting each other as it would be for the Duke of Buccleuch to spend his ample income in maintaining the "nine-and-twenty knights of fame, nine-and-twenty squires of name," of his ancestors, as a protection against the possible raids of Lord Home, or Lord D'Acre. And where armies are of no use, to keep them on foot is a foolish waste of money, and of labour. The Government of the Nizam, for instance, maintains thirty thousand men who draw the pay of soldiers, and are supposed to form a military force. Of these, ten thousand are foreign mercenaries, including six thousand Arabs. Considering that the territory of the Nizam lies in a part of India beyond the possibility of foreign attack, this must be regarded as a squandering of means sorely needed by the Administration for useful purposes. It is also injurious in another way, as introducing from abroad a dangerous class of men. In the aggregate, the native States maintain armies of the strength of three hundred and fourteen thousand men, their total population being fifty-five millions, their revenue fourteen and a half millions sterling. Everyone will grant that this is a glaring abuse. The vanity of local rulers, or the mere force of example and custom, yearly withdraws from the fields of industry the flower of the people, to maintain them at vast expense out of a scanty public revenue in demoralising idleness, without the slightest chance that the imperfect military training they receive will ever be of the slightest use. We cannot regard such a system with indifference. The usual reply to considerations of this kind is that the native princes have under their treaties the right to maintain such armies, and that we cannot therefore interfere. This is perfectly true, and it gives the key to the official denials of an intention to reduce such forces. We cannot, without impropriety, ask Scindia bluntly to disband a part of his army. Still less can we issue a circular to all dependent chiefs, containing orders to that effect. They know little of public business who suppose that it is conducted in this way. But we can form an opinion for ourselves of what is right, mould it to a policy, and apply it as opportunity offers. It is to be remembered that rulers are not justified in wasting public money on useless and inefficient armaments, simply because their suzerain has not a treaty right to prevent them from so doing. They are bound to govern with wisdom and economy, both of which are inconsistent with the extravagance of braggadocio. And most chiefs are by treaty bound to pay attention to the advice of the Indian Government. There will be no want of suitable occasions for introducing the new policy quietly, and without giving offence. Three of the greatest native States, perhaps the three in which this abuse has been the most flagrant, are at present governed, during the minority of the Prince, by some form of regency. In two of these our control is complete, and in the third we exercise great influence, which could be easily increased. In these it is not only our right, but our duty, to regulate the number of troops maintained, according to our estimate of the requirements of the country. Some difficulty may arise because this policy was not adopted from the moment that the States came under our guardianship, anything like a sudden change in such matters being highly objectionable. This drawback will not, however, exist with regard to principalities which may hereafter come under our more immediate supervision. And, even in States under strong rulers, the influence of the British Government is necessarily great. Exercised constantly and judiciously, and enforced at the right moment, it is all powerful. We can think of no native State in which there has not at some time during the last twenty years been an opportunity which, judiciously used, would have led to the reduction of the standing army within due limits. It will be understood that these remarks apply only to those native States which are on every side surrounded, enclosed, and protected by British territory. It is only in these that large armies are useless, and therefore wasteful. The rulers of the Himalayan and frontier principalities, although they generally enjoy the British guarantee, and would be at once aided against a foreign foe, have still to deal, at least in the first instance, with strangers, and therefore they require armies. The Rajah of Kashmir has dealings with States on his Northern Frontier with which we are imperfectly acquainted. Still more, Bhootan and Nepal require armies, as they are almost independent. And in Kelat there are special reasons why the rulers should be ready to defend themselves. These states possess a character quite distinct from those in the interior, and a very different policy has always been adopted towards them. The real question regards only the dependencies in the midst of the country, some of them in its southern extremity, absolutely remote from all prospect or idea of danger. And we must say that we think the Government has come to a very wise decision on the subject of their military requirements, one which should be generally known and inculcated, so that it may be acted on constantly, as opportunity arises. Maintained for years, and exercised with discretion, we have no doubt that this policy will confer a great boon on the native States themselves, and be the means of elevating them in the social and economical scale.—Indian Daily News.

THE SIMLA SPRING FLOWER SHOW.

This show was held on June 16, on Mr. Hume's beautiful grounds at Rothney. The weather was unfortunately very unfavourable, and must have kept many people away; but there were enough present, notwithstanding, to make a tolerably lively scene. The flowers were all pretty, and many of them rare and choice, but the contributors were far too few to make a sufficiently good show, on such a large piece of ground, with even their combined treasures. There was nothing at all exhibited by the gardeners of the Viceroy, the Commander-in-Chief, or by the great majority of local magnates generally; and several names known here previously, in connection with successful floriculture, were conspicuous on this occasion, by their absence from the list of exhibitors. This seems a pity, for larger emulation would give a great impetus to flower shows, and be some encouragement to those who labour so kindly to make them a success. On Saturday a few real flower lovers and the public garden of Anandale bore the entire burden of the exhibition. Foremost amongst the prize flowers for growth, bloom and variety, were Mr. Peterson's; and one of them, a double crimson pelargonium, was a great novelty in India. Very pretty variegated foliage plants were largely contributed by Mr. Peterson, the Anandale garden and Mrs. Tytler; beautiful double petunias and azaleas by Mr. Halsey; and amongst cut flowers, Dr. Cunningham's roses stood alone; they were all that could be wished for, colour, variety, and size, and showed to what perfection roses could be brought in Simla, but after all, the chief objects of interest to the public seemed to be the ladies' tasteful contributions to the show. The Viceroy's prize was gained by Mrs. Kerr Innes for her charmingly decorated dinner-table. A fountain in a basin in the centre of the table played over water nymphs standing amongst shells, lilies of the valley, maidenhair ferns and wild roses; numerous pretty vases and ornamental flower-holders almost covered the table, and the iridescent glass and beautiful china, helped to make this a table fit for the Gods, at which nectar and ambrosia alone would have been endurable. The Commander-in-Chief's prize "for the best floral arrangement for the drawing-room" was won by Miss Peterson, by some artistic arrangement of table and vase, which formed together a perfect pyramid of rare and lovely flowers combined with exquisite taste and art. There should have been a second prize for Mrs. Kerr Innes wild flower arrangement, which was very pretty and graceful. Mrs. Newmarch and Mrs. Lemesurier also competed, with pretty results, which should at least have been commended by the judges. Lady Haines' prize "for the best floral arrangement for a drawing-room," for native gardeners only, was deservedly won by Mr. Peterson's gardener; his uncommonly, prettily arranged jardiniere attracted very favourable notice. Mr. Halsey and Dr. Kerr Innes were prominent promoters of the show, and took an infinity of the trouble to arrange it. It is to be hoped that the gardening public will respond better to their efforts next time. The Anandale garden must have greatly improved this year to have held so good a place in the show as the prizes testify. The vegetables from there were good also, especially the enormous artichokes; but there is room for improvement in this department, both in quality and variety. Despite the rain and high winds, the Viceroy and Lady Lytton were present, and showed a pleasant interest in the exhibition. Their band was kindly lent for the occasion, and had a very enlivening effect.—Civil and Military Gazette.

Miscellaneous.

THE death is announced of Mr. G. Jefferson, Reuter's agent at Calcutta.

THE Government of India have recognised the appointment of Monsieur Blanchard de Farges as Consul-General for France at Calcutta.

ATTEMPT TO UPSET A TRAIN.—On the 14th ult., an attempt was made to upset the Calcutta mail train. Four sleepers was placed on the line about three miles from Assensole. The guard irons of the mail train were broken, but the obstruction was thrown off the track without doing any further damage.

FURRUCKABAD RUPEES.—A very improper order, according to the Times of India, has lately been issued by the authorities of the Oudh and Rohilkund Railway. They have forbidden their ticket clerks to take rupees of 1838, known as Furruckabad rupees, in payment by the public for tickets. A printed order, signed by Col. Jenkins, says that the baboos will be held personally responsible if they accept these rupees.

CHINSURAH.—The Government of Bengal, with the confirmation of the Supreme Government, has sanctioned the management of the Government estate of Chinsurah by khas agency, instead of through a farmer, and the revision of the tehsildari establishment of the Hooghly district, effecting a saving to Government of about Rs. 300 per annum.

MASONRY IN OUDH.—Masonry is flourishing in Lucknow, and many of the brethren are of opinion that the craft would be benefited if a charter were granted, constituting a District Grand Lodge for the N.W.P. and Oudh. It is said that it is impossible for the District Grand Master of Bengal to pay proper attention to all the lodges in his jurisdiction.

We understand that the Rev. S. H. Beamish and the Rev. F. F. Mazuchelli have been permitted to retire from the Bengal Ecclesiastical Service on a pension each of £365 a year. The vacancy caused by the retirement of Mr. Beamish has been filled by the appointment of the Right Reverend Dr. Titcombe, Bishop of Rangoon, as a chaplain on the Bengal Establishment.

The Times of India is informed that the exceptional circumstances which rendered necessary the separate appointment of a Political Agent at Hill Tipperah having ceased to exist, with the sanction of the Secretary of State, the Government of India has abolished the appointment, and made the Magistrate of Tipperah ex-officio Political Agent with an Assistant at Agurtolla.

REMARKABLE DEATH.—On the 16th ult. at Lucknow a sergeant-major of the Royal Artillery, who was at church-parade in the morning, and gave orders regarding the funeral of a man to be interred that evening, succumbed to heat apoplexy. He was buried in the evening at the same time as the man of his battery, about whose funeral he had given orders in the morning.—Pioneer.

EXECUTION AT PESHAWUR.—At about 5-45 A.M., on the 15th ult., the murderer of the Subadar of the 7th N.I. was executed at Peshawur. He walked with a steady and determined step on to the scaffold outside the jail, and, after salaaming, he addressed the crowd (over two thousand in number), who had collected to witness the execution. Small parties of seven and eight rank-and-file from each regiment were ordered to attend under the command of an officer.

INDUS VALLEY RAILWAY STAFF.—The surplus staff of the recently-completed Indus Valley Railway, consisting of six Executive Engineers, seven assistants, and twenty-one subordinates, have been ordered to join the light railway survey in the North-Western Provinces. Captain Gracey, R.E., in charge of the survey between Sind and Kattyawar, is about to proceed to the same destination; whilst Mr. A. C. Cregeen from the Central System of railways, has been ordered to Nynee Tal, and will be appointed Superintendent Engineer of the entire survey in the North-West.

CATTLE PLAGUE IN PEROZEPOR.—A terrible cattle-plague is reported as now prevailing in the Perozepore Sub-division. A milkman had fourteen milch cows only a fortnight ago, of these five died of small-pox in a week, and the rest, being attacked with the disease, are dying one after the other like rotten sheep; this is at the headquarters of the Sub-division, or Perozepore proper. Babu Madhupnarain Roy, the zemindar of Rozer Rotee, reports that cows and bullocks are dying all around, and that hardly five per cent. will be left if the contagion be not quickly stayed.—Bombay Gazette.

ICE FAMINE IN CALCUTTA.—Calcutta is threatened with an ice famine. The Englishman says:—"We regret to hear that there are symptoms of an approaching ice famine in Calcutta, the stock having become so short that it has been decided to stop all supplies to the mofussil. We believe there is enough to meet the Calcutta demand for another month, and as an ice ship is due in a few days, let us hope that she may arrive while the stock lasts." Bombay will soon be independent of the Tudor Ice Company. If the ice supply fails in Bengal, Calcutta cannot do better than follow the example of urbs prima in India, and support the formation of a local Ice Company.—Times of India.

RAILWAY MANSLAUGHTER.—On the 11th ult., at the sessions held at Fyzabad before Mr. Jenkinson, the Commissioner, and three Assessors, Ramzan, the engine-driver, was charged,—first, under Section 304 A, Penal Code, with causing death at Mullapore by doing a rash and negligent act,—not amounting to culpable homicide; second, with travelling on the rail without having received a "line clear message" from the guard in charge of the train,—against the rule of the Oudh and Rohilkhand Railway Company. Two of the five persons killed were the brother and brother-in-law of the accused. The Assessors found him guilty on both charges, and the Court sentenced him to four years' rigorous imprisonment; the accused was liable to be transported for life under the company's rules.—Pioneer.

THE KHOTAH TRAGEDY.—The decision of the Government of India upon the conduct of the two officers concerned in the Kotah tragedy has been promulgated. The Governor-General in Council observes that the two officers acted upon the belief that they were bound, when called upon, to assist the police of the State in taking these men, who were robbers and murderers, and in using any means necessary to overcome their armed resistance. This belief appears justifiable by the law of British India, and is indeed a reasonable principle of action anywhere. The Government of India has therefore decided, on a full review of the facts, that the two officers could hardly have refused the assistance they gave to the police, and that they deserve credit for their efforts to spare the lives of the dacoits. The opportunity has at the same time been taken to warn Government officers and other British subjects travelling in Native States who may have little or no experience of the country or of its condition that they must exercise great caution and discretion before they take part in any kind of fray or collision among the people, involving the use of arms and the risk of life.

EUCALYPTUS TREES IN INDIA.—The Indian Forester for the last quarter contains the following interesting note on the eucalyptus:—"In 1866 a large number of trees were planted at the station of Abbottabad in the Punjab hills. We hear on the authority of the medical officer of the 5th Goorkhas now stationed there, that many of the trees have already reached the height of one hundred feet, which must be looked upon as the most successful attempt yet made towards the acclimatisation of the eucalyptus. The same officer considers that the salubrity and immunity from fever enjoyed of late years at Abbottabad may be partly due to the introduction of these trees." B. H. B. P., initials very well known on forestry subjects, draws attention to the fact that the eucalyptus tree may be enumerated among the means for checking fire. Eucalyptus shingles are said to be fire-proof. A tree of this species was exposed to the San Francisco fire of 1876, and is still flourishing. The notion is urged that the spread of fire in cities could be checked by setting out such trees for shade and ornament. All varieties of the eucalyptus are said to possess this valuable property.—Indian Daily News.

AN INDIAN ILLUSTRATED MONTHLY.—A monthly illustrated magazine, says the Bombay Gazette, is to be published at Lahor, under the title of Indian Society. The local paper says that "the illustrations are to be in the shape of wood engravings, and the editor asks for some forbearance from the critics at first, as the illustrations are from the hands of tyros in the art of wood engraving—an art which the editor very properly desires to see more cultivated in India. He has long thought it possible to procure for the intelligent youths of India some employment other than Government service, and 'moved by this idea, he has collected a small staff who show much intelligence and a love for art, and has taught them the rudiments of wood engraving, upon which they are daily improving.' The preface, a proof sheet of which we have seen, is a modest one, the price of the magazine is low, and though the adventure is a bold one in these days of literary mishaps, there is no reason why, if the promises held forth be carried out, the venture should not be a success. The first number of the new venture was announced to appear on the 1st instant.

CALCUTTA NUISANCES.—A case of considerable importance to the inhabitants of Calcutta was decided on June 13. Mr. Osmond Beeby, a barrister, summoned the Corporation of the town of Calcutta, under Sections 269, 278, 280 of the Penal Code, for creating a public nuisance by a scavenging depot in Thureef Duthée's-lane. The injurious results caused by the noxious effluvia were proved, and Mr. T. G. Charles, the sitting magistrate decided that the Corporation were bound to avoid causing any nuisance to public health by their management of public drainage, and his Worship found the charge of committing a public nuisance proved, but not the charge of more aggravated injury to public health (under Sections 269, 278). Sentence was adjourned to give time for the municipality to remedy the evils complained of. The Indian Daily News rejoices over the victory gained over the Municipal Commissioners, and says:—"It is monstrous that people should be made to pay heavily for the extinction of nuisances, and yet, after paying, have to endure those nuisances. And the Municipal Officers concerned in the business do not seem to have shown much consideration for the outside public. Officials in India seldom seem to understand the uses and the great cheapness of courtesy."

STATION TALK.

COONOR.—If glorious scenery, a cool and healthy climate, and soil capable of growing almost all the most enjoyable fruits of the earth can give happiness, then should those living at Coonoor experience a constant ecstacy of joy. There are vast rolling downs covered with the softest and greenest of soft green grass; there are deep wooded glades and gorges, full always of the sound of water, trickling softly or crashing over rocky courses; there are great black precipices frowning over the flat plains, thousands of feet below, and for background, clear blue sky, masses of clouds or the mist of distant rain, blotting out the far hills and mountains. Now, in June, the hottest time of the whole year, the air is cool and fresh, fires not unknown, and thick cloth clothes the common dress. Leeches, apples, pears, mangoes, peas, strawberries, with countless other fruits, all want but planting to grow in the thick black soil. Wide level roads run all over the hills, so that the whole place can be explored in carriages. Coonoor, in fact, to a stranger—for experience has taught me it is no exception to the rule that familiarity breeds contempt—is an earthly paradise. What can be wanting to the tea and coffee planter, to the private gentleman settled at the Neilgherries? A stranger could but answer—nothing. All that delights the eye is his, all that strengthens and invigorates the body; and Madras is but a few hours' distant, so that every wave in the European world of art, science, and literature is his, for the healthy movement and delight of his brain. But, in fact, there must be, there is something wanting. For if life in the Neilgherries gave all I have said, then what should we find? Necessarily, the whole expense of country covered with pretty homelike houses; and each house standing in the midst of a pretty garden and small park. All fruit, too, would be cultivated to perfection. But this is not the case. The houses that there are are pretty and homelike; but very seldom is one to be found standing in a garden or park. In ninety-nine cases out of a hundred, tea or coffee plants are planted close up to the house itself. This can be only from one of two causes; for the residents are not wanting in education. Either they must suffer from nostalgia; or the country, glorious as it is, must be hateful to them; for how else can it be that, at so great an expense to the delights of the eye and pleasures of the stomach, they harm the ground so unfairly for a direct money return. Personally, I have seen no case of nostalgia or weariness of the place; for every face one passes suggests strength and brightness. Government and private roads, which are both many and excellent, are so much alike that it is impossible not to trespass. And it was as a trespasser that I first learnt how admirable and satisfactory is the system of economy carried out by the Madras Government. We were walking to a fort that stands on the end of a high broken spur of rocky mountains, ten miles from Coonoor, and had arrived within two miles of our destination when we found the road branch into two. One turned abruptly to the left, and was so rough, so disguised with thick undergrowth, blocked up with fallen trees and darkened with overhanging leaves, in fact so terribly benighted, that it was virtually impossible to get along it. So we naturally took the clear road to the right, encouraged by our coolie, who in spite of a suspicious board, declared we were justified by common example in so doing. But in no little time we found we were on private property. The impossible road to the left was, in fact, the public road; while that we had taken, broad, clear and level, had been made by private enterprise. Then we were turned back, and never attained the fort? By no means. Before leaving its own road to become the benighted of benighted, the Madras Government had well assured itself that hospitality still flourished in that spur of the hills, and that a simple request would enable all to attain the fort. So, to this fort, the walk of all walks in Coonoor, there is a broad clear path, and every visitor avails himself of this broad clear path; and the Government pays nothing for this broad clear path. The hotels in Coonoor, from what I know, are excellent. But why will not some one make his fortune? Why will not some one come here and grow luscious peaches a yard, and strawberries a foot, in diameter, giant apples to rival the rose in colour and nectarine in taste; mighty pears to melt in the mouth? I know this can be done, for the rich black soil and cool air declare it. And why are the ribs of every pony—though with a carriage each is worth, to some one, Rs. 15 a day—so pronounced that they are clearly visible from Coonoor to Ootacamund? Picnics and dances with their shadows, black coats and calls, belong chiefly to Ootacamund. But these pleasures are not unknown to the more quiet Coonoor. For picnics it is embarrassing where to go. Possibly in a hundred years one might exhaust every lovely spot. But of this I am doubtful.—Madras Athenæum

Miscellaneous.

GOOD TEMPLARS' LODGE.—A Good Templars' Lodge, under the name of "Rising Star of Madras," of the Independent Order of Good Templars was opened at No. 25, Stratten Muthia Moodelly-street, Black Town, Madras, on the 20th June, by Messrs. W. Matthews and A. L. Narasingam.

MADRAS RAILWAY.—Mr. C. Hill has taken charge of the Salem Division from Mr. A. W. Darke, who has returned to Madras. Mr. Darke will act for Mr. Moss as deputy traffic manager, and Mr. Moss will in turn act for Mr. H. E. Church, who proceeds on three months' leave to England.

THE HARBOUR WORKS.—Owing to the high surf which has been prevailing of late, the block-setting operations have not been carried on, although a large number of the concrete blocks are now ready and fit to be let into the sea; but the fortifying of the foreshore is being vigorously proceeded with. The expenditure on the works up to April last was Rs. 17,49,309.

MR. FULLER.—The fate of the unfortunate young coffee-planter, Mr. Fuller, is no longer a mystery. The Ootacamund paper states that a human skeleton, and minus the head and leg, has been found by a native Shikur in the jungle near a tiger-den. A helmet, belt, and check-book found close to the remains leave no doubt as to the identity. Nothing, of course, is known as to the circumstances, or how he had lost his way and become a prey to the tiger.

THE RYOTS AND ENGLISH PLOUGHS.—Mr. Harman, of the Experimental Farm at Bangalore, has gone out on a tour of instruction, and has arrived at Mysor. At one of his "lessons" on the advantages derivable from the use of the English plough a large number of ryots from the Chamrajneggur Talook were present. After satisfying themselves that the English plough is superior to the country one, a number of them registered their names for the former.

A SAD BEREAVEMENT.—A melancholy case of bereavement is recorded by the Times of India:—Mr. Charles Duke, of the Burmah Commission, son of General T. A. Duke, Madras Army, Retired, has just sustained a most distressing bereavement by the death of his three children, on the 19th, 20th, and 25th April respectively, on board the Cathay, while homeward bound. The calamity is all the greater as Mr. Duke has no other children.

ASSAULT BY AN OFFICER.—A special telegram from Chicacole to the Madras Mail on the 17th instant says:—"A recruit boy, aged thirteen, belonging to the 41st Regiment N.I. is said to have been severely beaten and kicked on the left side by an officer. The boy was lying last evening in a dangerous state in hospital. His dying declaration was taken by the Native Magistrate and the Taluk Sheristadar."

QUININE.—The Madras Government have resolved to appoint a commission to investigate and report on the subject of locally manufacturing quinine. They have appointed the Commissioner of the Nilgiris to preside as president of the committee, the members of which are to consist of the following gentlemen:—Surgeon-Major W. R. Cornish, F.R.C.S., Sanitary Commissioner; Surgeon-Major George Bidie, M.B., Superintendent, Government Museum; and Mr. Lorne A. Campbell. The committee has been requested to meet at as early a date as possible.—Times of India.

DEATH FROM HEAT APOPLEXY.—A European pensioner, named

John Enright, was, on the evening of June 9th found lying dead in the verandah of a beer-shop at John Pereira's. Dr. Stanbrough, the Coroner, held an inquest on the body of the deceased, and the evidence showed that the deceased, age sixty years, had been much addicted to drinking, and that on Sunday he had indulged somewhat freely in arrack and beer. The jury returned a verdict of death from heat apoplexy.

DEATH BY FALLING FROM A TREE.—Dr. Stanbrough, the Coroner, on Monday morning, the 10th June, held an inquest at the Royahpettah Hospital on the body of a toddy drawer named Vadaghery. The evidence showed that the deceased, on Sunday last, climbed a cocoa-nut tree in a garden near the Club, and when he had got up a height of thirty feet the band which supported him gave way and he fell to the ground. He was taken to the Royahpettah Hospital where he died shortly after admission. The jury returned a verdict of death caused by injuries resulting from a fall accidentally from a cocoa-nut tree.

THE LATE MR. H. T. RICHARDSON.—The Coconada paper says:—We learn that in Madras subscriptions are being raised, the object of which is to present a fixed sum of money to Miss Richardson, now in England, in token of the public esteem in which her father, Mr. Herbert Temesfield Richardson, late Deputy Collector and Magistrate of this District, who died at Madras on the 14th March last was held. A list is being circulated here also, and it is expected that a pretty good sum will be collected. Should the collections exceed the sum fixed for the purpose above stated, the surplus money is to be laid out in placing a tablet in memory of the deceased in St. George's Cathedral.

PROPAGATION OF CHOLERA.—The following example of the manner in which cholera is spread occurs in the last report issued by the Madras Government on Civil Dispensaries. Cholera broke out in a small village not far from Coimbatore. The inhabitants numbered only a hundred, and more than half of them were attacked by the disease, and a third carried off within two months, February and March. A hospital assistant was despatched with a supply of medicines, and on his arrival there discovered several villagers washing the clothes of cholera patients in a large well, the very place from which the villagers obtained their drinking water. This well was of course closed at once, and water was supplied from an uncontaminated source, and the epidemic soon abated.—Times of India.

THE SALT DEPARTMENT.—Mr. H. M. Bliss, the Salt Commissioner, who has lately returned from a tour of inspection, is introducing the Bombay system of working in the Salt Department prior to his taking charge of the department. He has during the last week been examining the salt weights and scales, and is now preparing to start to the Northern Districts. The quantity of salt stored at the Madras Home's Garden, and Cheyoor Salt Depots is almost 11,10,000 Indian maunds, and some 150 boat loads arrived on Wednesday and Thursday last from the Northern Pans. As the salt is coming in plentifully this year, and the usual number of guards is found insufficient, Government has been applied to for an extra police force for the Salt Department.—Madras Athenæum.

THE WESTON (FULLER) CASE.—At the recent Criminal Sessions of the District Court of Cuddapah, Mr. Alexander Weston, a famine relief officer, from Bengal, was arraigned on a charge of culpable homicide not amounting to murder. The suggestion of the prosecution was, that Mr. Weston, being on tour last April at a village called Mallur, ordered his horse-keeper, the deceased, to measure gram in front of his tent, in the presence of a number of persons, and finding it short gave the deceased two or three blows with his clenched fist on the head, and one or two on the left side. The last blow, or one of the last, ruptured the horse-keeper's spleen, and after being in great pain for about fifteen days the man died of the blows. The Court found that the prisoner, Mr. Weston, was not guilty of the offence specified in the charge, and directed his acquittal and discharge.

THUNDERSTORM.—A terrific thunderstorm broke over Trichinopoly on the 10th ult. A correspondent says:—"The storm was as sudden as it was terrific, and some of the old residents of the place tell me that they have never known such a frightful storm. A large quantity of rain fell that evening, and the peals of thunder heard on all sides were deafening. A sepoy's wife was struck dead by lightning at Shengolam while passing along the high road to her house. A soldier was killed who had just returned from doing sentry duty; he was having a chat with his comrades in the Artillery barracks, when the lightning struck him, killing the man on the spot, and injuring two other soldiers who were near at the time; they were taken up insensible and conveyed to the hospital. From latest accounts they are doing well. Some soldiers had their hair singed, without sustaining any further injury, and a pillow in the hospital was found to be burnt. But an extraordinary occurrence happened on the evening in question. One of the soldiers was lying on his cot in the barracks at the time, when the electric fluid passed between his legs, burnt through the bed and cot, and, after slightly breaking up the floor below, found its way downwards. The soldier was quite unhurt."

BRITISH TROOPS IN NATIVE STATES AND LOCAL COURTS.—The sident at Travancore having entertained some doubts as to whether the British troops serving at that station are amenable to the local tribunals, a reference was made to the Military authorities. After some correspondence the question was submitted to the local Government, who passed the following order:—"The Indian Articles of War (Act V. of 1869) prohibit the arrest for debt of any soldier, under civil process, by any Court of Law. (2.) The Military Department asked if the Code of Civil Procedure conflicted with that prohibition. The reply of the Advocate General in the negative was communicated to the Military Department in due course. (3.) It subsequently appeared that the question put is not the real one, which is whether, when a Regiment is serving in the Native State of Travancore, a soldier of the Queen may be arrested, the Travancore Law containing no such prohibition. (4.) The Advocate General knows no law against it, but apart from the strict legal view, it is necessary to inquire why the Queen's soldiers are there; it is, 'to protect the territories of the Maharajah against attack or invasion.' (5.) The Resident will point out to his Highness the Maharajah that it is inconsistent with the spirit of the treaty that any member of the British Force serving in Travancore should be liable to civil arrest or attachment of pay by the authority of a local court. The reasons are obvious, and will readily suggest themselves to his Highness's mind. The Resident will suggest to his Highness's Government the expediency of legislating to assimilate the local law with the law of British India, as regards the Queen's troops in this respect."

STATION TALK.

KURRACHEE, June 11.—We are going through uncomfortable weather—hot dusty days and close nights. Another dust-storm yesterday and no rain. The butcher or meat question has been agreeably settled. Mr. Peile had the principal men before him, and advised them to go to their stalls again, and that he would examine into their grievances. They have done so. This is the sensible course that was wanted instead of the laconic "I cannot interfere with the Municipality, if you have more dues to pay, increase your selling prices," for which Mr. Melvill is blamed, but I hardly think that reply originated with him. From a prospectus to hand, I find we are to have three days' races in the month of September; four events for the first day—the Derby, the Pony Race, Charger Stakes and the Galloway Plate; five for the second—the Pony Steeplechase, the Kurrachee Cup, the Galloway Handicap, the Flying Stakes and the Pony Skurry; four for the last—the Sind Grand Provincial Steeplechase, Give and Take, Galloway Steeplechase, and the Winners handicap. A local journal announces the departure from this scene of old "Knapas," the property of a noteworthy turfite. The old horse was known to many in Sind; he ran the courses over and over until he could run no more; his is not therefore an "untimely end." We have a few more of these old stagers left, but whose happy departure would not be felt. Last year's meet showed that there was room for the introduction of younger stock.

No one, to be sure, cares to see old carriage horses compete for prizes. We want better ponies, too; those twenty-nine-rupee-wallahs do not, by any means, cut a dandy figure on a race course. Horticulture, I am told, received a very fair share of attention from the late Commissioner in Sind, Sir William Merewether. Some years ago Government purchased a large bungalow for the exclusive use of the Ameer in Sind when they came to Kurrachee on a visit to Government House. Attached to this bungalow are some twelve acres of land, which were lying waste, the soil having been pronounced unfit for cultivation; but as it bore marks of having once been used for garden purposes, and there were already two substantial wells on the land, Sir William gave instructions for garden experiments, which were carried out. The soil was raked up and prepared with unrivalled richness, squares and circles were laid out, arches and bowers built, and masonry and wooden seats provided. Plants of various kinds poured in from all parts of the Province and from Bombay; flower-pots dotted the walks; roses of different hues and jessamine sprang up in profusion, and filled the air with fragrance; the marigold and acacia spread out their branches, and the stately cyprus towering above the whole gave to the arena an altogether imposing appearance. What was once a barren waste was now turned into a pleasant retreat for the young and old. Garlands and bouquets decked the houses of the rich and poor, while the outskirts supplied the kitchen wants of not a few, and gave to the garden cattle their provender. But greenness and beauty were not loved by all; there was one at least who thought these things should not exist, and that desolation should once more be spread. Sir William had scarcely left our shores when the pent-up idea of destroying the garden broke forth with fury; trees were hewn down, plants rooted up and thrown away, and the more costly ones brought under the auctioneer's hammer, bowers pulled down and destroyed, and the masonry works demolished. In a few short days all was gone, nothing remained to mark the spot, but dried up water courses, ruts, and deep holes, withered leaves, fallen trunks, and broken masonry. Alas for the "Merewether Gardens!" The work of destruction is complete.—Correspondent Bombay Gazette.

Miscellaneous.

RAINFALL.—The total fall of rain at Bombay was at Colaba, up to six A.M. on the 26th ult., 12 inches and 24 cents., and at Byculia, up to six P.M. on the 26th instant, 14 inches and 43 cents.

EMBEZZLEMENT AT POONA.—Mr. Cross, pleader, has been arrested at Poona, and brought before Major Trueman, on a charge of criminal breach of trust, preferred by Messrs. King, King and Company, on behalf of Lieutenant Settle, now at Malta.

EXTINCT JOURNALS.—Within the last month or so about half-a-dozen of the Urdu papers published in Bombay have ceased to exist, the only survivals being the Urdu Akhbar and the Kashf-ul-Akhbar. It is not unlikely that the terrors of the new vernacular press law, among other drawbacks, may have weighed with the proprietors in adopting the perhaps prudent resolve not to risk the chances of a Government prosecution.—Pioneer.

THE FAKERS.—The fakeers promise to become a regular nuisance in Bombay. One took up his abode in the Victoria Gardens, where he built a mosque, and there promises to be the greatest difficulty in removing the encroachment. Another has a tomb on the site shown for the terminal station of the G.I.P. Railway, and 4,000 Mohammedans have threatened that their feelings will be hurt and a calamity will befall the city if the tomb is disturbed. They have petitioned Government on the subject.

TEMPORARY HOSPITAL.—At a meeting of the Bombay Town council held on June 14, the following resolution was passed with only one dissentient:—"That in view of the great prevalence of sickness and mortality in Mandvie, Dongree, Koondawara, and Khetwady, and the inadequacy of the existing hospital accommodation, the Council recommend the Corporation to sanction an immediate grant of Rs. 15,000 for establishing a temporary hospital in a suitable locality." There was some discussion as to whether the Council had power to authorise the Commissioner to draw the money and proceed with the establishment of the hospital at once, without waiting for the grant to be sanctioned by the Corporation. Finally, the following additional resolution was passed, viz:—"That as the matter is urgent, the Commissioner be authorised to proceed with the provision of the temporary hospital at once."

PILGRIMS AND CHOLERA.—According to the Times of India the prevalence of cholera in the districts around Bombay is sufficient to excite some apprehension. Pilgrims having visited centres of infection will be returning to our midst, and most certainly some of them will take the disease back with them. There is scarcely a year in which pilgrims suffering from cholera do not arrive in this city; and it must be remembered that next month is the period of greatest cholera intensity in Bombay. We are glad to find that the Municipal officers are taking precautions, and that they will meet all the trains arriving here so as to see whether or not any of the passengers are sick. If any of them are sick they will be removed to hospital. It is to be hoped the railway companies will also exercise the greatest care.

A MOHAMMEDAN FANATIC.—We have been told that for two or three days past a mad Synd, a Mohammedan fanatic, has been parading the streets of Kurrachee shouting and preaching in an excited manner, brandishing a Koran to emphasise his harangues. We understand that he uses seditious and inflammatory language, urging the slaughter of infidels, the driving out of Feringhis and making the Sultan Emperor of the East! The man is bold, too, yelling his nonsense at the top of his voice, not only where policemen hear him, but where their Superintendent might, seeing that on Sunday he held forth not far from that officer's residence. The man ought to be taken care of for his own sake, and the sake of the public. We have low fanatics and budmashes enough among our population to welcome a row, if only with the object of a little licence and loot.—Bombay Gazette.

CAPTAINS AND THEIR OFFICERS.—A meeting was held at the Sailors' Home, Bombay, on June 21st, to consider a matter of some importance to nautical men, namely, the degradation by captains of ships of their officers. The subject, which has recently been ventilated in the Bombay papers, arises out of the decision of a local magistrate in a charge against an officer of the Simla, but the meeting was asked to deliberate apart from the circumstances of that case. The Chairman (Mr. Kennerley, of the s.s. Shadwan), in the course of the proceedings, expressed his strong conviction that the master of the Simla had not a right to degrade his officer, but he contended that a captain at sea has the power to disrate an officer, a contention which those present at the meeting generally supported. Some remarks were made as to the present unsatisfactory state of things with regard to the settlement of nautical cases in Bombay, and it was decided to include, in a memorial to the Board of Trade, on the "degrading" question, a recommendation that a special magistrate should be appointed, with the requisite technical knowledge, to dispose of all such matters.

CASE OF MR. DEWEY.—On the 23rd ult., at Bombay, Mr. Dewey, the goods agent of the G. I. P. Railway, was formally committed to take his trial at the ensuing Session, on the charge of receiving an illegal gratification as a public servant. Owing to the absence of a mehta at Cutch, the first case against Mr. Dewey and Janhardhun, his clerk, was adjourned for a fortnight; while the third case, his Worship thought had better not be taken up till the second case had been decided at the Sessions. The second case on which Mr. Dewey will be tried simply amounts to this, that Anundjee Lalljee, a mehta in the employ of Toolsidas Dhunjee, swears that in August last year he saw Mr. Dewey in a buggy, and that in the open street, and in the presence of the Buggywalla and Toolsidas Dhunjee, he gave Mr. Dewey Rs. 25, and that in return for this Mr. Dewey gave him twelve waggons. This, his Worship says, is the strongest of the three cases against Mr. Dewey. Bail has been fixed at the enormous amount of Rs. 40,000, although, as his counsel pointed out, the bribes he is charged with receiving, only amount in the aggregate to the sum of Rs. 200.

WEATHER SUMMARY.—Reports on the state of the season and prospects of the crops for the week ending the 18th June state, that in Madras copious rain is reported from the West Coast districts; some has fallen in all other districts except Tanjor, parts of Chingleput, and Madras; it has not, however, been abundant in quantity, and the Madras Government consider that general prospects have not improved; prices continue to rise. The total number on relief works is 135,935, and on gratuitous relief 71,578; the former is 10,130 more and the latter 4,053 less than last week. In Mysor there has been good rain in Chitaldroog, Tumkur, and Shimoga, and a fair amount in Coorg; elsewhere very little has fallen, and it is much wanted in Kolar and Bangalur; locusts and insects continue to cause damage in the Western districts; in the Eastern districts prices are slightly rising; the total number on relief works for the week ending the 8th instant was 40,833 and gratuitously relieved 12,205, less by 1,898 and more by 1,231 (almost all in village relief) than in the previous week. In Bombay the early showers of the monsoon have set in in the Southern Maratha Country, Deccan, Konkan, and Khandesh; light showers are reported from Guzerat, Katiawar, and the Gaikwar's territory; heavy rain has fallen in Kanara, and a shower at Kurrachee; the river is very high in Sind. In the Central Provinces slight rain is reported from the Upper Godavery, Narsingpur, and Seoni, and it is generally cloudy; scarcity of water is felt in the trans-Nerbudda districts and Nimar. In Berar no rain is reported, but other accounts state that the monsoon appears to be setting in at Akola. In Central India the only rain is a shower at Rutlam. In Rajpootana showers are reported from most of the Southern States. In Bengal the monsoon appears to have set in in the Eastern districts, but is not yet fully established; it has not yet extended to Behar, where great heat prevails; prospects are generally fair. In Assam good rain is reported from both the Valley districts and Sylhet, and prospects are good. In Burma steady rain continues, and the fall in the inland districts is now of fair quantity. In the North-Western Provinces and Oudh there has been no rain; the heat is intense, but the public health is generally good. In the Punjab there has also been no rain; the rabi crops have been nearly all got in.—Times of India.

NEW PEARL FISHERIES.

In the event of the Government raising a local loan for flood works and other improvements, which, we believe, could be done on fully as good terms as in England, there is one special source of income which might very well be devoted to interest and a sinking fund for the redemption of the debt—our Pearl Fisheries. It is true the amount realisable from these is always an uncertain element; but now that we are assured of a succession of fisheries in 1879, 1880, and the two following years, there can be very little doubt that we shall continue to have these at irregular intervals, and that the old idea of the exhaustion of the beds was a fallacy. The fishery of 1877 produced £14,000. This year there was no fishing, but the various reports of Captain Donnan, made after successive inspections of the banks, point to a very much larger income from this source than we have been hitherto led to expect. It may be remembered that shortly after the last inspection of the Aripo banks in March and April of the present year, we were able to state that two new oyster deposits had been discovered, in addition to a considerable number of live oysters remaining on the banks fished in 1877. The two new beds found by the Inspector were of very different ages; one of these was situated to the extreme westward of the Cheval Paar, never before fished over, being in rather deep water, though it was on record that a fishery had been obtained there forty years ago. An examination of this bank showed that it did not extend for more than a mile and a half in length by three quarters in breadth, and that it contained about three millions and a half of oysters, capable of giving employment to fifty boats for ten days. These oysters are of sufficient age to be fished in March of next year. There is also a small deposit of about a million and a half of oysters on the southern edge of the Chilaw bank promising work for fifty boats for five days. These two fisheries may therefore, be expected to produce about £12,000 of revenue in 1879. The second new bed lies to the south-east of the extensive deposit to be fished in 1880 and 1881; but the oysters on it are not numerous, and only nine months old, promising a fishery in 1882. The condition of the large deposit on the Cheval Paar is quite equal to anticipation. They are in excellent health, and do not appear to have decreased in quantity, though we believe a few broken shells were found, betokening the visit of some enemy. This deposit was estimated at a length of three miles by one mile and a half broad, but of greater thickness than any other bed, giving an average of more than thirty to a dive. As we stated on a former occasion, it is anticipated that there are upwards of twenty millions of oysters on this bed, and that it is deemed almost impossible, under the most favourable circumstances, to complete the fishing of it in one season. It will, therefore, in all probability be commenced in the spring of 1880, and finished in March of the following year. The two fisheries will in all probability produce £50,000. We bring these facts together to show that there are good prospects of the colony being able to provide for the repayment of a loan for public improvements from this special source alone, without trenching on our ordinary revenue.—Ceylon Times.

Miscellaneous.

THE WEATHER.—The Ceylon Times states that the weather during the month of June was exceedingly boisterous, heavy squalls of wind and rain from the south-west having been occasionally succeeded by calm days with a faint land wind. The country round the capital has been under water for many miles, it is feared with evil consequences to native cultivators. At date of June 18th the waters of the flood had subsided, leaving behind them a legacy of fever and other complaints. The heavy floods which prevailed for many days between Negombo and Kalutara with more or less disastrous results, it is to be hoped will hasten forward the Government scheme of flood works, which we are led to believe are now being matured by the Public Works Department. These will be of an extensive nature, involving a large outlay, so large indeed, as to necessitate a reference to the Secretary of State for his sanction. No fewer than six large flood outlets will be required to render the work effectual.

ARRACK RENTS AT KANDY.—The tenders for the Arrack rents were closed on June 12, and it is said that the Government realised £10,000 less by them this year than they obtained last.—Ceylon Times.

THE INDUS VALLEY STATE RAILWAY is to be opened as far as Bohri on the 1st of July.

THE Madras Athenaeum records the death of Mr. Adrian Zscherpel, the well-known organist of Saint Matthias' Church, Vepery, at the age of sixty years, which took place at his residence, Pursawaulkum, on Wednesday, June 12, after a short illness of eight days. He has been the organist of Vepery Church for the past forty years.

Home.

BILLS ON INDIA.—Tenders were received at the Bank of England on Wednesday for £300,000 in bills on India. The amounts allotted were to Calcutta £210,600; to Bombay £84,300; and to Madras £5,100. Tenders on all Presidencies at 1s. 8 3-16d. will receive about 84 per cent. No allotment will be made under that price.

INDIAN LOANS.—A Parliamentary return relating to loans raised in India shows that the total amount of loans raised in India, chargeable on the revenue of India on October 1, 1877, was £73,865,632, of which £73,783,782 bore interest, and £81,850 did not bear interest; on March 31, 1878, the total debt bearing interest was £74,906,934, and the total debt not bearing interest £48,070, making a total of £74,955,004. The amount of debt incurred during the half-year ending March 31, 1878, was £1,261,483, and the amount paid off or discharged £174,111.

At a Conservative banquet given at Nottingham Lord George Hamilton, in replying to the toast of Her Majesty's Ministry, said that of the Ministerial policy the calling out of the Reserves was violently opposed; but the step which had received the largest share of opposition was the calling of the Indian troops to the island of Malta. The chief ground of opposition was, that those troops should not be called upon to fight side by side with our own soldiers. The people who made that objection were the very people who accepted the infallible dogma in political life that religious opinions should disqualify no man from holding any office; and yet when they appealed to our Indian fellow-subjects in India to fight side by side with English soldiers in defence of the common country, they were not to assist because their religious tenets were not the same as ours—(cheers).

HOME APPOINTMENTS.—The Queen has been pleased to appoint Lieutenant-General Sir Garnet Joseph Wolseley, G.C.M.G., K.C.B., to be the Administrator of the Island of Cyprus, under the style of her Majesty's High Commissioner and Commander-in-Chief in the said island. The Queen has also been pleased to give and grant unto Major-general Sir William Henry Rodes Green, K.C.S.I., C.B., her Royal licence and authority that he may accept and wear the Insignia of the Second Class of the Imperial Order of the Medjidie, conferred upon him by his Imperial Majesty the Sultan, as a promotion from the Fourth Class of the same Order, which he received for his services in the Crimean War. Mr. George Kelner, C.S.I., late Accountant-General of the Military Department in India, has been appointed British Financial Agent in Cyprus. He leaves for his post next week.

FAMINE IN KASHMIR.—The following letter appeared in the Times of Wednesday:—Sir,—Mrs. Elmslie, widow of the late Dr. Elmslie, first Medical Missionary to Kashmir, writes me that she has received sad news of the sufferings of the poor people in Kashmir from famine, and asks me if I can suggest some means whereby the charity of their fellow creatures in England could be roused to come to their rescue. If you could kindly give publicity to the following extracts from her letter I feel confident that some of our leading merchants connected with India would be glad to organise a subscription:—"Mr. Wade, of the Church Missionary Society, went into Kashmir in May. The snow on the Himalayas was so deep that no trace of a pathway could be seen. At every halting-place, or cluster of huts, crowds of famished-looking people came imploring him for food. At one place he bought up all the rice for the starving creatures, 780 lb., and got policemen to help him in distributing it but there was no possibility of satisfying their hunger, and many had to go away with nothing. He is now living in Srinagar, in the midst of the natives, in order to be the better able to help them. The people are so down-trodden and impoverished by taxes that it is hard to know how they live at all in a time like this. They are dying in hundreds daily, and disease, too, is at work." Should any of your readers desire further detail on the subject, I shall be happy to obtain it for them.—W. W. DUNCAN, St. Stephen's-chambers, Telegraph-street, London, July 12.

ACHEEN.—The Dutch Government has received a despatch from the Indies giving favourable news from Acheen. The Acheenese hands had evacuated the country they had recently invaded previously to the arrival of the Dutch reinforcements. A correspondent of the Independence Belge, writing on this subject, says that "the Acheen war is likely to ruin our finances. Scarcely have the Chamber accorded a credit of several millions for that war than the Government finds itself once more under the necessity of asking for new subsidies. This time it asks for eight millions. Of course, no one would wish to deny the Government the necessary sums to terminate a war which has already cost us a loan of forty-three millions of florins, and which threatens to stop for ever the colonial bonus whose rising should serve to balance the receipts and expenditure of our Budget. It would, however, be trusting too much to the future to permit such an excessive expenditure to go on without attempting to curb it; for it is clear to everyone that we are entering a critical period, when it will be necessary either to reduce the expenditure, or else to find some new method of augmenting the receipts, unless we wish to see the deficit, which must occur, increase year by year."

The task of the Minister of Finance, adds the correspondent, is by no means an agreeable one. In order to cover the deficit he has been obliged to persuade the Chamber to grant him a tax which has stirred up a lively discontent among all classes of society, although there was nothing iniquitous about it, viz., the imposition of a small tax on children before they can inherit their parents' estate.

India in Parliament.

HOUSE OF LORDS, TUESDAY, July 16.—BRITISH OFFICERS IN THE INDIAN ARMY.—Lord WAVENEY, after some remarks on the present officering of the Indian troops, asked the Secretary of State for India as to (1), the number of British officers attached to each regiment of native infantry and their duties; (2), whether such officers are borne at the same time on the strength of the Indian Staff Corps, with the advantage of progressive promotion in that corps; (3), the general duties and distribution of officers of the Indian Staff Corps not being attached to regiments of native infantry; (4), whether promotion in the Indian Staff Corps is progressive in a fixed ratio.

Lord CRANBROOK, in reply, referred to the report of last year, and appealed to the Duke of Cambridge as to the state of efficiency of the Indian troops—we give in extenso the direct answer of the noble Lord to the questions:—Each infantry regiment has seven British combatant officers. One is the commandant, and there are two wing commanders or majors, and four wing officers. Of these four wing officers, two are the adjutant and quartermaster. The duties of the commandant, adjutant, and quartermaster are those ordinarily attaching to those posts and need not be detailed. The wing commanders are, as their title signifies, responsible to the commandant for the discipline and efficiency of their respective half-battalions, acting through the agency of the company commissioned officers, viz., the native captain and lieutenant of each company. They are also the paymasters of the wing, and are responsible for the equipment, &c., being maintained in repair. They are responsible also for the musketry instruction of the officers and companies under them. On parade they take the place of the majors of British regiments, and command their respective half-battalions on parade or when detached. The two wing officers are the subalterns of the wing commanders, though available for any duty, detached or other, for which the commandant may appoint them. They assist the adjutant in drill or they act as adjutant to a detached wing. In short they are at once the subalterns and the reserve of the British Regimental Staff. At present there are nine officers with the regiments in Europe, but that is in order to have a supply of reserve officers in the case of contingencies arising. The noble lord asks me whether these officers are borne at the same time on the strength of the Indian Staff. I have to answer that question in the affirmative. Formerly, young English officers who went out for training were attached to these regiments, but that system has been changed. All the officers must now know the language of the troops and must be thoroughly instructed before they take their places there. The consequence of this change has been that these regiments are in a higher state of efficiency than they have reached at any previous period, while with respect to their loyalty nobody can throw any doubt upon it at the present time. I was very much struck this morning with an article which Lieutenant-General Vaughan sent me on "The Indian Expeditionary Force." He says:—

"Here I take leave to record my very decided and deliberate opinion, that in fixing the establishment of English officers at the above scale the Indian Government has done wisely, and that efficiency has in no way been sacrificed to economy. I am well aware that some whose opinion is entitled to respect think otherwise, and contend that to make a native regiment efficient for a campaign there should at least be an English officer at the head of each company. This is, of course, to deny the ability of the Asiatic to lead a company of men in action; and I should like to know the ground upon which such a denial is based. Many of us in the course of our Indian service have, of course, seen the native officer in a great variety of circumstances both in battle and in quarters, and we smile to be told that such veterans as we can call to mind ought to be put on one side to make way for the raw, even though gallant and promising, English lads with whom we should of necessity replace them. I think many of us would say, and that without undue partiality, that for bravery, for coolness, and resource in danger and for disregard of wounds and death, the well-chosen native Indian officer will come off well in a comparison with any but the very pick of the younger officers of European armies."

On a question of this kind on which military officers alone are in a position to form an opinion, I think it must be satisfactory to your lordships to hear such an account of the Native Indian Army. With reference to the somewhat depreciatory account quoted by the noble lord of the tactical arrangements existing in India, I would observe that the distinguished general he alluded to has not had such recent experience as General Vaughan and others, and that there has been within the last fourteen years a very distinct improvement in the condition and discipline of the native troops. The noble lord asks me whether British officers attached to native infantry are borne at the same time on the strength of the Indian Staff Corps with the advantage of progressive promotion in that corps. My answer is, yes. They belong to the Indian Staff Corps, which is nominally the whole body of British officers of the Indian service. The Indian Staff Corps has no fixed establishment, except for general officers, and the army promotion, therefore, is regulated not by succession to vacancies, but by periods of service. According to the latest returns, the Staff Officers are thus employed:—Army Staff, 173; regimental duty, 1,150; civil or political, 341; police, 93; public works, 46; miscellaneous, 190; furlough, 433. Promotion is progressive in a fixed ratio. Thus, promotion to captain is attained after twelve years; to major, after twenty; to lieutenant-colonel, after twenty-six; and after five years in the rank of lieutenant-colonel an officer gets the brevet rank of colonel. As I have explained, the Indian Staff Corps can be increased to any extent, except with regard to Generals. Of these there is a fixed establishment to which promotion is made by succession to vacancies. In conclusion, I would express a hope that there will be no attempt to disturb the military system at present existing in India without good grounds and without some definite scheme being proposed to replace it—(cheers).

The Duke of CAMBRIDGE briefly stated the impression produced on his mind by his recent inspection of the sample of the Indian forces, comprising every branch of the native army. He had been delighted with the appearance of the corps, especially in view of the fact that they had not been selected, but that only those had been taken who happened to be most available for despatch to the Mediterranean. Every branch of the service appeared to be in the highest state of order and efficiency. Their discipline was excellent, and their spirit most loyal to the Empire to which they belong. In every respect they appeared well qualified and well worthy to take their position among the Imperial forces of her Majesty—(cheers).

Lord NAPIER of MAGDALA bore testimony to the excellent conduct of the Indian native troops in the Abyssinian campaign. He considered that seven British officers were sufficient, supplemented by sixteen selected native officers. One great advantage of the present system was that the British and native elements were so closely interwoven.

The Earl of NORTHBROOK defended the present organisation, as having been most carefully arrived at by the Government of India during his tenure of office. No question could have received a more deliberate consideration, and it gave him great pleasure to hear the opinion of the Secretary of State for India. He could conceive no course more detrimental to the native army than that a question so recently decided should be so soon reopened.

HOUSE OF COMMONS, THURSDAY, July 18.—INDIAN TROOPS AT CYPRUS.—Mr. E. JENKINS gave notice that to-morrow he would ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer whether the Indian troops sent to Cyprus were to be added to the permanent force of the United Kingdom; if not, whether the army at Cyprus would be on the footing of the English or the Indian army; if it was intended to fill up the vacancies of the Indian troops to the strength they possessed before the withdrawal of the contingent sent to Malta; and whether it was intended to introduce an Act to remove the anomaly of the existing state of things.

INDIAN EXPORTS.—The value of merchandise of Indian produce and manufacture exported to foreign countries from British India during twelve months from 1st April, 1877, to 31st March, 1878, was Rs. 631,339,019. The United Kingdom comes in for the largest share, having taken in merchandise valued at Rs. 293,011,394; then China, to the value of Rs. 101,694,666; and then France, to the value of Rs. 59,630,574. Though the trade with a few countries shows a small falling off, that with Russia is remarkably on the decline; for, in round numbers, the trade with that country in 1875-76 was estimated at five millions of rupees, in 1876-77 at 800,000, and in 1877-78 only 500,000. Then again, the value of the merchandise imported into British India from Russia was Rs. 25,640 in 1876, and in 1877 and 1878 there has been nothing.—Times of India.

FRERE LAND AND PIER COMPANY (LIMITED).—It has become known, by the resolution passed at the meeting held on Thursday last, that the offer of nine lacs of rupees made by Government for the purchase of that Company's property has been rejected, and the directors have been empowered to treat with Government for sale by arbitration. A meeting of the Mazagon Company was held on Tuesday to consider the offer of sixteen lacs made to them, and similar resolutions were passed. The acquisition of the Colaba Company's wharfage rights on the terms proposed by Government appears also to have fallen through, so that the completion of the scheme proposed by Government in March last cannot be effected on the lines adopted. The decision of the proprietors of the Sassoon Dock is not yet known, but it is rumoured that in the first place they named their lowest selling price at a figure higher than Government have offered. The only step hitherto made towards the purchase of the whole foreshore has been the acceptance by the Apollo Press Company of the offer of four and three-quarter lacs of rupees made for that Company's property, but as that was made conditional on obtaining the sanction of the Government of India, it is doubtful whether a sale can be said to have been effected. The idea seems to be gaining ground among the foreshore owners that arbitration would be a fairer method of arriving at the prices which should be paid than any individual opinions that could be taken as to the real value, the circumstances attending the foreshore disputes being so complicated as to render mere opinion a very unsafe guide. As the Land Acquisition Act, under which alone the Government can obtain possession of the properties if the owners refuse to sell them, provides that recourse shall be had to arbitration, it is not improbable that Government will acquiesce in the proposal now brought forward.

SCHWEITZER'S COCOATINA

Anti-Dyspeptic Cocoa or Chocolate Powder.

Guaranteed Pure Soluble Cocoa of the Finest Quality,
with the excess of fat extracted.

The Faculty pronounce it "the most nutritious, perfectly digestible beverage for Breakfast, Luncheon, or Supper, and invaluable for Invalids and Children."

Highly commended by the entire Medical Press. Being without sugar, spices, or other admixture, it suits all palates, keeps better in all climates, and is four times the strength of Cocosas thickened yet weakened with Arrowroot, Starch, &c., and is REALITY CHEAPER than such Mixtures.

Made instantaneously with boiling water, a teaspoonful to a Breakfast Cup costing less than a Halfpenny.

COCOATINA LA VANILLE is the most delicate, digestible, cheapest Vanilla Chocolate, and may be taken when richer Chocolate is prohibited.

WHITE'S MOC-MAIN LEVER
TRUSS COMPANY (Limited).

WHITE'S MOC-MAIN LEVER TRUSS, Perfected and Exhibited in the Great Exhibition of 1851, is allowed by upwards of 500 Medical Gentlemen to be the most effective invention in the curative treatment of Hernia. The use of a steel spring, so often harmful in its effects, is here avoided; a soft bandage being worn round the body, while the requisite resisting power is supplied by the MOC-MAIN PAD and PATENT LEVER, fitting with so much ease and closeness that it cannot be detected, and may be worn during sleep. A descriptive circular may be had, and the Truss (which cannot fail to fit) forwarded by post on the circumference of the body two inches below the hips being sent to the Manufacturer.

Mr. WHITE, 225, Piccadilly, London.

PYRETIC SALINE.

USE NO SUBSTITUTE.—See perpetual injunction against imitators; also the unanimous judgment before the Lords Justices Bramwell, Brett, and Cotton, Jan. 22, 1878, in H. Lamplough's favour.

Important to all, more especially English Ministers, British Consuls, and Europeans seeking to reside in safety in Tropical and Foreign Climates.

Her Majesty's Representative, the Governor of Sierra Leone, in a letter of request for an additional supply of PYRETIC SALINE, states:—"It is of great value, and I shall rejoice to hear it is in the hands of all Europeans visiting the tropics."

SICKNESS, HEADACHE, and NAUSEA are in most cases immediately relieved by taking a teaspoonful in a tumbler of cold water. This can be repeated once or twice in two hours, if needful.

SEA VOYAGES.—It is a very valuable accompaniment, and should on no account be omitted. It instantly allays the sea or bilious sickness.

For BILIOUS CONSTITUTIONS, giving rise to vitiated secretions, Indigestion, and Eruptions on the Skin, a teaspoonful should be taken daily with the dinner in a tumbler of water, and the same quantity on going to bed. May be obtained of the Proprietor,

H. LAMPLOUGH, Consulting Chemist, 113, HOLBORN, E.C.,

Second door from Hattin-garden, London, and of all respectable Chemists. In Bottles, 2s. 6d., 4s. 6d., 11s., and 21s.

THE ASTRONOMER ROYAL, in his report to the Admiralty (18th Aug., 1870) on Forty Chronometers entered for annual competition, says of M. F. DENT'S CHRONOMETER, "This is the finest Chronometer that we have ever had on trial."

Summary and Review.

OUR latest advices by the Overland Mail are, from Bombay, July 5; Allanabad and Madras, July 3; Calcutta, July 2.

OUR reports of the weather and the prospects of the crops dependent thereon are now necessarily put out of date by the Times telegrams. The last, of 21st inst., reported rain in all districts of Madras except one, and a slight improvement of prospects in some districts. The total number on relief works was 139,798; on gratuitous relief 75,814, showing an increase of 2,177 and 1,684 respectively. The details of the telegraphic weather reports which we have received to-day show the gradual change from the state of anxiety which existed last month. On the 1st inst. five inches had fallen in Masulipatam, eighteen in Bangalore, one in Madras, and six-tenths in Cochin, the wide-apart situations of these places showing that the rainfall must have been general over the Presidency. In Bombay the rainfall has been very continuous, nearly forty inches having fallen up to the 5th inst. On the 3rd inst. no rain was reported in the North-West Provinces or Punjab, but the telegram of the 21st stated there had been a general rain in the North-West and in Oudh, and that the number on the relief works had fallen from 146,000 to 115,000, many persons having left before July 5 to till their fields. In the Punjab, everywhere except at Peshawar, there have fallen very heavy rains, and the prospects are favourable. In Mysor rain has fallen generally, but more is needed. From Assam a moderate rain is reported on 4th inst. According to the Times telegram, the prospects are fair in Rajputana, which has been visited by a good rain, but more rain is wanted in the Central Provinces. The weatherwise at Cochin predict an exceedingly heavy monsoon on the Malabar coast.

THE Northern Bengal Railway has been seriously damaged by heavy rains. The Englishman states that four bridges have been washed away between Talpaiguri and Siligori. The line for a long distance is under water, and Darjiling is reported to be inaccessible.

THE following is the report of the season and prospects of the crops for the week ending June 25:—In Madras abundant rain continues on the West Coast; some rain, but not in large quantity, has fallen in all other districts of the Presidency except Vizagapatam, Trichinopoly, Madura, and Salem; general prospects are reported to be slightly improved in some districts owing to the rainfall; prices continue to rise. The number on relief works 134,721, and gratuitously relieved 72,743, less by 1,214 and more by 1,165 than last week. In Mysor light rain has fallen in Tumkur, Mysor, Shimoga, and Chitaldroog; more is required; prices are stationary or slightly rising; the number on relief works for the week ending the 15th inst. was 35,315, and gratuitously relieved 12,552, less by 5,518 and more by 347 than in the previous week. In Bombay the monsoon has set in well in the Konkan districts, Guzerat, and Kanara; rain has also fallen in the Southern Mahratta Country (except Kaladgi), the Deccan and Khandeish and Nasie, but in small quantity, and more is required; showers have fallen throughout Kattywar and in parts of Sindh, where the river is very high. Rain is reported from fourteen out of eighteen districts in the Central Provinces; the exceptions are Balaspor, Raipur, Chanda and Hoshangabad sowings have commenced; prices are still rising. In Berar no rain is reported from Amraoti, but other information announces a fall at Akola; sowing has begun. In Central India steady rain is reported in Malwa, and falls at Sutna and Goona. In Rajpootana there has been good rain in Ajmere and Bickaneer, and showers are reported from Abu, Deoli, Shahpura, Jhallawar, Jeypore, Bhurtpore, and Ulwar. In Bengal there has been good general rain in all the Eastern, Central and Northern Districts; rain has also fallen, but more sparingly, in the Bhagalpur and Patna divisions, except at Sarun and Gya, in Chota Nagpore, except at Hazaribagh (but later information shows rain to have fallen there also), and in Orissa; want of rain is said to be felt in Behar, Chota Nagpore and Orissa. In Assam there has been good general rain, and prospects are favourable. In Burma there has also been a good general rain. In the North-Western Provinces and Oudh the latest returns show general rain throughout the Provinces; from Rohilkand (where no rainfall is given in the present report) 2·17 inches are reported on the 25th at Bareilly; and in the Meerut Division a fall of half an inch at Roorkee is reported on the same date; ploughing has commenced. In the Punjab showers have fallen in all the reporting districts except Jullundhur, Lahor and Peshawar.

A TELEGRAM from Rangoon records a terrible fire as raging at Mandalay on June 3rd; 2,000 houses had been destroyed. The description of the city as walled, with narrow streets and the houses crowded together, would seem to refer to the Royal city, in the centre of which stands the great enclosure of the palace, and which is inhabited by the State functionaries and the army. Outside the enclosing walls, and surrounded by a broad moat, stretch the crowded suburbs, where the ordinary population live.

MAJOR-GENERAL CHARLES JOHN FOSTER, C.B., who has been nominated to fill the vacancy in the Indian Council caused by the appointment of Sir Garnet Wolseley to be Administrator of the Government of Cyprus, entered the army in 1836, and served in India with the 16th Lancers in the first Afghan campaign, under Lord Keane, including the siege and capture of Ghuznee. He also served at the battle of Maharajpore in 1843, and in the Punjab campaign of 1846, including the Battles of Buddiwal, Aliwal, and Sobraon. He is in the receipt of a reward for distinguished services.

MAJOR-GENERAL W. PAYN, C.B., has been selected to proceed to Cyprus to assume the command of the European brigade at the station. General Payn served with the 53rd Regiment in the Sutlej campaign of 1845-46, including the affair of Buddiwal and actions of Aliwal and Sobraon (medal and clasp), Punjab campaign of 1849, including the battle of Goojerat (medal with clasp), campaign of 1851-52 against the hill tribes on the Peshawur frontier. Served in the Crimea in command of a regiment of the Turkish contingent, and was present with that force from June 1855 until its disbandment in May, 1856 (Brevet of Major, Turkish medal, and Fourth Class of the Medjidie). Served in the Indian campaign of 1857-58, including the actions of November 26, 27, and 28 at Cawnpore under General Windham, battle of Cawnpore on December 6, and pursuit of the Gwalior contingent to Serai Ghat, action of Khodagunge, and entry into Futtehghur, affair of Shumshabad, storm and capture of Meangunge, in command of the left attack, siege and capture of Lucknow, and affair of Koorsie; commanded the 53rd throughout the hot weather campaign and passage of the Goomtee and occupation of Sultanpore, present with the regiment at the passage of the Gogra at Fyzabad on November 25, action of Toolsepoore, and minor affairs (mentioned five times in despatches, Brevet of Lieutenant-Colonel, C.B., medal with clasp). He entered the army May 27, 1842, and became Major-General December 3, 1876.

CAPTAIN H. J. T. HILDYARD, 71st Highland Light Infantry, accompanies Major-General Payn, C.B., to Cyprus as Brigade-Major, and Lieutenant G. Bourke, Royal Artillery, as Aide-de-Camp. The former passed from the Staff College in December last.

THE sentence of the court-martial held at Naini Tal on the 12th ult. upon Lieut. Elliott, of the 13th Hussars, has been confirmed by the Commander-in-Chief. Lieut. Elliott was found guilty of conduct unbecoming an officer and gentleman, in forcing his way into the room of Lieut. Lane and assaulting him. The original cause of quarrel arose out of a game of polo, wherein, it must be said, Lieut. Lane employed grossly provoking and insulting language. The whole affair reflects but little credit on the two officers and gentlemen concerned, and we gladly record in full the terms of the order issued by the Commander-in-Chief, confirming the sentence—viz., that Lieut. Elliott be reduced to the bottom of the list of lieutenants of the army and of his regiment, and be severely and publicly reprimanded:—"The sentence is extremely lenient. Admitting that Lieut. Elliott received provocation from being coarsely addressed, the Court had evidence that the manner in which he resented it was by language still more objectionable, and that when he actually used violence, sufficient time had elapsed to allay any excitement which might have arisen out of the original provocation. The Commander-in-Chief expects officers to possess sufficient self-control to enjoy strife and contest in manly games without loss of temper, and without lowering themselves by the use of foul language, or by resort to personal violence."

A MOST important question of Constitutional law was, according to the Times Telegram, decided in the Allahabad High Court on the 19th inst. Certain villages in the Bareilly and Moradabad districts were ceded by the Crown to the Nawab of Rampore, as a reward for his services during the Mutiny. In 1876 a suit was brought by a great banker, Luchmee Narain, to recover money due on a bond by which these villages had been hypothecated. The plaintiff, in reply to a plea of jurisdiction set up by the defendant, disputed the validity of the cession, on the ground that the Crown had no power to cede territory without the legislative sanction of Parliament. The Court decided that the cession was valid, and pronounced judgment as follows:—

We find the Crown competent to cede territory in the Indian dominions without the intervention of Parliament, and simply with the advice and through the agency of responsible Ministers. In the present case it has been shown that the cession of territory to the Nawab of Rampore was effected by the Government of India, that it was accepted by the Secretary of State as fulfilling the instructions conveyed to the Government of India, and that it was approved by her Majesty's Government. We have, then, sufficient evidence of the cession by the Crown, and when it is proved that this cession has been made it is not for this Court to inquire whether in this particular instance the exercise of the Royal prerogative was called for. It has been argued that the Crown could not of its own motion cede territory because it could not release the inhabitants of the ceded territory from their allegiance. Allegiance, however, is correlative with protection, and when the Crown withdrew its rule from a particular territory, and, consequently, no longer afforded protection to the inhabitants of that district, they were free to renew their allegiance to their former Sovereign or transfer it to the Sovereign succeeding to that ceded territory. The allegiance might be transferred by tacit as well as by express submission, and tacit submission might be inferred from the inhabitants remaining under the dominion of the succeeding Sovereign and fulfilling the obligations of subjects.

ANOTHER instance of the readiness of the native feudatories to rally to the standard of their Suzerain has been given. The Puttiala and Kapurthala States have placed their troops and resources at the disposal of Government, with reference to the Malta Expedition and the state of affairs in Europe. The Kapurthala Durbar had intended to make the proposal some time ago; but the Superintendent, Mr. Mackworth Young, did not at once report the wish, because the State being under the superintendence of a European officer, and the Rajah being a minor, he thought that possibly the movement might be misinterpreted.

THE telegraph has anticipated our Indian papers in supplying the following account of a recent interesting ceremony, for which we thank the Times:—

A public dárbar was lately held at Baroda in order to present to the Maharanee Jumnaibai the insignia of the Imperial Order of the Crown of India. On his arrival at the Palace the Agent of the Governor-General was conducted to the entrance of the hall, where he was met and received by the Gaikwar. An Imperial salute of thirty-one guns was then fired. The Maharanee was seated in a room near the grand dárbar-hall, separated from the latter by a thin gauze partition. The Gaikwar conducted the Agent of the Governor-General into the room of the Maharanee. After the interchange of a few words the Agent presented the insignia of the Order, together with a letter from the Viceroy. The daughter of the Agent next attached the insignia to the Maharanee's dress. The Imperial salute and feu de joie were then fired. The Maharanee thereafter stood up and endeavoured to express her gratitude for the honour conferred on her, but was so overcome by emotion that she was compelled to resume her seat. The Gaikwar and the Agent then betook themselves to the dárbar-hall, where the Royal notification of the appointment of the Maharanee to the Order was read. The dárbar was on the point of breaking up when the son of the Maharanee surprised everybody by standing up, and, with perfect self-possession, delivering the following speech:—

"This is, indeed, a proud day for us. The decoration which has been presented to my beloved and respected mother will always be cherished as a precious possession. The marks of favour and consideration which we have received during the last three years have brought us nearer to that throne which is the magnificent seat of power, justice, and benevolence. Her most gracious Majesty the Empress will always command our deep gratitude and devotion."

WITH reference to the question of granting dowries on marriage to female political pensioners, the Government of India is said to be of opinion that as such grants do not at present follow any rule, it is expedient that some definite system should be prescribed for the purpose. The Punjab Government, in a case, has recently decided on the analogy of the rule contained in section 119 (e) of the Civil Pension Code, that a dowry, equal to five years' pension, should be granted, at the discretion of the local Government, to female pensioners on the occasion of their marriages. As the above decision appears to Government to be sound in principle, the Governor-General in Council, therefore, thinks that the same rule may conveniently be extended to the other Presidencies.

A MOST unwarrantable hoax is reported as having occurred at Matheran, which has caused great perplexity to Sir Richard Temple and his law advisers. It seems that at the close of the season a young lady and gentleman strolled into the church when the harmonium and other properties were being removed. Feminine instinct led the lady to the Marriage Register, and the spirit of mischief prompted the gentleman to fill up two forms, in spite of the remonstrance of his companion, with the names of two couples, well known in the station society. The unlawful, almost sacrilegious act of inscribing the fictitious marriages was speedily completed—the news soon spread, and the male perpetrator of the hoax had to fly, so had the two unconsciously-married fair ones—the former from fear of the wrath of the male victim, the latter from the chaff of their friends. Then came the question how were the records to be erased—and the Times of India says that, after appealing vainly to the Superintendent and the Ecclesiastical authorities, the question was referred to the Governor, when it came out that [the unhappy hoaxers had rendered themselves liable to seven years' penal servitude for tampering with a marriage register. Further, that there was no provision existing to authorise any one erasing or destroying the entries, and the Times of India declares that his Excellency "has been five days drawing up a Government Resolution, and does not much care about signing it." The real perpetrator of the stupid hoax deserves his unpleasant predicament, but it seems too absurd that the couples who have been affected by the forgery cannot obtain easy redress.

THE Times Correspondent states that a new association, styled the National Mahomedan Association, has been recently formed at Calcutta for the promotion of literary culture and the protection of Mahomedan interests. This is a wise and energetic attempt on the part of the Mahomedans to regain by legal and constitutional means the positions of trust and consequence they once held under the English Government. The chief promoter of this movement is Sayad Amir Ali, a member of the Council and a magistrate of Calcutta, a farseeing and enlightened citizen. We shall await with interest the proceedings of this Association, and wish it success.

THE correspondent of the Madras Times reports a meeting held at Mysor on the 19th ult. for the purpose of establishing a Lying-in Hospital. The Chief Commissioner presided over the meeting, which was attended by the leading members of the European and Native community. The Commissioner announced that the Maharajah would contribute Rs. 5,000, the Municipality an equal sum, and he promised on behalf of the Mysor Government to give an equivalent amount to that raised by private subscriptions. The promised funds amounted to Rs. 22,000.

A VERY large meeting of the native merchants and native members of the mercantile community in general of Calcutta was held at the Town Hall on the 24th ult., for the purpose of protesting against the imposition of the License Tax; Babu Harrak Chan Golek Chand in the chair. It was first moved by Babu Maddan Mohuh Bhatto, seconded by Babu Keshub Chand Bhatto, and carried, "That it is the deliberate opinion of this meeting that the realisation of an excessive amount of taxation from the people of this country will lead to a general famine all over the same, and that since in almost all parts of India famine at present prevails to some extent or other, the diminution of taxes and not the imposition of a fresh tax will alleviate the distress of the people." It was next moved by Babu Gopimohan Rai, seconded by Haji Nur Muhammad, and carried, "That it is further the opinion of this meeting that a poor country like India cannot bear the charges arising from inordinately high salaries granted to Government officers, and that retrenchments are possible in almost all departments of the State, the Home charges being susceptible of considerable reduction. The third resolution was to the effect "That this meeting believes that the incidence of the newly-imposed License Tax does not fall fairly and equally upon all classes of the people. That bearing in view the circumstances that the prices of the necessities of life are every day increasing, and considering that it is a long-standing custom of the people of this country to live in joint families, and the consequent dependence of a many upon a few, the meeting further believe that it is scarcely possible even for persons earning incomes over Rs. 100 to live from hand to mouth. They therefore regret that while persons whose incomes barely exceed Rs. 100 have been rendered amenable to the License Tax, a comparatively affluent class, the high salaried officers of Government, have been exempted from taxation." A committee was formed for the purpose of presenting a petition to Government with reference to the subject matter of the resolutions. The meeting then came to a close with a vote of thanks to the chair.

IN a despatch recently received by the Government of India the Secretary of State expresses the sense of her Majesty's Government of the excellence of the samples of raw products sent from India, and in particular of the exhaustive collection of woods and forest produce prepared with much care and expedition by the Inspector-General of Forests in India. In consequence of private liberality and the ready co-operation of many of the Royal Commissioners and other private individuals, the charge imposed on the revenues of India has been very small in comparison with that of former International Exhibitions in Europe. The exhibition of the articles sent from Kashmir, though not transmitted through officers of the Government, is of such interest as to merit an expression of the Secretary of State's approbation of the public spirit displayed by his Highness the Maharajah in its preparation. His Royal Highness the Prince of Wales has expressed to the staff of the British section the high sense entertained by her Majesty's Government of the value of the services rendered by them in the arrangement of the Indian Court, and Colonel Pearson has been especially thanked for his assistance in the proper display of the forest collection. This collection will be given, when the Exhibition is over, to the Nancy Forest School officers. It was found possible at the same time to send somewhat smaller collections to various societies and institutions in England and on the Continent, and also to Washington, United States. Possibly, some markets may be found for the Indian woods that have been hitherto unused. In view of this, a consignment of selected woods has been sent to Messrs. Churchill and Sim, of London. The Inspector-General of Forests points out that, out of about 2,000 kinds of wood grown in India hardly 100 are known to the trade. Many of the unknown kinds are beautiful and useful.

THE Himalaya arrived at Larnaca on July 22 with Sir Garnet Wolseley, who issued his proclamation as High Commissioner on the next day. It set forth the Queen's great interest in the prosperity of the inhabitants, and promised that measures will be devised to promote commerce and agriculture, and the blessings of freedom and justice. While regard will be had for the moral and material welfare of the people, attention will be paid to their wishes respecting ancient customs as far as is consistent with civilisation and liberty, which must always be upheld by those who govern in her Majesty's name. The proclamation, which was in English, Turkish, and Greek, was welcomed with cheers. Addresses of welcome and confidence were received from the Greeks and Turks. Lord John Hay and the Duke of Edinburgh were present. Sir Garnet Wolseley has, says the Daily News, provisionally settled the leading principles of his programme of arrangements. The Land question presents the greatest possible complications. It is to be dealt with by the nomination of a mixed commission of English and Turkish officials. The President, Mr. Baring, and two English officers will peregrinate the island for the purpose of obtaining information of the various tenures and ownerships, for the guidance of the commission. It is anticipated that extensive claims will be made with respect to the Crown lands, the ownership of which rests in the Sultan, in contradistinction to the State lands, the ownership of which passes to English care. Sir Garnet Wolseley himself will make a tour to inspect the capacities of the island and the openings for improvement. He means to divide the island into five districts—Larnaka, Baffo, Krysocha, Nikosia, and Famagosta—administered each by a British Commissioner, in conjunction with a British magistrate. The Commissioners will probably be—Larnaka, Watson; Baffo, Lampson; Krysocha, Hobeck; Nikosia, Biddulph; Famagosta, Swaine. The magistrates will consist of members of the Consular Service, skilled linguists, whom Sir Austen Layard has been asked to despatch from Constantinople."

THE Cyprus squadron, under the command of Vice-Admiral Lord John Hay, consists of the Minotaur, Invincible, Raleigh, Black Prince, Monarch, Pallas, Bittern, Foxhound, and the despatch-vessel Salamis. The Defence has remained behind at Syra in company with the Cquette. Letters for the Cyprus division of the Mediterranean Fleet should be addressed to

"Beyrout, for Cyprus," and they will be forwarded by the British postmaster at Beyrout. Until a regular British postal service be organised between Cyprus and Brindisi, letters, &c., may be sent by the steamers of the Austrian Lloyd from Trieste, which reach Larnaka on alternate Tuesdays, via Rhodes and Beyrout. The postage is 2½d., not exceeding half-an-ounce for letters, and 1d. on newspapers not over four ounces. There will be a mail, via Marseilles and Malta, next Tuesday, July 30. The Austrian Lloyd's steamers leave Trieste every Saturday afternoon, but the island and coasting steamers used only to go once a fortnight to Larnaka.

CORRECT information as to the tenure of land in Cyprus is given by a most competent authority, Mr. J. L. Haddon, formerly Engineer-in-Chief for Syria:—

The Mussulman law vests the freehold of land in Cyprus in the head of the State, and no subject can hold landed property in his own right. Land tenure is dependent upon cultivating or otherwise making productive the property in occupation, and all holdings neglected for three years lapse ipso facto to the State. The tax of 10 per cent. on the produce is thus virtually a rental, the non-payment of which is punished by ejectment. The greater part of Cyprus is thus Crown land, seeing that not one-third is under cultivation.

We understand that Mrs. A. Batson Joyner is engaged on a work on "Cyprus, its History and Present Condition." The book is adapted from the German of Herr Franz von Löher, and gives all the facts acquired by the German traveller in his wanderings through Cyprus during the last year. Additional information derived from other sources will be added to make the work a complete repertoire of knowledge on the subject, illustrated by an accurate map. Messrs. Allen and Co. expect to publish "Cyprus, Past and Present," early in August.

ALLEN'S INDIAN MAIL,

SATURDAY, July 27, 1878.

TO OUR READERS.

THE recent changes in the Asiatic relations of England necessarily affect our Indian interests. The extended field of our national influence and colonisation has already become an object of especial attention on the part of the public. With Indian troops quartered in Cyprus, and probable Indian communications connecting Asia Minor and Bombay, ALLEN'S INDIAN MAIL may be expected to furnish its readers with the most recent intelligence from the Levant. We have pleasure in announcing that arrangements are now being perfected for insuring a regular supply of trustworthy news, both from Cyprus and Constantinople, in the form of letters from our own correspondents. We hope that this extension of our field of view will not be imagined to interfere in any way with the fullest regard being paid to those topics to which this journal has been devoted for nearly forty years.

MR. GLADSTONE'S MOTION.

THE result of the debate on Tuesday evening is attributed by several of our contemporaries to the unwillingness, common to both sides of the House, to censure the Government of India. The whole proceeding, however, appears to have been of a most perfunctory character. The attacks which have been made upon the Vernacular Press Act, even as amended by Lord Cranbrook's despatch, have charged it with being an ill-conceived piece of unconstitutional legislation, hurried through with indecent haste, to meet imaginary dangers. An appeal to the House of Commons against such a measure should have indeed called forth the utmost powers of attack and defence of the Opposition and the Government. The motion of Mr. Gladstone in no degree impugned the essential merits of the Act. The studiously mild exposition of the history of the Press and of the superficial objections to this Act, which restrains certain abuses of the liberty of the Press, well prefaced the very gentle palliative of the motion. It was hardly worth while, save for one public result and another private purpose, to hold the tournament with blunted lances, in which no knight even suffered a fall, save Mr. O'Donnell. The public result attained is one, however, which in all cases is useful, in the assurance to our Indian fellow-subjects that due hearing shall be given to complaints of real or fancied injuries addressed to the Imperial Parliament. In the present case this is closely bound up with the private purpose, which is honourable to the member of Greenwich, in the discharge of his duty to his clients to the best of his ability. In April last a meeting was held at Calcutta to protest against the Vernacular Press Act. It has been described in the brochure issued by its promoters as perhaps the most numerously attended meeting ever held in Calcutta, about five thousand persons having been present. At this meeting a committee was appointed to draw up a petition to the House of Commons, and it was resolved that "The Right Hon. W. E. Gladstone, whose earnest and eloquent advocacy of the cause of suffering humanity, of progressive civilisation and freedom of speech, has made his name dear to all lovers of progress, be respectfully solicited to present this petition to Parliament." We have not space to dwell on the arguments of the somewhat wordy and turgid petition. The prayer of the petitioners is that the House of Commons may take such measures as may ensure the repeal of the Act, which they stigmatise as objectionable and unnecessary. The arguments employed by the petitioners reproduced themselves in the debate, but we hardly think that the object of the petitioners was attained by a motion to report from time to time the cases in which this law should have been put into operation. The clients denounce the law as intolerable from every point of view; it is uncalled for; it is based on wrong information; it is "calculated to arrest the development of Oriental literature and to deal a serious blow to the cause of good government and native progress in India." The advocate to whom the cause is committed does not propose to repeal or amend the law, but only to see how it works. As the Chancellor of the Exchequer pointed out, the results of the working of the Act will be in due course reported and laid before Parliament in an Indian Blue-book, which hardly any one will open. The argument that the patron of the Vernacular Press is indisposed to wait one to two years for the information was a fair parry; but we submit that if a peccant editor be punished he need not wait so long to make his woes known. The difference between the already attainable, and the desired palliative, is, as pointed out by the Pall Mall Gazette, the difference "twixt Tweedledum and Tweedledee." The fact is, that however much all parties may dislike the Act, and may abhor in any way being obliged to control the utterances of the Press, it is consciously, or unconsciously, felt to have been a necessity. The measure may have been clumsily contrived or not; it may or it may not have been an error to run it through at express speed without halting at the usual debating stations. It has forced itself upon the minds of most who think upon the subject, that some remedy had to be applied. We do not think that attention has been sufficiently drawn to one or two points in a general way, the subject is by this time trite, and the arguments, pro and con, worn out with handling. Still, we would point out that with regard to the question of haste, the requirement for an immediate weapon had to be considered.

It is urged there was no crisis in India to justify such haste; it is now admitted by all that during those spring months there was imminent danger of a war. We learn, further, that the Power which would have been our adversary in that war was preparing means for a hostile demonstration near to, if not on, our North-Western frontiers. At such a time it would have been scarcely deemed statesmanlike to neglect the danger of allowing such doctrines as these to be disseminated. "England has become enervated from too much addiction to luxury, and is not willing to encounter Russia in the field." The Bombay paper, from which this is quoted, prophesies the downfall of the Imperial regime inaugurated at Delhi. Another journal charges England with having showed "thorough effeminateness from the beginning of the war," and among other dicta of the same tendency pro-pheries that as soon as victorious Russia gains a footing in India "The English will have no other alternative than to flee for their lives." These words may be held not to be incitements to sedition; but, such utterances unblamed and unchecked, would unquestionably be deemed to be endorsed by the silent acquiescence of the ruling Power. We confess to have been surprised at the arguments adopted from the Calcutta Petition, that the existing law provided sufficient means for suppression of such incendiary stuff; it is rubbish, no doubt, but a dirty and neglected heap of cotton waste may engender a conflagration that destroys the mill. To call for the transportation or imprisonment of the obscure and impecunious writer or publisher of the treasonable rubbish would be held to be too severe. Each case would be a subject for discussion, a ground for appeal, and we may say a separate topic for an Irish debate.

It is admitted that the Madras Press is wholly free from the charges which have been brought against portions of the Bengal, Bombay, and Upper Indian Native Press. The seditious utterances of the Bengal and Bombay Press are more cautiously worded than those of the outspoken Indor journal. The most indulgent critic must find instigations to revolt, in the publication of a rumour which has seriously affected the Money Market, that Nana Sahib was about to invade India with a Russian army and re-establish the suzerainty of the Peishwar, and reconstitute the feudatory kingdoms of Satara, Baroda, &c." The same paper adumbrates the relative power of England and India by a dream of "a deer holding in his power a lion and a tiger." Perhaps we may find an excuse for such seditious dreams, when we find that the same paper makes a point out of the declarations of some English statesmen, that the preservation of our Indian Empire is not of great importance to us, and declares that "this is illustrated by the fable of the fox and the grapes." There is one important part of the measure which has been challenged because no evidence has been given of its necessity. We allude to that directed against the offences of extortion and intimidation. It is not possible to produce names and cases of native officials who have been thus dealt with; such information must necessarily be confidential and secret; the official statements are strong on this point. A native deputy magistrate, at an isolated post, may have to suffer from the wanton fabrications of an unprincipled scribe. He may expect the necessary consequence of a call for explanation from his superior. The system which is declared to have grown up of publishing such scandalous attacks on native officials is well characterised as a most "exquisite and certain process of torture;" independently of the new law, the remedy would often, if not always, be worse than the disease. Oriental habits naturally dictate the ready means of silencing the backbiter by backsheesh. Actual proof of the growth and power of such a system is given in the petition of Akbar Khan, Populzai of Cabul, and the advertisement of the "Maharajah," which requested each of the chief Princes of India to subscribe Rs. 5,000, and the Rajahs or Nawabs Rs. 2,000, to the capital of the projected paper. The possibility of such a swindle being successful, and of funds being subscribed to the account at the Agra, Lahor, and Delhi Banks, could only have been based on the known terrorism practised by native editors on native chiefs. We are not afraid that over-sensitive or self-conscious English officials will abuse the powers of the Act. As an enabling Act, which may, or may not be put in force, it will be a test of the wisdom and fitness of local authorities; but we may be sure, that any abuse will be rigidly inquired into and corrected. It will not need a formal report to the House of Commons, the Chief Government of India will take cognisance of the application and working of the Act. There may be times of trouble before us, but we do not anticipate a period of repressive tyranny; and our loyal fellow-subjects in India may see that the evils they seem to dread as likely to result from the Vernacular Press Act, are only imaginary. The spread of education, the growth of Oriental literature, and the wholesome criticism of public men and measures will flourish better, when the ill-weeds and thorns of sedition, or calumny, shall have been cleared away by the operation of this law.

Mohammed, Buddha, and Christ. Four Lectures on Natural and Revealed Religion. By Marcus Dods, D.D. London: Hodder and Stoughton. 1878.

Two or three centuries ago a narrative of the life and teaching of the founder of Islam would have met with a far different reception from the British public than that accorded to it by the critics and commentators of the present day. Nor do we speak a single opinion only when we maintain that it is no slackness in Christian progress, but rather a keener appreciation of the truth of Christianity which has caused this change. Let us hope that the principle advocated is the extension of charity; taking for an argument that the Samaritan may have done his portion of good to sick humanity, as well as the Levite; and that the Gentile is not to be discarded because his rearing has been in the highways. We do not affirm that the result of patent investigation will support the conclusions arrived at by the mere determined apologists of a religion which numbers more than 40,000,000 of our Indian subjects; the question is merely that of right to a fair hearing.

Under Elizabeth and James the First, as in the time of the Crusades, no expression was strong enough to condemn the would-be Prophet and his precepts; in his case even personal appearance was held up to detestation almost as much as personal character and influence. We read of Mohammed in Purchas:—"He was of meane stature, large sinewes, browne colour, broad face, with a cut lip, and had one of his fore-teeth stricken out in one expedition, and in another his face wounded. He had a great head, thinne hair, long shankes, not proportionable to his head. He was of few words, but deceitfull; covetous, and withall prodigall (but of other men's goods) and"—but we need not continue the quotation further than to note that the climax of reprobation is hardly reached when it is declared that on his death the earth was "poysoned with . . . his carcase." As regards the doctrine inculcated in a later chapter, it is added:—"Were it not for sensualistic ignorance and the sword, these Alcoran fables would soon vanish." Now, however, as we have said, men think and write very differently on the subject; within the last few years Mr. Bosworth Smith has published a remarkable volume of lectures, illustrating especially the fairer side of Islam; and the book before us continues the theme in a spirit of liberal criticism. Dr. Dods is certainly making every possible allowance for Mohammed when he states his belief that, situated as he was, he had no need to wait for "what he could distinctly recognise as a revelation," on each occasion of addressing himself authoritatively to the outer world. "He had to speak and act on the spot for the present emergency . . ." But it is presumed that his disciples did not so understand the case, nor did he so mean them to understand it. It may be that the best excuse for his proceeding is to be found in comparing the moral atmosphere in which he lived with the standard of morality set up by Western civilisation of the nineteenth century.

We are glad to see that our author does not fall into the common error of supposing that the art of painting or representing the human face or figure is condemned by Mohammedans at large. Speaking of the restriction in this respect, as an "Iconoclastic austerity," he rightly says that it "long ago gave way; and while the statues of men are still forbidden, other works of art are allowed, except in the mosques." Persia might have been cited as a notable example of the encouragement given to painting and even the progress of photography. The ustad, or artiste, amid portrait painters, possesses an enviable local reputation in Ispahan and elsewhere; and the professional photographer has not only appeared at the capital to exercise his calling, but a prince of the Blood Royal does not scorn to study the use of chemicals and preparation of negatives, in order to reproduce men's forms and features after the approved fashion of the period. To those acquainted with but a twentieth part of the numerous photographs which have been thrown off in Persia during the last eight or ten years a recent statement in one or two papers that the Shah was about to introduce the practice into his country on return from Europe must have been indeed surprising.

In reviewing the Mohammedan laws and customs, especially in the matter of alms-giving and marriage, Dr. Dods would have done well to have referred to the useful account by Dr. Herklots of the rites and ceremonies of Indian Moslems, compiled from the Hindustani of one Jiafar Sharif, an intelligent native of the Dakhan. It would be there seen what deviations from the severe tenets of Western countries, are permitted to our own subjects of this faith, and how the practice of their religion generally has become modified by the leaven of idol-worship, so prevalent among those with whom they are inevitably associated. As to the conclusion drawn on the whole question, we have not a word of objection to urge. Mohammedanism is defined to be an anachronism. It may be that it is, though the receptive character of the Arab mind, to which it was more immediately addressed, may not have undergone any perceptible change for centuries. There is certainly much to be said on behalf of the view that had Mohammed "not proclaimed his own religion as final, it might have been a blessing of the most extensive kind to the world." We quote the remainder of the paragraph :—

Doctrinally and morally it is a half-way house between Heathenism and Christianity, but practically it can never serve as such, because it claims to be itself an advance upon Christianity, and final. It is this claim that has choked it throughout. The dead hand of the short-sighted author of the Koran is on the throat of every Mohammedan nation. And it is this claim which stultifies it in the view of any one who has studied other religions. It bears the marks of immaturity on every part of it. It proves itself to be a religion only for the childhood of a race, by its minute prescriptions, its detailed precepts, its observances, its appeals to fear. It does not even recognise that there is a higher religion, that the only true religion is a religion of liberty and of the spirit.

Mohammedanism is the subject of two of the four lectures published by Dr. Dods, or of the larger half of the whole book under notice. The third lecture is on Buddhism, of which he supplies an intelligent though necessarily incomplete sketch. Had not Professor Max Müller treated the same subject and described the same prominent figure in his admirable review of the rise of the widely-spread philosophy, it would have had a still greater attraction. In the last lecture describing "the perfect religion," a full preference is given to Christianity over all other forms of faith and worship; and the reasons expressed are clear and sufficient. The following passage, though not propounding a new theory, presents an interesting theme in new and not infelicitous language :—

A despotism is not the absolutely best form of government, but it is undeniably the best for nations at a certain stage of political development. But the benefit of its adoption by any people will be shown especially in the success with which it trains them to acknowledge and adopt some higher and more perfect form of Government. A milk diet is very poor food for the adult, but it is the only food which an infant can receive or find any nourishment in. Its suitableness for the infant, however, may be measured precisely by its success in fitting him to long for and utilise the food of the adult. The government of one race by another, as in our Indian Empire, is not an ideal political condition, but probably a large proportion of the subject race would acknowledge that self-government had become impossible to them, or, at all events, that their subjection brings them advantages superior to any they could otherwise have attained. If, however, these advantages do not fit them for self-government, if familiarity with our customs, laws, literature, government, and history, does not lift them above the condition in which we found them, and make them capable of the highest forms of national life, it may be questioned, and it will be doubted, whether, after all, their present condition of subjection has even been relatively the best. In like manner it may be granted that Islam was more akin to the Arabs of the seventh century than Christianity, and did good which Christianity had not done, but it is the reproach of Islam that it has not trained its adherents to the reception of Christianity.

We cordially recommend this instructive volume to the careful perusal of those who have not hitherto contemplated Mohammedanism and Buddhism by the light of books, and as religions or systems affecting the welfare of millions. It is written in perspicuous English and in a liberal spirit. Without being strictly exhaustive, it selects the more salient and relevant heads of discussion, and makes the most of allotted limits.

THE CRIME OF THE NATIVE ARMY.

Drunkenness is the common crime of the British Army, "shooting" of the native; but we are not at all certain if the one crime has not almost as much to do with intoxicating things as the other. The Sepoy is a jealous animal, and on occasion a sullen animal, and his characteristic crime has been committed often enough in mere fits of jealousy and misapprehension of the motives of his officers, but he is also very sensitive—temperate as he usually is—to the pernicious influences of bang and such-like things; and when he is *bang*ed up to assassination he is, in our opinion, only to be regarded as a Malay run amok, or a tiger whom it is proper to extinguish or efface without tedious and dubious forms of trial. There was the Beloochee at Hyderabad (Scinde) the other day, who deliberately shot over a dozen innocent persons because the woman he had in keeping was suspected by him of infidelity. We do not know if what Shakespeare calls "the extremity of love" or the extremity of bang made that individual temporarily insane, but we are very sure that whatever influence was at the root of his insanity, he in common sense rendered himself liable to the fate of a mad dog, and at the hands of the first person with a rifle who came across him. However, that is not the ordinary procedure when sepoys take to "shooting." An effort is made to take the murderer alive, and to bring him to court-martial, and in that effort valuable lives, as those of Lieutenant Sinclair and his men, are exposed to extreme jeopardy for no other reason that we know of but to satisfy traditional ideas of routine. If one of these "shooting" military miscreants can be caught alive without risk, well and good, but in that case let there be a drum-head court-martial upon him on the spot, and let the Court's sentence be carried into execution within the hour on the responsibility of the Commanding Officer of the individual's regiment. If there is any risk whatever in taking the assassin; if he should take up a position, as this Beloochee did, under cover to resist capture, let him be shot there and then by the party sent to capture him. Some very strong measures are absolutely necessary to stamp out this crime of "shooting" to which the Native army is unfortunately becoming addicted, and now that the sepoys have breech-loading rifles the necessity is greater than ever. There have been several cases of "shooting" in the Bengal army of late; there is this horrible instance in the Bombay Army just quoted; and it was only the other day that some men in a Madras regiment stationed at Bangalore threatened in anonymous letters to shoot their officers on account of, as they thought, errors in the regimental system of promotion. We should say, judging from all these examples, that the ill-conditioned sepoy looks to his rifle to avenge him of grievances real or imaginary, and the sooner such a dangerous and unmilitary spirit is stamped out of the native army once and for all, the better it will be for the service and its discipline. Courts-martial have little moral effect upon a crime of this kind unless they are drum-head or summary courts-martial. The regular courts-martial with their tedious procedure and many legal technicalities, must appear to sepoys to offer many loopholes of escape from the proper penalty of their crimes, and we fancy that there can be nothing effective to stop this idiosyncrasy of shooting but justice, swift, sharp and decisive, such as military marauders were accustomed to under their own native regime. Under native discipline the soldier who attempted the life of his officer would be hacked and hewn to pieces on the spot. We, more humane but much less discreet, endeavour to take the criminal alive at the risk of the lives of all his officers, in order to subject him to a formal and lengthy trial by court-martial, from whose meshes he might very easily escape were he clever enough to discover any legal flaw in the written proceedings. There can be no doubt that whatever may be the advantages of the breech-loading rifle in war, it is a most dangerous weapon to place in the hands of one of these homicidally inclined sepoys. In the ancient cases of "shooting," of which many a churchyard in India can recall a memory, the assassin was at a disadvantage and appreciated, even in his madness, his risk. It took time to load his musket, and he could scarcely load it without attracting observation. If he succeeded, and aimed at an officer, or at any one against whom he entertained a grudge, he was just as likely to miss his mark as to hit it. The musket once discharged he was easily captured. Unless he used his bayonet he was for a time helpless; but things are very different now. The breech-loading rifle can be loaded without exciting any attention. Few sepoys could miss with it at fifteen or twenty yards distance. It can be loaded over and over again with great rapidity, and half a dozen men might easily lose their lives before one resolute man, bent upon homicide, need surrender. New rules are wanted to meet these new weapons, and there is one that commends itself to the sense of every one—that the sepoy who "shoots" should be shot immediately. He should be made to understand that there can be no more law or mercy for him than is accorded a Malay run amok, a mad dog, a cobra, tiger, or any other dangerous and ferocious animal; and if to this comprehension was added a more reasonable plan of education for the Native army than exists there at present, we might hope to hear the end of what is becoming a very noticeable crime in that service. As a rule, the sepoy of the Native armies of India are brutally ignorant; so ignorant, indeed, that the very habits and customs of their own English officers are as much unknown to them, and as much a matter of foul or ridiculous speculation as those speculative tracts of unknown country the old geographers used to describe on their maps with the words, "Here be cannibals and bears." Nothing will tend to remove that gross ignorance, and consequent barbarism, but the establishment of good schools in Native regiments, wherein the men can read the lore of civilisation and profit by it. But in the meantime, and before those schools are established which will render the Native army an intelligent army, it is very evident that stringent measures must be put in force to stamp out "shooting" or assassination. Otherwise the crime will, as such crimes do, extend, to the great discredit of the Native service, and cause the loss of many valuable lives.—Athenæum and Daily News, June 21.

STATION TALK.

SIMLA, June 21.—Now that a war in Europe is being classed amongst events not likely to happen, the chances in favour of a Camp of Exercise for the troops of Northern India become daily stronger. There is money set apart for the purpose in the military budget, which solves the main difficulty; but I believe only the broadest outlines have as yet been sketched at head-quarters, and not even a theatre of war selected on which our soldiers shall figure. Hassan Abdal—the scene of so many bloodless victories and defeats in 1872—is prominently mentioned as a favourable rendezvous, in whose neighbourhood food, fodder, and water are in abundance. Its central position enables us to tap the large neighbouring garrisons of Peshawar, Kohat, and Rawal Pindi of their best troops without endangering the public peace by withdrawing them to a dangerous distance from the strategical points they have to guard. It is calculated that a force of twelve batteries of artillery, ten regiments of cavalry, and twenty-two of infantry will be available for the camp at Hassan, by utilising the troops on the march in the course of the annual reliefs. But the camp will probably not assume such large dimensions unless the summer harvest prove unusually good, in which case the villagers will doubtless be pleased to get rid of their surplus grain and grass at remunerative rates. About carriage there will be no difficulty, as the broad-gauge line to Jhelum (to be opened in a few weeks) will help regiments coming from a distance; while the enormous army of mules, camels, and kahars now eating the bread of idleness at Rawal Pindi will improve rather than deteriorate by a little muscular exercise. As your readers may wish to know what regiments are likely to share in the glories of the coming manoeuvres, I give you a list, tolerably accurate, of those from which the selection will be made, provided, of course, a locality be chosen north of the Jhelum. In artillery we shall have D-A, F-A, I-A, H-C, and I-C; with E-3, G-3, D-4, 11-9th; and Nos. 1, 2, and 4 Frontier Mountain Batteries. There will be of cavalry the 9th Lancers, 10th and (possibly) the 13th Hussars; the 1st, 11th, 12th, 13th, 14th, 17th, and 19th Bengal Cavalry, with the Guides and 5th Punjab Cavalry. The available British infantry regiments are the 2nd Battalions 8th and 9th, the 1st Battalions 17th and 25th, the 4th Battalion Rifle Brigade, and the 72nd and 81st Regiments; and Native Infantry the 7th, 11th, 14th, 15th, 20th, 21st, 22nd, 27th, and 29th, with a frontier force contingent of the Guides; 2nd, 4th, 5th, and 6th P. I., and the 5th Goorkhas. This gives an efficient force of about eighteen thousand men, forming three strong divisions, assembled without any very great strain on our resources on the extreme northern border of the Empire. The divisional commands will probably go to Major-Generals F. F. Maude, v.c., c.b., Sir S. J. Browne, v.c., k.c.b., and the Hon. A. E. Hardinge, c.b.; while foremost for cavalry brigades are mentioned Brigadier J. I. Murray, c.b., and Colonels W. Fane, c.b., and J. Miller (13th Hussars). There is a larger field to select from for the infantry commands, but the foremost favourites are decidedly Brigadiers C. C. G. Ross and W. Gordon, and Colonels A. H. Cobb, J. A. Ruddell, J. B. Thelwall, c.b., and T. Doran, c.b. Of course the services of some of these officers may not be available next cold weather, and probably in a few instances the popular and the official selection will be found not in accord.—In the matter of local intelligence there is little to chronicle beyond the usual daily stage of gaiety we have to run through as a duty to our neighbours and ourselves. "Walpole" has been represented on three nights to crammed houses—a success which no other piece has ever secured in Simla; a success well deserved by its own merits, and by the care and intelligence with which it was interpreted and put upon the stage. As a reflector of public opinion here, I must note that Captain Liddell's exertions to bring about the triumph which "Walpole" has achieved are highly appreciated by everybody. His energy has converted a building which, until this year, resembled a barn into a really comfortable theatre—with private boxes, a good gallery, and stalls one can sit in without getting cramps in both legs. For orchestra, we have the Viceroy's string-band,—composed of veritable artists from France and Germany. The scenery is almost all new, and excellent of its kind; while success is secured by careful selection from amongst the many ambitious candidates for distinction, and numerous rehearsals and attention to small details sufficient to satisfy Marie Wilton herself could we but welcome that charming actress out here to witness a performance at the Simla Gaiety Theatre. On Friday and Monday next we are to have "Withered Leaves" and "Musical Box and Cox." "Withered Leaves" is a pretty piece in one act, which some will recollect having seen at Calcutta last cold weather. Amongst other luxuries, we are promised a fall of real water on the stage (laid on direct from Combermere Bridge); and the hero of the piece is to catch a live trout in the said real waterfall. Then, in "Musical Box and Cox," the traditional Mrs. Bouncer is not to appear; but in her place her husband, a bluff yeoman with a fine mellow voice proceeding from his boots. "Aladdin, or the Wonderful Scamp," in which Rogers and Clarke made their fortunes years ago at the Strand, is in rehearsal, and promises interest from the fact that two fair débütantes have consented to appear therein as leading characters. No signs as yet of the rains, and the heat is rapidly becoming intolerable.—Pioneer Correspondent.

Miscellaneous.

BURDWAN POLICE.—The preliminary inquiry into the alleged police oppression case at Burdwan has terminated, after occupying the Court for nine days. The inspector and two of his men have been committed for trial at the next Sessions; they reserved their defence.

THE MORADABAD SCANDAL.—Our readers will recollect a discreditable military fracas, as mentioned in our last issue, as having occurred at Moradabad. We learn from the Times of India that the colonel who laid violent hands on the station staff-officer has been ordered by the Commander-in-Chief to send in his papers.

DISTRESS IN KASHMIR.—Melancholy accounts, says the Times of India, have reached us of the distress in Kashmir. The road to Srinaggur swarms with half-starved and dying wretches unable to obtain food. In addition to past causes of a want of grain in the valleys, it is said that thousands of caterpillars have made their appearance among the corn-fields, and are destroying the green ears of the expected crop.

BENARES SCHOOL.—Some years ago a proposal was made for adding a Professor of Physical Science to the staff of the Benares College; but, from want of funds, the affair was allowed to hang over, and until recently nothing was done. It has now been settled that the school department shall be separated from the College and formed into an independent zilla school, and the money thereby saved will go to pay the Professor's salary. We believe the Secretary of State has already been asked to send out a properly qualified man for the work; and, before long, we may hope to see the classes fairly established.

THE extensive forests lying north of the town of Dinagepore, as far onward as Nepal, of which the notorious Pran Vaga jungle formed a considerable portion, are so infested with tigers that people rarely venture into them even in the day time. The Government having sanctioned Rs. 5,500 for the purpose, a large part of the jungle has been already cut down, and the work is being pushed on to completion. So wretchedly is this part of the country deficient in proper communications, that all this wood, which must be of considerable value, lies rotting on the ground.—Times of India.

ASSAULT ON A EUROPEAN.—Mr. Crawford, manager of the Orai factory at Mozufferpore, was attacked on the 2nd June by a number of ryots belonging to Babuagaon, a village near the factory. He was ploughing some lands which have been in the possession of the factory for forty years, when the villagers assaulted him. A special posse of police-constables have been located on the spot to prevent disturbances in future, for the District Superintendent of the Police remarks that this assault is not the first of its kind that has occurred in the neighbourhood in connection with the factory. We await with impatience further particulars of this case. There must be some hidden cause to provoke these frequent hostilities on the part of the ryots.—Behar Herald.

POSTAL INSURANCE FRAUDS.—According to the Rawal Pindi correspondent of the Times of India, the new postal insurance system is causing the postal officials no end of anxiety and annoyance, for it is found that the natives, not satisfied with the extra security insured to their property by the system, are employing their ingenuity to make some substantial profit out of it, which they effect in some such manner as this:—The contents of a parcel is described and registered as consisting of silver coin to the value of Rs. 50. On reaching its destination, however, it is found to contain only copper coins, which transformation the sender of course swears—notwithstanding that the outward appearance of the parcel shows no signs of having been tampered with—was the work of dishonest postal officials, and demands compensation. The dodge is said to have succeeded in some few instances, but the postal authorities are directed to be on the qui vive. The vigilance of one of these officers has already been rewarded by the detection in this division of a native who made a false declaration as to the contents of a parcel offered for insurance.

PUNJAB RAILWAYS.—The Jullundur correspondent of the Times of India thinks it certain that before very long two light railways will be taken in hand in the Punjab, the one from Umballa to Kalka, and the other from this place through Hoshiarpur, crossing the Beas at Nowshera, and on to Pathankot, at the foot of the Dalhousie Hills. This latter line would run through very rich and populous districts, and would be taken in hand at once if it were necessary to start famine works on a large scale. We presume that these lines are two of the four projects which the Times telegram of the 31st announced as having been sanctioned by the Viceroy, and as involving an expenditure from two-and-three-quarters to ten millions, whether rupees or pounds not being stated.

THE BISHOP'S TOUR.—The following is the programme of the visitation tour of the Bishop of Calcutta, with the dates of arrival at each place:—Departed from Calcutta, June 24; arrived at Nynce Tal, June 28; Ranekhet, July 12; Almora, July 18; Nynce Tal, July 22; Agra, July 31; Jeypore, August 3; Ajmere, August 7; Agra, August 13; Morar, August 16; Jhansee, August 22; Saugor, August 29; Nursingpore (via Dumoh and Jubbulpore) September 5; Hoshungabad, September 7; Sehore, September 10; Hurda, September 13; Khundwah, September 14; Mhow, September 16; Indor, September 19; Khairwarra (via Rutlam, Neemuch Oodeypore), September 27; Mhow, October 5; Khundwah, October 7; Warora, October 9; Chanda, October 10; Nagpore, October 12; Kamptee, October 13; Raepore, October 19; Nagpore, October 24; Seonee, October 26; Puchmarree (via Chindwara and Betul, if weather permits), October 31; Jubbulpore, November 2; Sutna, November 6; Nowgong, November 9; Banda, November 13; Calcutta, November 17, or perhaps Buxar, November 16; Arrah, November 18; Assensole, November 20; Calcutta, November 23.

THE SOOI PLATEAU, BENGAL.—The Sooi plateau is a tract of land some 5,500 to 6,000 feet high, not far from Lohoo Ghat on the Nepal border, but within Kumaon territory. It seems that there is enough land here, and of a very suitable character, to form a cantonment for, we are afraid to say, how many English soldiers, at any rate some thousands. The land is the property of the Government, and little of it, if any, is under cultivation; moreover, from its unusually level character also, it is well adapted for military purposes. Would it not be well to have this site reported upon? It has already been proposed as a cantonment; but the fears, it is said, of causing alarm amongst the Nepaulese authorities, together with some objection on the part of the Kumaon administrators, interfered to prevent its being so utilised. The want of more hill stations for our young unformed soldiers, who come in under the short service rules, is daily becoming more urgent. Everything should be done to mitigate the heavy blood-tax levied on us in the shape of the frequent deaths of our young lads stationed in the plains. If the Sooi plateau can be utilised, and if through its instrumentality we can save the lives of our men, why should not the idea be carried out?—Pioneer.

A FAMILY OF DACOITS.—The dacoits who were so signally routed in the Kotah State were led by one Bhoja, the man who escaped, with two others, on a stolen camel. Bhoja, like nearly all his gang, came from Shajehanpur, a Meena village in the British district of Gurgaon; this Shajehanpur being of all our Meena villages the most prolific in dacoits,—it has been so for generations. Bhoja is a Meena, and a proclaimed murderer; some years ago he killed a police constable of Gurgaon. Two of the dacoits also who were killed are said by the survivor to have been concerned in the murder of a police constable; this, however is not yet proved. The fathers of three of the dacoits killed, reside at present in the Andamans. Nihaba, who escaped with Bhoja, was his brother; in 1877 Nihaba was sentenced to transportation for life, but broke loose from Delhi Jail—when a large reward was offered by the Punjab Government for his recapture. Besides a brother, Bhoja had a nephew and two grand nephews in the gang; it was quite a family party. Bhoja and his brother were accompanied in their flight on the stolen camel by a third dacoit. The two brothers were too old and feeble to walk; and abstinence from his daily allowance of opium had weakened their companion. These three carried off Rs. 5,000 in silver; so the camel, already tired by a long journey, could hardly have gone very quickly. The party, too, must have been rather a conspicuous object; yet it passed several villages in safety, and quite escaped the observation of the police.—Pioneer.

IMPORTED SPIRITS.—The Lieutenant-Governor has prescribed certain rules for ascertaining and determining what spirit imported into British India shall be deemed to have been effectually and permanently rendered unfit for human consumption, such spirit then being subject only to an ad valorem duty of ten per cent. For spirit brought into any port in the Bengal Presidency it is incumbent on the importer to satisfy the Collector of Customs that such spirit has been duly rendered unfit for human consumption before it can be admitted to the aforesaid rate of duty. If the importer be unable to satisfy the collector, the latter shall have the spirit examined, and, if necessary, rendered unfit for human consumption, at the expense of the importer. The ingredient to be admixed with the spirit, to render it unfit for human consumption, is caoutchoucine, but if it be proved to the satisfaction of the Board of Revenue that such ingredient will render the spirit unsuitable for the purpose for which it is required, special sanction may be obtained for the use of wood naphtha instead. The use of spirit methylated or caoutchoucined, according to these rules, is not permitted in the manufacture or preparation of tinctures, medicated spirits, hyponitrous ether, or other pharmaceutical preparations, or in the manufacture or preparation of any other article capable of being used as a beverage, or internally as a medicine, with the exception of sulphuric ether, chloroform, and chloral hydrate.—Indian Daily News.

DANGERS OF RAILWAY TRAVELLING.—The Lucknow Times calls attention to the death of a lady passenger on the Oudh and Rohilkund Railway, which was caused by heat-apoplexy. It would seem that this lady was an upper class passenger from Bareilly to Lucknow, and though the day happened to be one of the hottest of a very hot season, there was no cooling apparatus attached to the carriage—neither tatties nor punkhas being in working, and no attempt made by the line officers to provide these essentials. The lady being an invalid could do but little for herself in drawing attention to the hourly increasing heat of the carriage, and she would seem to have succumbed to the intensity of the heat about or soon after noon; anyhow, on the arrival of the train at a small station the unfortunate lady was found by the guard in a state of collapse on the floor of her carriage. Of course at a small roadside station there was no medical assistance to be had, although consciousness was partially restored by the efforts of the officials, who applied water douches with some effect; a telegram was then sent on to Lucknow to have the Company's medical officer on the Char Bagh platform when the train should arrive, but this message was so delayed in transit that it did not reach the Lucknow Station until after the train had reached. Mr. Cross, the station master, did all he could, and ultimately the lady was removed by her friends; she died early the following morning. Two or three questions here suggest themselves: (1st.) What were the station-masters at Bareilly and Shahjehanpore doing, that they allowed this carriage to pass on without the cooling apparatus being in working order? (2nd.) How came it about the telegram was delayed in transit, when it was known to be of the most emergent character, and the line should have been cleared for its despatch? (3rd.) Was there or was there not an inquest on the remains of this lady who fell a victim to railway neglect?

A CAREER OF CRIME.—The Lucknow forgery case has come to a close. The accused Maitra was found guilty on all three charges, and sentenced to seven years' transportation. This young man's attempt to get down to Bombay, on his romantic, though untruthful confession of the murder of a former sweetheart, has come to nothing. The Bombay and Lahor authorities cannot obtain the least confirmation of any of the facts spoken to by Maitra. Maitra's old commanding officer says Maitra was an incorrigible thief, and that his present trumped-up story shows him to be an incorrigible liar. Maitra is still young in years, though old in villainy; so we may hear of him again in years to come when he has worked out his present sentence. This young man is about twenty-four years of age, and five feet eight inches in height. When about fourteen years old he ran away from his father's house at Lahor, and enlisted as a muleteer in the levy then on its way to Abyssinia. During the short time he was in the muleteer corps he was constantly punished for thieving. On his way from Kurrachee to Multan he robbed Captain Basevi, R.A., of some Rs. 80. Shortly after his arrival at Multan he deserted, carrying off certain stolen property. On his return to Lahor, in the beginning of 1869, Maitra was employed in the Controller's Office as an accountant. Within a few weeks he was reduced for neglect of duty; whereupon he took French leave, and went off to seek "fresh woods and pastures new." He was next heard of as a standing member in the Methodist Episcopal Church, Calcutta, and freely admitted to the "Love Feasts" and "Sacraments" of that communion. Having received letters of commendation from the American Missions in Calcutta, he came to Lucknow, where he forged Mr. Cunningham's name for Rs. 1,100; for which little accident he was undergoing three and-a-half years' imprisonment when he committed the daring and partially successful forgery which has since gained him so much notoriety. Under all these circumstances, I think we are justified in expecting to hear more of this young man before he attains even middle age.—Pioneer.

STATION TALK.

NORTH WYNAAD, June 25.—The Monsoon rains reached this district on the 15th ult., not, however, before it was wanted, since it was two days later than the latest period in the remembrance of the proverbial oldest inhabitant. The coffee trees after the long preceding drought sprang to the showers in March like a race horse at the touch of the spur, or an old war horse at the blast of the trumpet, but fell back again in April and May from the unusually fierce heat of the sun and want of sufficient moisture. Not that there was no rain in those months, but that the thunder clouds were so capricious and distributed their contents in such unequal proportions. Some of the estates registered as much as seven and eight inches during the period, whilst others, scarcely two or three miles distant, only had two or three, and some none at all. This, therefore, makes a great difference in the anticipated out-turn of crops from different places. For although all alike presented the grandest appearance of bud ever seen, the trees from want of the fructifying drops were unable to expand the blossom. Now, however, all have the appearance of glorious health and strength, and with the exception of fruit, for the coming season there is little difference to be seen. Some, of course, will be disappointed, as usual, but in this district the total will be above the average. Lucky, indeed, have the proprietors of those estates been who were able to apply irrigation. Few, if any, estates are without some sort of stream, and if they would economise their contents and apply the water by machinery, they would get their reward in cent. per cent. on the outlay. Yet it is no less strange than true that some people actually have streams ready to hand which might be applied without any expense, but see no advantage in using it. Those, however, who have availed themselves of even the smallest rivulets have their reward.—Numbers of poor emaciated objects are still to be seen on the public roads, wending their weary way towards Mysor. It can scarcely be expected that they will ever reach their destination with the roads beyond the Wynaad frontier in such a state as to prohibit the passage of carts or horses. It was promised that these roads should be repaired, as it has been promised times out of number, and Major Moncrieff said he would give his attention to it. The bazaar merchants declare that the approaches to Wynaad from Mysor are purposely neglected, to prevent the export of grain, forgetting that this traffic is maintained solely for the supply of their own people in these parts, from whose labour the Mysor Government derives indirectly a large revenue. What, in fact, would have been the fate of Mysor with its dense population but for the millions of rupees transferred to it from the pockets of the English planters? Major Moncrieff has been justly lauded for his unceasing efforts to mitigate the horrors of the late famine. It is fervently hoped he will add to his well deserved reputation by improving the communications between the bullock of Wynaad and the impoverished State in which he takes so great an interest.—Whilst on this subject it may be as well to say that the simplification of the extradition arrangements promised by Lord Lytton have passed into oblivion, and consequently the course of justice is miserably obstructed. A case in point, showing the pernicious system carried on by means of existing treaties, is the great coffee robbery of the season. Three bandies loaded with coffee were despatched to the coast last March which never reached their destination. The indefatigable exertions of the proprietor and police succeeded in identifying and arresting the three bandy men in Mysor nearly two months since, but as it is currently reported they have not yet been brought back for trial, although warrants have been sent out by the magistrate, because the officials in Mysor have been so much occupied with the festivities of the Mysor marriage as to be unable to attend to business. It seems perfectly clear that had the promised "Coffee Stealing Act" been in operation, this audacious wholesale theft could not have taken place, and we would like to know why all public carriers should not be registered and licensed as in England. It would certainly be no hardship if all the bandies engaged in carrying coffee, rice or other commodities were compelled, under penalty of fine of eight annas, to have the name and address of their owners affixed to them, or if hired by contractors, as is usually the case in transporting coffee, then the name of the contractor should appear. But this Coffee Stealing Act appears also to have been consigned to the place of good intentions.—Madras Atheneum Correspondent.

Miscellaneous.

TELEGRAMS.—The question having arisen as to whether the quotations of Consols in Reuter's telegrams can be transmitted over the Indian telegraph lines at Press rates—the rules regarding Press telegrams expressly forbidding the transmission of commercial telegrams at Press rates—the Government of India has decided that the quotations of Consols, being obviously sent as political news, may go at Press rates.

FAMINE EXPENDITURE.—Up to the 31st March, 1877, the Madras Government paid 183 lakhs of rupees on account of famine relief operations. Of this sum 1 1/2 lakhs were spent upon batta to imperial and provincial establishments, 1 1/2 lakhs on account of special officers and establishments, 67 1/2 lakhs on purchase and carriage of grain, 11 lakhs on gratuitous relief, a large sum was spent upon miscellaneous works, and about a crore had been sanctioned for the execution of public works in the districts, a good portion being spent upon roads.—Times of India.

GRAIN ROBBERIES.—The Great Indian Peninsula is not the only railway on which grain was stolen in large quantities during the famine, for we learn from a Madras contemporary that charges of grain-stealing have been preferred against a gang of permanent-way men employed on the Nizam's State Railway. An investigation is being carried on by the police, and it is considered probable that certain station-masters will be brought to book, as there is strong presumptive evidence implicating them.—Times of India.

INFLAMMABLE OILS.—The Madras Government, according to the Madras Times, have been making a move in the right direction in regard to the safe stowage of inflammable oils in this city, and have requested the opinions of some of the local tradesmen in the matter. The Government have also addressed the authorities of the Madras and South Indian Railways in this Presidency for an expression of their opinions in reference to this matter. The Railway Companies are large consumers of kerosine oil, and import the oil on their own account, and some time ago the Madras Railway, in view of putting a stop to petty thefts of their oil, were desirous of colouring it.

LOCUSTS.—Locusts are still doing mischief in Madras. There seems to be no end to their depredations; and now they have begun already to increase and multiply. Mr. Webster, Collector of Coimbatore, sends in a full and interesting report; he had seen a regular cyclose of locusts "with small bodies darting in and out of the centre, in the most confused manner." He recommended that information about locusts should be sought from America. Mr. Webster fears that the Madras locusts may find a breeding retreat in the grassy hills of the Western Ghats; "and if they once establish a permanent breeding-place there, this and the adjacent districts will inevitably suffer most severely."

CHINCHONA PLANTATIONS.—The Acting Commissioner of the Nilgiris has officially reported on the Government chinchona plantations for the year 1876-77, and it appears that owing to the successful sales of bark in the London market the financial results of the year were a net profit of Rs. 50,827. The increased demand on the part of the planters of the Nilgiris and in the Wynad for chinchona plants and seeds is regarded as a satisfactory feature in the report. The account sale for 165 bales of chinchona bark lately shipped from these plantations to England shows that the Doda-betta natural crown fetched 6s. 3d. and 6s. 4d. per lb.; the mossed crown from 6s. 2d. to 8s. 5d., renewed crown from 10s. to 10s. 4d., and the branched crown 10s. 6d. and 5s. per lb.

THE JUDGES AND THE VACATION.—The manner, says the Madras Mail, in which all the Judges have deserted Madras during this vacation has excited a good deal of criticism in our neighbourhood. In former days arrangements were always made under which one Judge remained in Madras, or, at all events, sat in the Court once a week to receive applications, grant orders for decrees, and similarly important matters. When the Court was closed for this vacation, notice was given that a Judge would sit on the 3rd instant. None, however, attended, and nothing could be done; but notice was given that there would be a sitting on the 17th ult.; but on that day, as on the previous occasion, no Judge was in attendance, for in fact they were all in Ootacamund. It is rumoured that their Lordships cannot decide among themselves which of them ought properly to come to Madras. In the meantime, public convenience and interests suffer, as there is no possibility of getting even the most emergent work attended to. We daresay the Judges will say that as their number has been reduced to four, and as they all have to work at high pressure during ten months of the year, it is unreasonable to ask them to forego their well-earned otium cum dig. on the hills. We do not want to deprive them of their vacation, but it ought to be possible so to arrange matters as to allow of one Judge being in Madras, while the other three are renewing their youth like so many eagles; and the Judge left below may have his revenge on the return of his learned brethren to the grindstone and 96 deg. in the shade.

OPERATIONS OF THE SALT DEPARTMENT.—Mr. Price, the Collector, Chingleput District, and Mr. Ricketts, Salt Deputy Collector, have been at the Northern Salt Division (Ennore, Attiput, and Vullur) consulting with Colonel O'Connell, the Superintending Engineer, to arrange for the deepening of the salt channels and main canal for bringing all the salt (about seven lakhs of rupees' worth) now lying in the five Northern divisions. Having omitted to avail themselves of the very favourable opportunity to keep the Ennore bar open while it was flowing, the Engineering and the Salt Departments, we hear, are now endeavouring to do that, with what result is to be seen. This matter of keeping the bar open is of such importance that without water in the Canal the salt pans cannot be irrigated, and navigation as well will be stopped; it was the closing of the bar for the last two years that caused the loss to Government of some thirty or forty lakhs of rupees, and we know what scarcity and demand there was for salt all last year up to April, 1878. Although there is now in Madras about eight lakhs of Indian maunds of salt taken into store, still there is an equal quantity lying at the pans, which is about sixteen lakhs of rupees, a no small amount to trifle with. We hear that several contractors, such as Mr. Woolley, Mr. Cammiade, &c., have offered to keep open the bar throughout the year at about the cost of one or two lakhs, which, if done, would save Government the expenditure of sixty or seventy thousand rupees annually for clearing the main Canal. Why has this not been tried?—Madras Times.

Bombay.

The total fall of rain at Bombay was, at Colaba, up to midnight of July 3, 31 inches and 10 cents., and at Byculla up to six p.m. of the 4th it was 29 inches and 23 cents.

SHIPMENTS OF COTTON.—The quantity of cotton shipped during the month of June from Bombay to foreign ports, was 40,020,820 lbs., valued at Rs. 10,009,309.

KATTYWAR.—The Acting Political Agent of Kattywar reports that the rainy season has commenced propitiously in Kattywar. Partial showers fell in various parts from the 13th of June, but since the 22nd the fall has been general, and sowing operations have commenced in many talukas.

BAHREIN.—The Chief of the Island of Bahrein, in the Persian Gulf, who is under British protection, having been threatened with piratical attacks by the Arabs on the main land, our Resident at Basrah has applied for the protective presence of an English ship of war.

MUNICIPAL REPORTS.—The Bombay Gazette understands that with a view to securing uniformity with other reports of a similar character throughout India, the Secretary of State has requested that, should no sufficient reason exist to the contrary, the reports of the Bombay and Calcutta Municipalities may be in future made up for the official and not the calendar year.

JAM OF NOWANUGUR.—The Government of India, with the approval of the Home Government, has recognised as successor to the chiefship of Nowanuggur, in Kattywar, an infant son of the present Jam's first cousin, who has been selected by his Highness to supersede his own son, who was conditionally accepted as the heir in 1872, but disqualified himself for the succession by subsequent misconduct. The education of the newly-appointed heir is to be entrusted to the Political Agent, and he will become a student of the Rajkumar College when he is sufficiently advanced in years.—Times of India.

TRIAL OF THE KHOJAH ASSASSIN.—The religious fanatic, Killoo Khatao, on Saturday underwent his trial for the murder of Husson-bhoy Goolam Hoosein, mookhee of the Khoja sect. The prisoner's counsel argued that the act was the result of great provocation, but the evidence was not conclusive on this point, and the jury had no difficulty in finding the prisoner guilty of murder. Just before receiving sentence of death the accused made a statement, in which he said he had killed "only an infidel, a kafir, not a servant of God."—Times of India.

PURCHASE OF THE SASSOON DOCK.—When the Bombay Government decided to buy up the principal foreshore properties, an offer of twenty lakhs of rupees in four per cent. bonds was made to Messrs. D. Sassoon and Co. for the Sassoon Dock. This was refused, as the firm valued the property at twenty-five lakhs. Government, however, refused to make any advance on their original offer, which, it is understood, Messrs. Sassoon and Co., in view of the hopelessness of competition in the foreshore trade with Government, have decided to accept.—Times of India.

SCHOOL OF ART.—According to the Bombay correspondent of the Englishman, the Bombay School of Art, after fifteen years' duration in a dilapidated shed of wattle and dirt, has attained a local habitation almost worthy of its aesthetic and refining purposes. Most of the "properties" belonging to the institution have been transferred to the fine new "broad Gothic" building on the north of the Esplanade; and all is as smart for the working season as newly-coloured lofty rooms and Minton tiles can make the different studios and classrooms. A certain clever artistic and architectural officer of Engineers, not unknown in Calcutta, Major Mant, R.E., is to be installed as Superintendent when the new building is definitely occupied.

CITY FLOODS.—The great amount of rain-fall which there has been in Bombay since the monsoon burst has caused the usual flooding of the lower parts of the city, in Girgaum, Byculla, Khetwady-road, &c. Khetwady back-road and the many streets which branch off from those main thoroughfares are partly or wholly submerged; and the same state of things prevails in Camateepoor. Between Byculla and Worlee many acres of land are under water, presenting the appearance of huge lakes. No damage has, so far as we can learn, been occasioned by the heavy rains as yet, but considerable inconvenience must have been experienced by the inhabitants of Khetwady and other districts where the water has invaded some of the compounds, the depth being at places quite a foot.—Times of India.

STATE OF GONDUL.—The State of Gondul is shortly to follow in the wake of Bhowngger and Morvee. Joint administration has contributed a great deal to the general prosperity of the two latter States. Why should Gondul, then, be not given this boon? At the request of the Ranees—mother of the minor Thakore Bhagwut Sinjee—the Government of Bombay now contemplates placing this thriving little State under the control of two joint managers, Major Scott and Mr. Jayashankar. Major Scott is a popular officer, and of great experience. Mr. Jayashankar, though a man of average ability, is well schooled in Kattywar politics, and has held responsible posts in Gondul and Morvee.

THE VOLUNTEERS.—Since the formation of a volunteer corps the Parsee inhabitants of Bombay have expressed a desire to be allowed to raise a corps among themselves. The local Government refused to grant the necessary permission, but nothing daunted, the Parsees have (through one of their number) appealed to the Viceroy. His Excellency, whilst appreciating their loyalty and public spirit, regrets that he is unable to grant their request. He suggests, however, that those who are competent to do so should join the European Volunteer Corps. This, doubtless, many of them would be willing to do were they sure that their applications for admission to the ranks would be accepted by the European officers of the corps; but as the rules of the corps would exclude non-Christians, this happy combination cannot well take place. Thus it will be seen that the Viceroy's reply to the Parsees has placed both them and the officers of the corps in rather an awkward dilemma.—Times of India.

TRIAL OF MR. DEWEY.—The trial of Mr. Dewey, the late goods agent of the G.I.P. Railway, was commenced at the Criminal Sessions before a special jury on July 1st. The accused, it will be recollected, was charged with having in August last received a bribe of Rs. 30 from one Anundjee Lalljee for allotting the said Anundjee Lalljee a certain number of waggons. Three counsel appeared for the prosecution, while the accused was defended by Mr. Gill. The principal witness examined was Anundjee Lalljee, who swore that in August last he and his master, Toolsidas Dhanjee, went to Carnac Bunder to hear the list of names read out of those who had waggons allotted to them. When he and his master found their names were not in the list they consulted together, and, according to their account, ran after Mr. Dewey, who was driving away in a buggy, and in presence of the buggywalla gave him Rs. 30, in return for which Mr. Dewey allotted him certain waggons. In cross-examination the witness admitted that when he was post-master at Burhanpore he had been sentenced to two years' imprisonment and to pay a fine of Rs. 50, and in default thereof to suffer further imprisonment for four months, for having appropriated postage-money and for preparing documents incorrectly with fraudulent intent. He tried to qualify this statement by saying that he was tried by an assistant magistrate, but on further inquiry it transpired that he was sentenced by Captain J. E. Loch, who is an Assistant Commissioner and magistrate with full powers. He also admitted that he had never appealed against the conviction. The case terminated on the second day, when the accused was acquitted.—Times of India.

PORT TRUST.—According to the Bombay Port Trust Administration Report for 1877-78, the past year seems to have been a profitable one for the Commissioners, as after paying the Government of India the full amount of interest due, about eight and a half lakhs of rupees, they are able to show a surplus exceeding one lakh. The following table shows the estimated and the actual income and expenditure:—

	Estimate.	Actuals.	Difference.
Income .....	13,88,100	17,20,883	3,32,783
Expenditure .....	7,59,598	7,64,495	4,897

Difference ..... 6,28,502 ... 9,56,388 ... 3,27,886

According to the report "this great difference between the actual receipts and the budget estimates has been caused by the famine lasting on through a second year, which could not have been anticipated or taken into account when the budget was framed. The greater part of the increase is in the bunder revenue, due to very large imports of grain and of State railway materials, but the receipts from port dues and pilotage are also considerably above the estimate, the result of the abnormal number of vessels conveying the grain and railway materials into the port. The revenue from the bunders has been Rs. 12,71,291 against an estimate of Rs. 10,61,175, and from the harbour properties the receipts have been Rs. 3,94,284, against an estimate of Rs. 2,83,100. On the bunder there has also been a saving on expenditure, the outlay having been Rs. 2,81,036, instead of Rs. 3,16,898, but on the harbour properties the expenditure has been Rs. 13,176, in excess of the estimate, as the pilots' share of pilotage fees has, of course, been larger than was anticipated.—Times of India.

PALÆOGRAPHICAL SOCIETY.—Part III. of the Oriental Series of Fac-similes issued by this Society, under the editorship of Dr. W. Wright, Professor of Arabic at Cambridge, will contain a fine collection of Sanscrit, Arabic, Syriac, Hebrew, and Coptic plates. The Sanscrit portion consists of three plates, taken from dated MSS. brought from Nepal. The first is a part of the Ashtasahasrika, dated A.D. 1015; the second the Saravali of Kalyanavarman, A.D. 1286; and the third a specimen of the Kalachakra-tantra, A.D. 1446. These fac-similes add considerably to the stock of dated Sanscrit texts.

INDIAN CO-OPERATIVE AGENCY (LIMITED).

The first ordinary general meeting of the above Agency was held at the City Terminus Hotel, Cannon-street, on Friday, the 19th; Major General Saxton in the chair.

The notice calling the meeting having been read by the Secretary (Mr. Lambart Cowan), the following report of the Committee of Management was then read:—

"The Committee of Management had to report that that was the first general meeting of the Agency which was held as required by the Act of Parliament. The affairs of the Agency were progressing satisfactorily. Of the 5,000 shares offered to the English public, 3,561 had been allotted; other shares had been applied for, but were not yet allotted. The price list was in an advanced state of preparation, and would shortly be extensively circulated in India, Burmah, and Ceylon, when the shares reserved for allotment in India would be offered by advertisement. The Committee of Management hoped that business from India would soon commence."

The Chairman briefly advised the adoption of the report, which was seconded by Major Francois MacKenzie.

Mr. William Drew (managing director) stated that he should like to inform the shareholders that the Agency had already done some little business, a gentleman who was going to India having been their customer. He had gone round with him, and he had expressed himself perfectly satisfied with the quality and price of goods offered by the Agency. He had had prepared a statement of the result of the first week's trading, and the profit secured was satisfactory. He did not think it would be desirable to read out the figures, but any shareholder was welcome to look over the same.

Major Francis Henry Vanderzee said that he would like to know the exact position of the Company and the expense already incurred.

Mr. Macguire (assistant manager of the Delhi and London Bank) remarked the present was not the meeting to render any statement of accounts of the Agency.

Mr. Drew, in endorsing that statement, said that at the same time all the books of the Agency were open for the inspection of the shareholder at any time.

Mr. Leslie (Messrs. Leslie, Straith and Co.) stated that no accounts were required to be presented that day, the meeting being simply called in accordance with the articles of association, and if everything was not done as the Companies Act required, they might depend upon it that that circumstance would be duly taken notice of by some one. It was impossible at that early stage of the existence of the Agency to publish a statement of the assets and liabilities, or any other account, until business was in full operation.

Mr. Ann suggested that they should proceed with the adoption of the report.

The report was unanimously adopted.

The Chairman stated that the next business of the meeting was the election of directors for the ensuing year, and it was proposed that the Committee of Management, with the addition of the name of Dr. Stocker, should be the directors of the Company.

Mr. Macguire said he begged to move, "That Major-General Saxon, Major-General T. W. Mercer, Major-General T. W. Holland, L. Cowan, Esq., Dr. Matthew Kane, F.R.C.S., Major Francois MacKenzie, W. Drew, Esq., and Dr. Stocker should be directors of the Agency for the ensuing year."

Mr. F. Fisher seconded the resolution.

Major Vanderzee said that before that resolution was put to the meeting he would like to know if Dr. Stocker had any connection with India, and to draw the attention of the meeting that in electing Mr. Cowan—to whom they were much indebted for his valuable services as secretary—to a seat on the Board, that he would either have to resign his position as secretary, or receive no remuneration from that position.

The Chairman begged to remind the last speaker that in accordance with the articles of association it was not necessary that any gentleman should be connected with India to render him eligible as a director. Indeed, he thought it was to the advantage of the Agency that the Board should not be entirely composed of gentlemen connected with India. He was not aware whether Dr. Stocker was connected with India, or not, but that gentleman was present, and would no doubt answer for himself.

Dr. Stocker said that as his name had been so prominently brought before the meeting he might at once state that he was not connected with India, neither had he been there.

Mr. Drew stated that he held the position of Managing Director for life, provided he well conducted himself, and he had no doubt of doing that, and he was not entitled to any fees as an ordinary director. With regard to the Secretary being also a director he had no doubt that that gentleman would be enabled to reconcile the two positions without going contrary to the terms of the articles of association.

Mr. Cowan remarked that at present the office of Secretary was an unpaid one, but the time might arise when he might feel disposed to resign the position of director, and only hold the office of secretary.

The resolution was then unanimously agreed to.

The Chairman: That terminates the business of the general meeting, and we now resolve ourselves into an extraordinary general meeting, for the purpose of making certain alterations and additions to the Articles of Association.

The notice calling the meeting was then read by the Secretary, Mr. Cowan, who stated that it was proposed to substitute another article for No. 44 in the Articles of Association. He would read that article as it at present stood. It referred to the votes of members, and was as follows:—

"Every member shall have one vote for every share up to ten; he shall have an additional vote for every five shares beyond the first ten shares up to one hundred, and an additional vote for every ten shares beyond the first hundred shares."

Mr. James Mote (solicitor to the Company), stated that it was proposed to substitute for that article:—"Every member holding from one to ten shares shall be entitled to one vote, and to an additional vote for every additional five shares." The effect being to increase the number of the votes of the members.

The resolution was moved by Mr. Macguire, seconded by Mr. Syed Abdur Rahman, and unanimously passed.

Mr. Cowan stated that the next resolution referred to an addition to article 52, which referred to qualification of directors.

Mr. Mote said it was proposed to make the following addition:—"The qualification for each director (elected for the first time) subsequent to the first general meeting) shall be two hundred shares."

Mr. Ann proposed and Mr. Leslie seconded the resolution.

Mr. Macguire said that he rather objected to that resolution, for his idea was that fixing the qualification at two hundred shares for a director they might find out that it would turn out to be a difficulty to get good men to assist them, if they extended the liability, so as to speak, beyond one hundred shares. Anyone might feel disposed to hold £100 in shares, whilst they might not be disposed to have £200 invested. He moved as an amendment, "That the qualification of the directors be one hundred shares."

Captain Hazelgrove seconded the amendment.

Mr. Drew said he was stating a fact when he said that not one, but fifty gentlemen could be got to join the board with that qualification. Indeed, they had about sixty applications from gentlemen who were desirous of coming on its direction, so that no difficulty would be experienced in getting directors if required; in fact, fifty would come in at once if they could, and in one case, not only was the gentleman offering himself disposed to take two hundred shares, but one thousand shares if required. The raising of the qualification would be of advantage to them in making their selection.

Mr. Leslie stated that he considered £200 as the right sum as the qualification of a director.

The amendment was put to the meeting, and lost, and the original resolution agreed to.

Mr. Cowan: The next resolution refers to Article 54, which reads as follows:—"The future remuneration of the directors and for services performed previously to the first general meeting shall be determined by the Company in general meeting."

Mr. Mote: In lieu of which it was proposed that the following Article shall be substituted:—"The net profits of the trading of the Agency shall be divided in the following manner:—Managing director, as per his agreement, 10 per cent.; shareholders, 50 per cent.; board of directors, 25 per cent.; reserve, 10 per cent.; bonus to customers, 5 per cent.; provided that the board of directors shall receive no remuneration until the shareholders have received a dividend of 5 per centum."

This resolution was proposed by Mr. Macguire, seconded by Mr. Syed Abdur Rahman, and unanimously agreed to.

On the motion of Major Mackenzie, seconded by Mr. Macguire, a cordial vote of thanks was accorded to the Chairman.

The Chairman briefly acknowledged the compliment.

Mr. Drew trusted that the shareholders would subscribe for the balance of shares to be placed in this country and not allow them to get into outside hands, believing as he did that they had a very bright future before them.

The Chairman announced that it would be necessary to confirm the resolutions passed at the extraordinary general meeting, and for that object an extraordinary general meeting would be held on the 7th August, at the offices of the Company.

The proceedings then terminated.

EAST INDIA PUBLIC WORKS COMMITTEE.

On July 18 this committee again met, Lord George Hamilton in the chair, and examined Colonel George T. Chesney, R.E., President of the Royal College of Engineers, Cooper's Hill.

Colonel Chesney said he gave evidence on the operations of the Public Works Department in India as a public works officer of some years' service. His connection with the department commenced soon after he arrived in India as a subaltern engineer officer in 1856. Having performed various duties under the department for a time, he became in 1865 Inspector-General of Public Works Accounts at Calcutta, and in 1869 Superintendent of Irrigation Works. In 1870 he was called home, and was appointed President of the Royal College of Civil Engineers, then recently opened. He (Colonel Chesney) had read the evidence given before the committee by General Dickens on the old and new modes of keeping the public works accounts, and recognised in the reform in keeping those accounts a desirable object. It was very necessary that the guaranteed railway accounts should be separated from the other public works accounts, and this had been accomplished.

The witness, in reply to questions put by Lord George Hamilton (the chairman), said he advocated the extension of irrigation works on a liberal and expansive scale. But we should proceed cautiously with projects so comprehensive. As regarded general expenditure on irrigation works, he considered the "forecasts," by which the Government were now guided in making grants for irrigation purposes, an expedient ensuring safety in applying the expenditure. He thought that whatever money was spent, whether on irrigation or railways, it should be in association with some form of sinking fund, and he submitted a plan of creating a "sinking fund." He (Colonel Chesney) believed it would be necessary in future to control expenditure on public works by means of a council, commission, or trust. The commission should be entrusted with the power of making advances to municipalities desirous of constructing local works, but being deficient in the requisite funds.

The witness was next examined by the chairman to ascertain whether the Public Works Department was suitably supplied with employees by the engineering schools in England and India, and the witness gave evidence from which it appeared that while he would keep up and even extend the scientific and educational advantages of Cooper's Hill to students, he would much depend on the Indian colleges (such as Roorkee) for native recruits to the Public Works Department. Indeed, he had a plan for supplying the department with subordinate servants from the class of native students to the exclusion of the European subordinates.

The witness was proceeding to explain his mode of feeding the Public Works Department with student engineers of the Native class, when the committee adjourned.

The Committee again assembled on July 25, and examined two more witnesses; Sir G. Campbell in the chair.

Lieut.-Col. J. F. Fischer, Royal (late Madras) Engineers, was the first witness called.

Col. Fischer, after stating his various employments over a period of years as an Engineer officer attached to the Public Works Department, detailed his experience of the irrigation works on the Godavery river, and in Bellary, which works he had been ordered to survey. As far back as in 1855-6 he had surveyed the Godavery works, the Government having views towards their extension. He found Sir Arthur Cotton's projects had only been in part completed, but that the works constructed were of so excellent a character as to well warrant their continuation, and consequently in his (witness's) report to Government on the state of the Godavery system, he recommended the adoption of the further projects of Sir A. Cotton. This was the result of a careful survey of the works. The Government accordingly sanctioned the extensions, guided by Sir Arthur Cotton's plans, supplemented by a scheme of his (witness's) own for constructing certain dams and reservoirs. Unfortunately, however, the works, although commenced, were stopped by the breaking out of the great mutiny of 1857.

The next survey witness undertook was of the reservoir or tank system of Bellary in the Madras Presidency in 1859. The result of his survey of these works was that he recommended to Government the repair of a selection of the older tanks, and the construction of a number of new reservoirs, including one or two works on a large scale, the latter being designed to irrigate from 80,000 to 156,000 acres in the Bellary district. These projects, although sanctioned by the Madras Government, had not been carried out. The mutiny of 1857 interfered so greatly with the execution of public works in all parts of India, that the Government found themselves compelled to temporarily abandon them, partly on account of the changed condition of the country, partly from financial reasons. But in Bellary, where the tank system prevails as a means of irrigation, many new reservoirs have been made, and many old tanks have been repaired before and since the mutiny. The newer works are called the Government reservoirs, in contradistinction to the old tanks used by the natives before the Government came in to assist irrigation with a superior class of works. The witness enumerated in detail the number and condition of the old tanks, which had been repaired, restored, and put in working order. Some new reservoirs, sanctioned by Government, but not as yet commenced, were projects devised by witness. A large expenditure had been made on tank repairs and in keeping them in working order. There remained still much to be done in these tank districts in the way of improved irrigation.

Colonel Fischer next reviewed the irrigation system of the Central Provinces. The result of his inquiries in the districts of the Upper Godavery was that he could not recommend new works in that direction. The country was, indeed, extremely unhealthy from climatic causes that he had to abandon his inquiries, having been attacked with fever while travelling. Such projects and plans of irrigation as he had submitted to Government for the Central Provinces were abandoned on account of the unhealthiness of the country, and from financial considerations.

Reverting to Bellary, the witness described a new reservoir or dam he had designed, on the Toombudra, capable of irrigating one million acres, but the project had been abandoned for financial reasons.

After some further evidence of a general character regarding the irrigation of the Madras districts, the examination of Colonel Fischer terminated.

A. M. Rendel, Esq., consulting engineer to the Department of Indian Railways and Irrigation Works, India Office, was the next witness examined. He was giving evidence to show the rise and progress of the Indian railways, and their present position and prospects, when the committee adjourned.

CIVIL SERVICE OF INDIA.

The following, in the order of merit, are the names of the gentlemen selected in 1876, who, after two years' training in this country, have passed the final examination:—

E. Lawrence, Bombay; C. P. Caspersz, Bengal Lower Provinces; D. J. Macpherson, Bengal Lower Provinces; E. N. Baker, Bengal Lower Provinces; H. F. T. Maguire, Bengal Lower Provinces; W. H. L. Impey, North-West Provinces, Punjab, and Oudh; A. H. Collins, Bengal Lower Provinces; L. W. King, North-West Provinces, Punjab, and Oudh; A. Meredith, North-West Provinces, Punjab, and Oudh; J. C. Seaton, Madras; E. W. Collin, Bengal Lower Provinces; A. M. W. Shakespear, North-West Provinces, Punjab, and Oudh; G. R. Irwin, North-West Provinces, Punjab, and Oudh; W. W. Drew, North-West Provinces, Punjab, and Oudh; J. A. Crawford, Bombay; G. M. Williams, Madras; H. Bradley, Madras; P. Gray, North-West Provinces, Punjab, and Oudh; C. L. M. Eales, North-West Provinces, Punjab, and Oudh; W. Nethersole, North-West Provinces, Punjab, and Oudh; E. L. Cypell, North-West Provinces, Punjab, and Oudh; W. T. Hall, Bengal Lower Provinces; H. Sankey, Bengal Lower Provinces; H. A. Sim, Madras; C. H. Mounsey, Madras; E. Gray, Bombay; H. S. Otter, Madras; J. N. Atkinson, Madras; A. Porteous, Bengal Lower Provinces; A. Dingwall, Bengal Lower Provinces.

Miscellaneous.

THE "ORDER OF THE GARTER."—The Queen has been graciously pleased to confer the vacant Garter upon the Marquis of Salisbury.

COUNCIL OF INDIA.—Major General Charles J. Foster, C.B., will fill the vacancy in the Indian Council caused by the appointment of Sir Garnet Wolseley as Administrator of Cyprus.

BILLS ON INDIA.—The tenders for £300,000 in bills on India were received on July 24 at the Bank of England. The amounts allotted were—To Calcutta, £283,500, at an average rate of 1s. 8-131d.; and to Bombay, £16,500, at an average rate of 1s. 8-125d. Tenders on both Presidencies at 1s. 8½d. will receive about 14 per cent. all above that price in full.

THE PIONEER RAILWAY.—On Tuesday last his Excellency Musurus Pacha spent some hours in critically examining Mr. Haddan's system of steam caravans, designed by the inventor to open up rough countries like Asia Minor and to act as test lines for grand undertakings like the Euphrates Valley Railway. Sir F. Goldsmid and his Excellency discussed the best point of departure for this line, and the Gulf of Ayas, as proposed by Captain Cameron and Mr. Haddan, was acquiesced in as by far the best. Colonel Alcock, Mr. Rutson, Sir George Campbell, M.P., and others were also present.

THE PARIS EXHIBITION.—The objects prepared by Messrs. Osler, of Birmingham and London, for exhibition at Paris surpass their memorable achievement of 1851. They abundantly sustain the reputation of the Birmingham as well as of the English glass trade by their present display of table glass of all kinds, table decorations in glass, lamps and glass chandeliers, which are remarkable for their elegance of form, purity of colour, and richness of engraving and cutting. One magnificent chandelier is a veritable triumph of glass work. The difficulties which have been encountered and overcome in a work of such massive proportions, combined with the most careful attention to the elaboration of the minutest details, can only be justly estimated and appreciated by those who know something of glass making. A superb chair of state, intended for an Eastern sovereign or prince, is another rich and striking object in the collection. The framework is of cut glass, the back and seat being covered with crimson velvet, and it is as strong and solid as if it were made of wood or metal.

THE EAST INDIA ASSOCIATION.—The annual meeting of this Association was held on Wednesday in the society's rooms, Great George-street, Westminster, under the chairmanship of Mr. E. B. Eastwick, C.B. The report submitted by the council stated that they had continued to carry out the objects for which the Association was instituted—viz., the independent and disinterested advocacy and promotion of the public interests and welfare of the inhabitants of India. For ten years the council have been engaged, not unsuccessfully, in the important work they have undertaken, and during that time much useful information regarding Indian subjects has been diffused through the land by various agencies ; and the Association has proved a valuable medium of communication for the Princes and people of India with the Parliament and people at home. The report was adopted, and the Right Hon. Sir Lawrence Peel re-elected president for the ensuing year. As council, a number of distinguished Anglo-Indians were elected, including Sir Charles Wingfield, K.C.S.I., Mr. Denison, M.P., Mr. Leith, M.P., General Sir G. Malcolm, K.C.B., Sir George Balfour, M.P., General Sir Arthur Cotton, K.C.S.I., and General Sir LeGrand Jacob, C.B., &c.

MERCANTILE FAILURE.—IN RE G. M. KIELL.—This debtor, George Middleton Kiell, described as a merchant, underwriter, and insurance broker, of St. Helen's place, Bishopsgate, and Kensington Park-gardens, has presented a petition for liquidation. Mr. Linklater, on behalf of the debtor, and with the concurrence of creditors whose debts amounted to £90,000 and upwards, applied that Mr. C. F. Kemp should be appointed receiver and manager of the business. The evidence in support of the application showed that the debtor had been in business since the year 1858, but, in consequence of the failure of Messrs. Hazard and Caldecott, the well-known wool-brokers, he had been compelled to suspend payment, with liabilities not exceeding £200,000. The more important part of the debtor's business as a merchant consisted in the execution of "indents" and consignments of merchandise to India, China, the Cape, and elsewhere, and great care was necessary in their management ; and large quantities of produce and remittances in money and bills were daily coming in. It further appeared that the premiums in connection with the underwriting and insurance branches of the business were payable, and it was necessary the goodwill should be preserved and the property protected. His Honour granted the application.

THE LATE DR. OLDHAM.—The death is announced of Dr. Thomas Oldham, who was from its origination in 1850 till 1876 at the head of the Geological Survey of India. It was under his direction that the official geological survey was commenced, first under the Hon. East India Company, and afterwards as part of the Government public service ; and until his retirement from ill-health he had the control of the issue of the official geological maps, as portion by portion the work was completed, and the issue of the memoirs explanatory of the maps. In 1861, eleven years after the survey was commenced, he originated the publication of the folio-sized "Paleontologia Indica," which consisted of plates, with descriptive letter-press, illustrating the fossils of the country, and the work has progressed steadily in fasciculi as an official publication printed by command of the Governor-General of India. Dr. Oldham was born in Dublin in May, 1816, and after education at a private school, entered at Trinity College, Dublin, at the age of sixteen. After taking his B.A., he studied in 1837-8 at the engineering school of Edinburgh, and attended Jameson's lectures on geology and mineralogy. Returning to Ireland in 1839, he became chief geological assistant to Major-General Portlock, then at the head of the survey of Ireland, and he helped in the preparation of the well-known report on Londonderry, Tyrone, &c., published in 1843. After being for a while curator and assistant-secretary of the Geological Society of Dublin, he held for a year the professorship of engineering, and in 1845 succeeded the late Professor John Phillips as Professor of Geology. He was then appointed local director of the geological survey of Ireland, and the Geological Society of Dublin elected him its president. After the various experiences thus gained, in 1850 he was appointed to organise the geological survey of India. There were many unexpected difficulties to contend with, but during the sixteen years of his office these were more or less overcome. While in India he became a member of the Royal Asiatic Society of Bengal, and was four times president. Besides being elected a fellow of the Royal Society in 1848, he received the Royal medal of the Society in 1875. Dr. Oldham was also a fellow of the Geological Society since 1843, was a member of the Royal Irish Academy, and an honorary LL.D. The Emperor of Austria conferred on him a medal in recognition of his work. The papers he wrote, apart from his official work, were not numerous. Among his paleontological researches and discoveries, the "Oldhamia" will be always associated with his name. He died at Rugby July 17.

India in Parliament.

HOUSE OF LORDS, MONDAY, July 22.—THE RECENT FAMINE.—Lord NAPIER and ETRICK, in calling attention to the despatch of the Secretary for India on the subject of the recent famine in Western and Southern India, described the nature of the calamity and the measures adopted for its relief. He asked the Government whether they intend to lay on the table any estimate of the number of persons who have perished by hunger, or by its immediate consequences, in the Presidency of Madras and in Mysor, for he had heard that in one district of the latter State one-third of the population had disappeared, and that the highways and byways were full of human bones. —Lord CRANBROOK maintained that there was no desire on the part of the Government to conceal the truth with regard to the famine in India. It was true that there was at first a failure in respect to measures of relief in Mysor, but that fault was put an end to ; and though he admitted it was a great pity that the Government should not be in a position to meet distress such as had occurred, yet it should be recollected that the distress came on suddenly. Though he was unable to give an accurate return of the deaths which had occurred, he was ready to lay on the table the same information as the Government possessed. The famine had been a terrible calamity, but by the latest accounts it appeared that the number of persons applying for relief was daily diminishing.

HOUSE OF COMMONS, MONDAY, July 22.—REVENUE OF CYPRUS.—Answering a question from Mr. PULESTON as to the disposal of the surplus revenue or tribute of Cyprus, the CHANCELLOR of the EXCHEQUER said that the amount of it had not yet been ascertained, but whether it would be paid over or treated as a matter of account between the two Governments was not yet settled.

INDIAN TROOPS AT MALTA.—On the motion of Colonel STANLEY, it was resolved to appoint a select committee to inquire into the cost of the movement of Indian troops to Malta, &c.—In answer to Mr. E. JENKINS, Colonel STANLEY said that the Indian troops stationed there would be on the same footing as while they were at Malta, and they would not be added to the permanent strength of the British army, nor would the Indian army be recruited to fill up their places.—In answer to Mr. MUNTZ, the ATTORNEY-GENERAL said that the British troops at Cyprus would be under the Mutiny Act, which extended to all her Majesty's troops everywhere, with the exception of the Indian army, which had a Mutiny Act of its own. Cyprus, he added, was not a Crown colony. Upon which Sir W. HARCOURT gave notice that he would ask under what law the Administrator is to govern the civil and immigrant population.

HOUSE OF LORDS, TUESDAY, July 23.—CYPRUS.—Lord CAMPERDOWN put some questions to the Government respecting the finances of the island of Cyprus, and expressed an opinion that this country would, under the agreement to assume the government of that island, be taking on herself the responsibility of a large expenditure. —Lord SALISBURY said that the object of the agreement with the Porte was that in case there should be a surplus of revenue in Cyprus that surplus should go to the Porte. At present there were no details on the subject which the Government could lay on the Table.—Lord GRANVILLE complained that throughout the proceedings the Government had adopted a system of secrecy, and he really doubted whether they had any detailed information respecting Cyprus previous to the cession of the island.—Lord HAMMOND wished to know whether Lord Salisbury had taken any pains to ascertain the actual expense of the Turkish administration of Cyprus, and he asked how this country was to maintain the cost of the naval and military establishments there.—Lord BEACONSFIELD stated, in reply to the charge, that the Government had maintained a system of secrecy in respect to the occupation of Cyprus, that the fact was that the negotiation was a secret transaction, and therefore could not be divulged ; but whenever the question came on for discussion ; he should be prepared to give valid reasons for that secrecy.—Lord CARDWELL commented on the fact that no assurance had been given of the cessation of the system of slavery in Cyprus, and after some remarks from the LORD CHANCELLOR and other peers, the subject dropped.

HOUSE OF COMMONS, TUESDAY, July 23.—CYPRUS.—In answer to a question from Sir WILLIAM HARCOURT, the ATTORNEY-GENERAL said that, under the Foreign Jurisdiction Act, any power or jurisdiction which the Queen possessed by Treaty out of her dominions would be exercised in as ample a manner as if she had acquired it by cession or conquest. In a ceded or conquered country which had laws of its own those laws would remain until altered, unless they appeared to be contrary to natural justice. British subjects in Cyprus would have justice administered to them according to their own laws, and the natives of Cyprus passing into other parts of the dominions of the Sultan would be treated as Turkish subjects. While the Government of Cyprus continued to be administered by her Majesty, she would have the right to make such laws and ordinances as seemed necessary, but Cyprus would not become part of her Majesty's possessions in any other sense than as an island occupied and administered by her Majesty according to the terms of the Convention.

INDIAN VERNACULAR PRESS ACT.—On Tuesday, Mr. GLADSTONE, in calling attention to the Indian Vernacular Press Act, complained, first of all, of the rapidity with which Lord Salisbury had sanctioned the suspension of a fundamental law of India, and after an historical retrospect of the rise of the liberty of the Press in India, proceeded to examine the composition of the Legislative Council by which the Act was passed, pointing out that not one of them had the smallest practical acquaintance of the working of free institutions. Discussing next the Act itself, and the circumstances under which it was passed, he condemned the haste and secrecy of the proceedings, the distinction drawn between the Vernacular and the Anglo-Indian Press, the mixing up of private libels with seditious writings, and the removal of the Press prosecutions from the ordinary tribunals to the Executive. No proof had been given that the present law had been tried and found wanting, and going through the extracts cited as proofs of the disaffection and disloyalty of the Vernacular Press, he expressed his amazement at the marked asperity of view which could treat them as dangerous or disloyal to British rule. He regarded them rather as trash and rubbish unworthy of the fuss which had been made over them, and agreed with the Duke of Buckingham that these Vernacular papers are useful indications of the undercurrent of Indian opinion. Lord Cranbrook's despatch, though he approved of it as far as it went, would not be accepted as sufficient; and not wishing to bring about the recall of Lord Lytton or to discredit the Indian Government, he contented himself with moving an address, praying that all proceedings taken under the Act may be laid before Parliament from time to time.—Mr. O'DONNELL moved as an amendment a string of resolutions, in which he condemned Lord Lytton for improperly obtaining the sanction of the Home Government to the Act, declared the extracts furnished in justification of the Act to be garbled and falsified, and deplored the insulting tone used towards the people and languages of India. He regarded the Gagging Act as one-sided and inopportune.—Mr. GOSSETT advised the Government to accept the resolution as the best mode of minimising the evil result of a policy which, perhaps, they would not like to reverse.—Sir G. CAMPBELL also thought the resolution innocent and reasonable, because all the proceedings must be published in the Gazette. As to the merits of the policy there was much to be said on both sides, and he still wavered much between them. It involved the great question whether our Government in India should continue to be despotic or whether it would be possible to graft free institutions upon it. When first he went to India he was much impressed with the importance of maintaining the prestige of the Government by preserving its unfettered power of action; but towards the close of his career he was inclined to think, when the period of transition was passed, that we might introduce free institutions. Though he disapproved this particular Act, he allowed that something must be done to check the licence of the Indian Press, and he suggested a more summary and speedy method of punishing the minor Press offences.—Mr. SMOLLETT, while censuring the precipitation with which the Act was passed, contended that it was absolutely necessary for the security of our Indian Empire.—Mr. EVANS, relying on recent experience of India, agreed with Mr. Gladstone that too much stress had been laid on these extracts, and though anxious to support the Indian Government, he saw no harm in agreeing to the resolution.—Mr. ONSLOW, on the other hand, thought the resolution would do harm.—Mr. SHAW-LEFEVRE expressed his astonishment that the Government should regard as seditious the foolish rubbish of which the articles cited mostly consisted.—Mr. F. GATHORNE-HARDY showed at length that all the Indian authorities—in the Council at home, in the Council at Calcutta, as well as those engaged in the actual administration of India—were of opinion that something should be done, and the majority of them approved this Act.—Mr. FAWCETT laid special stress on the manner in which the Act was passed, which he insisted had forced the hand of the Secretary of State and deprived him practically of all discretion. From Lord Cranbrook's despatch he inferred that he disapproved the Act, though neither he nor his Council could take any step which might result in Lord Lytton's resignation. The modification which Lord Cranbrook had made would not really mitigate the severity of the Act.—Mr. E. STANHOPE traced the original necessity for dealing with the Indian Press at this particular time to the agitation created in India by the Eastern Question, and, with regard to the extracts referred to, pointed out that it was impossible to judge of their effect on the people of India by English opinion. As to the distinction between the Vernacular and the English Press, there was no reason why the latter, which, generally speaking, was well conducted, should be so treated. The Governor-General hoped that there would be no necessity for putting the Act into operation, and it would not be put into operation anywhere without his consent; and since it had been passed there had been a marked absence of a seditious tone in the Native Press. There was ample security for publicity, and notably the annual report which was made of the progress of India; but to pass this motion would be to weaken the hands of the Indian Executive.—Sir H. JAMES reviewed the circumstances under which the Act was passed, contending that the plea of urgency was fictitious, and that Lord Salisbury had no excuse for not consulting his Council, and expatiated on the ill effects which would be produced in India by this harsh and hurried legislation.—The CHANCELLOR of the EXCHEQUER held that Sir H. James was mistaken both as to his facts and his law. The necessity for passing the Act was to be regretted, and there was no doubt that it would be put into operation with caution; but to concede Mr. Gladstone's demand would be an interference with the administration of India, fraught with most dangerous consequences both in itself and as a precedent. At the same time he promised that the Indian Government should be instructed to keep the Secretary of State fully informed of the proceedings under the Act, and they should be included in the Annual Reports.—Mr. GLADSTONE replied, and, a division being taken on his motion, it was negatived by 208 to 152. Mr. O'Donnell's amendment then became the substantive question, and on its being put Sir A. GORDON and Mr. BIGGAR took the opportunity of explaining that they had voted with the majority by mistake.—Mr. SULLIVAN moved the adjournment of the debate, complaining of the "strategy" of the Government in voting with the "Noes;" but the CHANCELLOR of the EXCHEQUER maintained that, meaning to oppose both motion and amendment, they had taken the correct course. Some controversy followed on this point, but ultimately, the motion for adjournment having been negatived, Mr. O'Donnell's amendment was also negatived without a division.

The Select Committee of the House of Commons in the transport and employment of Indian native troops abroad consists of Sir George Campbell, Sir John Hay, Mr. Childers, Sir Henry Have-lock, Mr. Campbell-Bannermann, Colonel Arbuthnot, Mr. Marten, Mr. Sampson Lloyd, Mr. Richard Power, Colonel Hayter, Lord Burghley, Sir Henry Wilmot, Mr. Deedes, Mr. Fawcett, and Lord Eustace Cecil.

NOTES ON MUHAMMADANISM

REV. T. P. HUGHES, M.R.A.S., O. M. S., Missionary to the Afghans, Peshawar.

Opinions of the Press on the First Edition.

"Altogether an admirable little book. It combines two excellent qualities, abundance of facts and lack of theories. . . . On every one of the numerous heads (over fifty) into which the book is divided Mr. Hughes furnishes a large amount of very valuable information, which it would be exceedingly difficult to collect from even a large library of works on the subject. The book might well be called a 'Dictionary of Muhammadan Theology,' for we know of no English work which combines a methodical arrangement (and consequently facility of reference), with fulness of information in so high a degree as the little volume before us."—The Academy.

"It contains multum in parvo, and is about the best outlines of the tenets of the Muslim faith which we have seen. It has, moreover, the rare merit of being accurate; and although it contains a few passages which we would gladly see expunged, it cannot fail to be useful to all Government employes who have to deal with Muhammadans, whilst to Missionaries it will be invaluable."—The Times of India.

"This small book is the most luminous, most convenient, and, we think, the most accurate, outline of the tenets and practices of Islamism that we have met with. It seems exactly the sort of comprehensive and trustworthy book in small compass, on this subject, that we and many more have often looked for in vain. . . . The author has evidently studied his subject in a faithful, laborious, and scholarly manner, and has not only studied but mastered it. The work is of great value for general students, and for men whose work lies among the Mussulman population, such as Civil Servants and Missionaries, it seems to be the very work that is wanted."—The Friend of India.

"In brief compass it contains a large amount of reliable information. Instead of theories and fancies, facts are placed before us. Muhammadanism is represented as it really is, not as it is supposed that it might possibly be. Instead of retailing the speculations current in literary society at home, Mr. Hughes furnishes us with brief but incisive statements, which, so far as they go, leave nothing to be desired."—The Church Missionary Intelligencer.

"It is manifest throughout the work that we have before us the opinions of one thoroughly conversant with the subject, and who is uttering no random notions. . . . We strongly recommend 'Notes on Muhammadanism.' Our Clergy especially, even though they are not Missionaries, and have no intention of labouring amongst Muhammadans or consorting with them, ought to have at least as much knowledge of the system as can be most readily acquired, with a very little careful study, from this useful treatise."—The Record.

WHITE'S MOC-MAIN LEVER

WHITE'S MOC-MAIN LEVER TRUSS, Perfected and
Exhibited in the Great Exhibition of 1851, is allowed by upwards of 500 Medical Gentlemen to be the most effective invention in the curative treatment of Hernia. The use of a steel spring, so often hurtful in its effects, is here avoided; a soft bandage being worn round the body, while the requisite resisting power is supplied by the MOC-MAIN PAD and PATENT LEVER, fitting with so much ease and closeness that it cannot be detected, and may be worn during sleep. A descriptive circular may be had, and the Truss (which cannot fail to fit) forwarded by post on the circumference of the body two inches below the hips being sent to the Manufacturer.

Mr. WHITE, 228, Piccadilly, London.

Post-office Orders payable to JOHN WHITE, Postoffice, Piccadilly.

NEW PATENT.

ELASTIC STOCKINGS, KNEE CAPS,

&c.—The material of which these are made is recommended by the Faculty as being peculiarly elastic and compressible, and the best invention for giving efficient and permanent support in all cases of weakness and swelling of the Legs, Varicose Veins, Sprains, &c.
It is porous, light in texture, and inexpensive, and is drawn on like an ordinary stocking. Price 4s. 6d., 7s. 6d., 10s. to 16s. each; postage, free.

THE INDIAN TEA AGENCY, LIMITED,

Has been Established to Supply DIRECT to the PUBLIC every kind of PURE TEA from ALL THE TEA-GROWING DISTRICTS OF INDIA.

The Agency is not interested in any single Plantation, or the produce of any particular district. Though numbering among its Shareholders gentlemen largely interested in all the Tea-producing districts of India, the administration of the Company is tied to none, and the business is conducted solely with the object of introducing the best Indian Teas to the public, wherever grown. Our purchases are made at the Plantations, at the Calcutta Sales, or in Mincing-lane, as may be most advantageous, and FOR CASH, to be sold FOR CASH, at the most moderate possible profit consistent with quality, and an absolute guarantee of purity, strength, and flavour.

The Teas are Sold as follows:—

- 1.—Our own STANDARD MIXTURES, blended from the produce of the best plantations in India.
- 2.—DISTRICT BLENDS, to suit the tastes of those who have been accustomed to or prefer Tea from any of the Indian Tea-growing districts, viz.:

Assam, Cachar, Sylhet, Darjeeling, Kangra, Dehra Dhoon, Kumaon, Chittagong, The Neilgherries, Ceylon, and Singapore.

3.—UNMIXED TEA, from the leading plantations as imported. We have made arrangements with the principal Tea Planters to keep a stock of their Teas for this purpose, and generally can undertake to procure the Tea of any special plantation.

THE PRICES have been fixed on the most moderate scale for Cash. For Nos. 1 and 2 (our own and the District blends) the prices run from 2s. to 6s. per lb. according to quality. For No. 3 the prices are somewhat higher, to cover the extra cost and trouble of keeping them in stock in so many varieties. See Price List.

All Tea of and above 3 lbs. will be carefully packed in tin canisters (without extra charge), to preserve its freshness and full aroma, and delivered free in London and the Suburban districts. Purchases of £2 and upwards free to any Railway Station. Sold in packets of 1 lb.,  $\frac{1}{2}$  lb., and  $\frac{1}{4}$  lb.

A. BURRELL, Managing Director.

PROSPECTUSES, SAMPLES of TEA, and every Information can be obtained upon application to the Managing Director, at the Chief London Office of

PROSPECTUS.

1.—The extraordinary success and popularity which have attended the working of well-regulated Co-operative Societies in England have induced the Committee of The Indian Co-operative Agency, Limited, to establish this Association for the purpose of supplying the Officers and Men of Her Imperial Majesty's Forces, Members of the Civil and Unconquered Services, Railway Officials, Contractors, Planters and all others, in India, British Burmah, and Ceylon, with every article in domestic and general use, at the lowest possible price.

2.—This Agency does not propose to establish Store Rooms or Warehouses; it thereby avoids the large outlay which other societies have incurred. It will simply have Offices in London, and a Sample Room, where orders will be received and the general business of the Association conducted.

3.—The high prices of English goods in India are caused by the oft-recurring and various charges between the place of manufacture, or original purchase, and the place of delivery.

The manufacturer, wholesale dealer, retailer, broker, shipping agent, inland carrier, and, finally, the tradesman in India, have each their own profit to make, besides the duties and additional charges imposed to make good loss by deterioration of stock, breakage, bad debts and long credit.

It is not too much to say that the cost of most articles of general consumption in India is at least doubled before the goods reach the consumer. Under the principle adopted by The Indian Co-operative Agency, the goods will be supplied to the consumer direct from the manufacturer or wholesale dealer.

The saving effected by the purchase of goods from this agency, for cash, is thus very considerable. It has been estimated that in England, the benefits to a family, under the co-operative system, amount to an average economy of 25 per cent., and this saving is effected in dealings with societies which have expended vast sums in the purchase and storage of stock, much of it of a perishable character, rent of warehouses and other premises, establishments, &c., &c. It may be fairly estimated that, under the principle adopted by this Association, the saving to a family will amount—according to the class of goods supplied—to from 40 to 50 per cent.; taking, therefore, a monthly expenditure of 100 rupees, there is a monthly saving of 40 to 60 rupees.

4.—In proportion to the support it receives from India, this Association proposes to develop itself into a general Agency on co-operative principles, in which entirely new features will be introduced; and, as business extends, each department will be under the superintendence of an Official of experience, specially qualified for the duties assigned to him.

Besides the comprehensive branches of business embraced under clause 1 of this prospectus, the Indian Co-operative Agency proposes to open out, as early as possible, the following departments, viz. :—

EDUCATIONAL DEPARTMENT.

In this department, arrangements will be made for receiving the Children of Parents absent in India on landing in England; placing them at selected Establishments; auditing and discharging School bills; corresponding with Parents; providing accommodation for native Students, &c., &c.

LITERARY DEPARTMENT.

Will answer references on every subject; supply, and, if required, select books, serials, &c. &c., to Station and Regimental Libraries, Messes and Schools, at very reduced rates. In connection with this department, arrangements will be made for the establishment of Reading Rooms, supplied with the Indian and London papers.

SERVICE DEPARTMENT.

In this department it is proposed to register applications for employment by persons of all classes of Her Imperial Majesty's subjects in India without fee or charge, and to assist them in obtaining the same. Assistance will be given to Soldiers of the Indian Army, or who have served in India, to become Commissioners, Messengers, &c., &c.

LEGAL DEPARTMENT.

The Solicitor of the Agency and others will, at minimum cost to Members, instruct counsel in all cases referred; will obtain opinions of leading Members of the legal profession on difficult points, and will carry cases from India through the superior Courts in England.

GENERAL DEPARTMENT.

Native Gentlemen and others visiting England will be received, and suitable accommodation secured for them. Native Secretaries and Translators will be employed to communicate with the Ministers of Native Independent and Tributary States, and native Gentlemen of rank, and every facility will be afforded for acquirement of the languages of India.

5.—The management of the affairs of The Indian Co-operative Agency is vested in a Committee of Gentlemen who have been long connected with India, and are intimately acquainted with the wants and requirements of the Indian public, or who command a large commercial acquaintance and influence in the City of London.

6.—The Committee, all of whom are Shareholders, and interested in the success of the undertaking, are not to receive any remuneration for their services until a dividend of 5 per cent. has been declared to the Shareholders.

7.—The first principle of the Association is that of Cash Payment, without which orders will remain unexecuted. Orders accompanied by a Deposit Receipt from the Agency's Bankers in India will be dealt with as cash payments. Currency Notes will be received in payment at the exchange of the day.

8.—For the present it is only intended to issue 10,000 Shares, 5,000 of which are reserved for India, and to call up, in respect of them, five shillings per share.

9.—The liability of Shareholders, it will be distinctly understood, is limited to the amount of shares held by them. Life Members (non-shareholders) will be admitted upon payment of 10 Rupees in India, or £1 in England. Such Members will not be entitled to participate in the profits, except such as may be given as a "bonus," but will share in all the other advantages of the Association.

10.—An Agreement bearing date the First day of April, 1878, and made between William Drew of the one part, and Thomas Woollams Holland, Lambart Cowan, and Frederick Montague Raynsford, for and on behalf of the said Indian Co-operative Agency, Limited, of the other part, has been entered into, which can be seen at the Office of the Solicitor of the Company.

11.—All Cheques and Post Office Orders to be made payable to the Manager, Delhi and London Bank, Limited, London. All letters to be addressed to The Indian Co-operative Agency, Limited, 26, Holborn Viaduct, London.

FORM OF APPLICATION FOR SHARES.—To be retained by the Bankers.

No. _____
To the Directors of the Indian Co-operative Agency (Limited).
Gentlemen,—Having paid to your credit at the Delhi and London Bank (Limited) the sum of _____ I request that you will allot me _____ Shares in the above Company, and I hereby agree to accept such shares, or any less number that you may allot to me, on the conditions stated in the Prospectus, and subject to the Memorandum and Articles of Association of the Company.

DR. J. COLLIS BROWNE'S CHLORODYNE.

THE ORIGINAL AND ONLY GENUINE.

CHLORODYNE is admitted by the Profession to be the most wonderful and valuable remedy ever discovered. CHLORODYNE is the best remedy known for Coughs, Consumption, Bronchitis, Asthma. CHLORODYNE effectually checks and arrests those too often fatal diseases—Diphtheria, Fever, Croup, Ague. CHLORODYNE acts like a charm in Diarrhœa, and is the only specific in Cholera and Dysentery. CHLORODYNE effectually cuts short all attacks of Epilepsy, Hysteria, Palpitation, and Spasms. CHLORODYNE is the only palliative in Neuralgia, Rheumatism, Gout, Cancer, Toothache, Meningitis, &c.

Earl Russell communicated to the College of Physicians that he had received a despatch from her Majesty's Consul at Manila, to the effect that Cholera has been raging fearfully, and that the ONLY remedy of any service was CHLORODYNE.—See Lancet, 1st Dec., 1864.

CAUTION.—BEWARE OF PIRACY AND IMITATIONS.

CAUTION.—BEWARE OF PIRACY AND IMITATIONS.
CAUTION.—Vice-Chancellor Sir W. PAGE WOOD stated that Dr. J. COLLIS BROWNE was, undoubtedly, the Inventor of CHLORODYNE: that the story of the Defendant, Freeman, was deliberately untrue, which, he regretted to say, had been sworn to.—See Times, 13th July, 1864.

Summary and Review.

OUR latest advices by the Overland Mail are, from Bombay, July 12; Aianabad and Madras, July 10; Calcutta, July 9.

THE Times telegram of the 28th ult. reported a good and general rainfall, and a tendency towards a fall in prices in the Presidency of Madras. The plague of locusts, however, is causing great anxiety, and energetic measures are being adopted for the extermination of these pests. Our advices show that prospects are much brighter than might be concluded from the wise precautions taken by the Madras Government.

ON the 3rd July the Madras Government telegraphed for leave to begin the South Coast Canal, and for twelve young Engineers. Sanction to the work has been given by the Government of India by wire, and twelve Engineers ordered to Madras. The Secretary of State has been asked to warn fifty junior Engineers on furlough to be ready to come out to famine work in case need arises. The Madras Mail remarks:—"It is well to be prepared for the worst, but the worst is not therefore inevitable." The whole of the Western Coast has had a splendid monsoon. In a great part of Mysor, Cuddapah, and Kurnool, the prospects are hopeful, and in Nellor and Bellary there has been an abatement of anxiety. The more southerly districts are still short of rain; and the Neilgherries have this year experienced the capriciousness of the monsoon. But the failure of rain has been but partial. The rivers are lower than usual for the time of year; cultivation is checked, and harvests are mostly light; but in most localities tanks are fairly well supplied with water, and forage is abundant. The local reports from Oudh give no room for complaint; indications are not lacking that the province will have all the moisture needed. Anxiety about the future was not dispelled in the North-West Province, and relief works were announced for Sattara; but it may be said that on the whole the south-west monsoon has fully established itself all over India.

THE Meteorological Telegram of July 10 recorded that the barometer had risen during the past twenty-four hours in Northern India, especially at Jacobabad and Lahor. It was falling slowly in Southern India, Northan Bengal and Assam. Wind directions were abnormal in Northern India. North-easterly winds prevailed at Lucknow, Bareilly, Roorkee, Delhi; south-westerly winds at Calcutta and neighbourhood. Heavy rainfall continued in Upper India. Seventy-two tenths inch fall during day at Bareilly; thirty-six tenths Delhi; six tenths Roorkee; five tenths Lucknow. Fair rain in Behar and Benares division; two inches at Patna, thirteen tenths at Benares were registered. Light scattered showers in Bengal. Moderate rain in Bombay and Madras presidencies. Three-tenths fell at Masulipatam, Bellary, and Bangalor. Eighteen tenths fell at Ajmir and four tenths at Multan.

THE following is the report of the state of the season and prospects of the crops for the week ending 2nd July:—"More or less rain reported from all districts in Madras; the moonsoon continues to give good falls on the West Coast; and there has also been heavy rain in the Northern districts on the East Coast, upwards of five inches having fallen at Masulipatam; good showers are reported from the Ceded districts and Kurnool; in the Southern districts on the East Coast the fall has been light; prospects continue to improve slightly; prices are fluctuating. The total number on relief works is 137,621, and gratuitously relieved 74,130, more by 2,900 and 1,387 than last week. In Mysor there has been good rain, and prospects are improved; prices are rising in three districts, stationary elsewhere; the total number on relief works for the week ending the 22nd ultimo was 37,130, and gratuitously relieved 12,059, more by 1,815 and less by 493 than in the previous week. In Bombay very heavy rain has fallen in all the Coast districts from Kanara to Surat; in Northern Guzerat, parts of the Deccan and the Southern Mahratta Country and Nasik the rainfall has been scanty, and some anxiety is felt; the river continues high in Sind, where prospects are good. There has been good rain throughout Berar, and sowings are progressing. In the Central Provinces general rain has fallen and sowings are going on; and prices are stationary in most districts. In Central India general rain is reported throughout Malwa, showers elsewhere. In Rajputana there has been very heavy rain in Jhallawar, and showers at all other reporting stations, except Harowtee; prospects seem good, except in Ulwur. In Bengal there has been good general rain; the fall was however light in Dacca, Midnapore, Burdwan, Sarun, Chumparun and Balasor; prospects are good. In Assam there has been steady rain, and the crops promise well. In Burmah also there has been general rain. In the North-Western Provinces and Oudh heavy rain is reported from Rohilkhand, and good falls throughout Oudh, except at Lucknow; at Benares and Mirzapore there has also been good rain, elsewhere the fall has been scanty, and more is much needed. In the Punjab light rain is reported only from Jullunder, Amritsar, Rawalpindi, Mooltan and Dera Ismail Khan, to which later accounts add Delhi.

THE death of the Hon James Alwis, the representative in the Legislative Assembly of the Singhalese community, and the senior Advocate of the Supreme Court, at the age of fifty-five, has cast a gloom over the community of Colombo, the deceased gentleman being held in high estimation by all classes of the people; he had distinguished himself by his learned works in Pali and Singhalese, whilst he also wrote many popular books and delivered frequent lectures in the English language.

WE regret to learn from the Times of India that Miss Temple, daughter of the Governor, has been compelled by illness to return to England. The same journal states that the object of Sir John's Strachey's visit to Europe is to consult an oculist. A year or two ago he underwent an operation, which benefited his sight, but for a time only. It is uncertain if he will return before the end of the year, as the length of his absence will depend on the opinions of the doctors.

THE Mandalay correspondent of the Rangoon Times writes under date June 15 :—"Mr. Shaw, our Resident, has been with the Mingyee and officials several times in reference to the murder of Mr. Cooper, late Political Agent at Bhamo; but the upshot of the Burmese Government's decision in this matter is not known. The murderer is still at Bhamo under custody, and it is believed he will be sentenced to transportation for life to Mogoung or some outlawed station—which virtually amounts to a mild way of despatching a criminal to his final resting-place." The fire at Mandalay, mentioned in our last issue, has been extinguished, 4,750 houses having been destroyed, including those of several of the Queens and Princes. No lives were lost; the palace escaped.

AN important resolution of the Government of India, setting forth various schemes for relief works to be undertaken, if found necessary, in the North-West Provinces, was published on the 27th and telegraphed to the Times on the 28th ult. The task committed to the local Government is to provide in each locality a sufficient number of useful works which could be carried on for a longer or shorter period. The population exceeds forty millions, and it is estimated that the maximum time for which relief works need be contemplated is two hundred days. The work done by relief labourers would be paid at threefold the wages given in ordinary times. On this basis four schedules are prepared containing schemes for relief works, graduated according to the intensity of the distress. The first measure provides works for 1,770,795 at a cost of Rs. 277,02,253; the second involves an estimated expenditure of Rs. 254,47,566; the third contains additional works estimated at Rs. 84,79,926. The works comprised in the three schedules will employ 2,761,667. The fourth contains additional works estimated at Rs. 358,26,510. The total estimate provides for over nine per cent. of the whole population at an estimated expenditure of nine and-three quarter millions. Stress is laid on limiting the relief operations to the bare wants of the people, and upon, (1) exacting full work; (2) the location of the works at a distance from the centres of population; and (3) the restriction of relief wages to the average rate of subsistence. Unless such conditions were rigorously maintained, there would arise the twofold danger of the exhaustion of the resources and the pauperisation of the whole population. The Famine Commissioner will continue his sittings at Simla till the cold weather has set in; he will then visit various provinces and examine witnesses.

THE Times correspondent telegraphs from Calcutta that the navigation report for the first two months of the financial year, as compared with those of last year, gives the imports of merchandise at Rs. 685,74,614, against Rs. 661,61,108; treasure, at Rs. 149,80,293, against Rs. 235,70,621; the exports of merchandise at Rs. 1,194,69,524, against Rs. 1,377,50,081; and of treasure at Rs. 20,26,959, against Rs. 19,54,432. The gross import duty collected is Rs. 66,94,354, against Rs. 65,65,066; and the export duty Rs. 11,53,305, against Rs. 10,50,163.

COLONEL F. C. MAISEY has been placed on special duty with the Government of India, for the purpose of inquiring into the existing law on the subject of house property in cantonments. House proprietors, or people interested, are invited to avail themselves of the present opportunity to represent their grievances. It appears the Chief Court of the Punjab, the Advocate General at Calcutta, and the Legal Member of the Viceroy's Council, are not in accord on the subject of recent decisions affecting immovable property in cantonments. Hence the necessity for new legislation, as soon as the way has been prepared by the preliminary inquiry referred to.

WE are informed by the Pioneer that those dangerous fanatics known as the Wahabis (the Puritans of Islam) have been recently taking a leaf out of a well-known Scotch divine's book of prophecy. In a proclamation which has been posted in nearly every mosque in Northern India, the 11th July was fixed as the day on which the world was to come to an end. The story, as set forth in the manifesto, runs as follows:—A priest in the mosque at Medina has lately had a visit from the Prophet. The Prophet laments the degenerated condition of his followers, and attributes the recent short rainfalls and consequent scarcity to neglect of his precepts, and to the corruption and apathy of the judges who sit over his people. The Prophet, moreover, asserts that only seven Mussulmans have attained to Eternal Bliss since his own admission to Paradise. This state of things is so unsatisfactory that the Almighty has decided that the sun shall rise in the west instead of the east on the 11th of July; and on that day all who call themselves True Believers shall be struck with blindness, and dissolution follow immediately. "If there be a word of falsehood," adds the priest, "in what I have stated, let my face be blackened for ever." There were also rumours afloat at Simla, according to a correspondent of the Delhi Gazette, of certain seditious placards having been posted up in some native places of worship, containing a very cautiously worded earnest warning of impending danger to all the Faithful, that certain great events would occur during the month, notably a great earthquake, which would result in the Indian Capua being turned upside down, and exhorting all to watch and pray!

AT the meeting of the Legislative Council held on June 20 a Bill to prevent the indiscriminate destruction of wild elephants in British Burmah was brought in by the Hon. Mr. Thornton. The Local Government of British Burmah have stated that the destruction of wild elephants is so extensive and indiscriminate that if unchecked it must lead to their ultimate extinction. The ivory hunters of the Karens not only destroy males, but females also. It is important to preserve the herds of wild elephants in the Burmese forests for the supply needed, not only for military and other State purposes, but also for uses connected with the timber trade of British Burmah. Rules have been made limiting the destruction of wild elephants to cases of defence of life or crops, or by license from the district officers. The proposed law, based on the provisions of an enactment passed in 1873 for the Madras Presidency, which has been found to work well, will give legal sanction to the existing system.

THE recent annual distribution of prizes and certificates to the students of the Madras Medical College was rendered unusually interesting by the admission for the first time of lady doctors to full professional status. The Principal in his report highly commended them as having been "remarkable for their assiduity, regularity of attendance both at lectures and hospitals, for the keen interest they have taken in their studies, and for their strongly marked desire to attain proficiency in every branch of the work they have so nobly undertaken and brought to a successful issue, virtues which have had their reward not only in the high places they have taken both in the class and pass lists, but also in the remarkable fact that their proficiency has been seldom surpassed by the alumni of this College. During the past three years Mrs. Scharlieb has won prizes in the following subjects:—Surgery, Medicine, Ophthalmology, Hygiene and Chemistry; Miss White in Anatomy, Medicine and Chemistry; Miss Beale in Chemistry; and at the final examination they have, out of a possible maximum of 890 secured the following marks:—Miss White, 738; Mrs. Scharlieb, 728; Miss Beale, 670; and Miss Mitchell, 580. We concur with the Principal in wishing "the lady-doctors every success in their professional work, especially in that large and unexplored field of labour, the women of India."

ATTENTION was recently called by the Globe to the movements of the Russian troops in Turkestan, as described in the Russian newspapers received by the last mail from Tashkant. They show plainly that Russia really entertained for a time the idea of making a military demonstration against India. There was no intention of undertaking a regular campaign against India. The three Corps d'Observation would be far too small in number to do more than encourage the Afghans, and perhaps take another slice from the Khanates.

There is room for fear lest General Kauffmann should find it necessary to employ his troops in some aggressive conquest. Khiva, not wholly annexed, Merv, the fruitful Khanates south of Fergu-hana, and Bokhara, are all tempting and convenient as a field wherein the Turkestan troops may gain glory and extend the boundaries of Holy Russia. As the communications between St. Petersburg and the commandant in Turkestan are now complete, it is to be hoped that General Kauffmann may be restrained from endangering the good relations now existing between England and Russia. This hope is confirmed by the Standard's recent information from Paris. A telegram received from St. Petersburg states that the armaments of Russia in Turkestan, which, it is said, were solely meant as a reply to the armaments of England, have been suspended.

AMONG the geographical obscurities of the Treaty, one of the darkest was the cession to Persia of Chotour, reported as one of the terms of the agreement between Count Schouvaloff and Lord Salisbury; but this is by the Pioneer explained as follows:—Chotour is the French spelling of Kútúr, the name of a town, valley, and river of Armenia, situated on the Turko-Persian frontier, about seventy miles due south of Bayazid. Being on the high road between the Turkish city of Van and the Persian fortress of Khoi, but nearer the latter, and on the same side of the mountains, its possession gave Turkey great facilities for the invasion of Persia. It was treacherously seized by the Turks about 1853, during the session of the Anglo-Russian commission for the settlement of the Turco-Persian frontier; and its retention, in spite of the remonstrances of England and Russia, had formed one of the main obstacles to that settlement. Its restoration to Persia by the good offices of Russia is a happy stroke of diplomacy, not only as tending to increase Russian influence at Teheran, which the nullification of the San Stefano Treaty will have rudely shaken, but as placing one of the keys to the shortest and best route between Georgia and the Tigris Valley in the hands of a possible ally.

SOME curious details of the progress of the Chinese in Kashgaria have been furnished in a translation from the Turkestan Gazette, published in the Pioneer of the 3rd inst. The commander of the Chinese forces in the district Urumchi, Lin Sho Daryn, who did nothing while Yakoob Beg was in power, no sooner heard of the latter's death than he commenced advancing on Kashgar, the capture of which city had long since been ordered by the Governor-General of the Provinces of Shan-si and Kan su, and Commander-in-Chief of all the forces appertaining to the "new line"—as the Chinese name the north-western section of their Empire, comprising East Turkestan and the region formerly known as South Zungaria. On the 17th December, 1877, Lin Sho occupied the capital Kashgar,—an event which created a strong panic throughout Jityshahr. The Begs of the different towns, and other persons who had some influence under Yakoob Beg's régime, fled in all directions. Soon, however, most of these fugitives bethought themselves of something better. Abdul Rahman of Yangishahr addressed a letter to Lin Sho, offering his services to the Chinese Government, and his offer was accepted by the Chinese authorities, and Niaz Beg of Khotan surrendered himself voluntarily to the Chinese General, who presented him with a coral bead, and appointed him the head of all the Mussulman commandants placed over the seven towns of Jityshahr to reside at Yarkand. Tadjí, Hakim Beg of Kashgar under the old régime of the Chinese, has been reinstalled in the same city. Other dignitaries, having received various presents, were placed under the surveillance of Hassan Janbai (Aksokol of Kashgar), without whose permission they are forbidden to absent themselves. Yakoob Beg's son, Ishankul, who did not succeed in escaping before the Chinese entered Kashgar, is being treated with great respect by General Lin Sho; the Prince, his two wives, and about seven or eight servants, occupy free quarters at Yangishahr, and Lin Sho supplies their household with all necessaries. Further, General Lin Sho visited Yakoob Beg's grave, over which he is said to have pronounced the following words:—"Thy services, Yakoob Beg, have been ever dear to our Boghdo-Khan," i.e., the sacred Khan of the Mongols, which title has descended from Zenghiz to the Emperor of China. Lin Sho added "God saved thee from ruin, he sent thee death," and then having sacrificed sheep in honour of Yakoob's memory, departed, leaving strict orders that the grave was to be respected. The Chinese are now said to have about 12,000 men distributed throughout Kashgar, and commanded by General Lin Sho, upon whom the title of Tum Tan (higher than that of Tsen Tsium) has been conferred. The majority of the troops carry pikes (lances); of European-made firearms, they have at most 1,500. Mohamad Khan (a Sart), the bearer of a letter from Lin Sho (to the Governor-General of Turkestan), was verbally instructed by the former to reassure all Kirgiz and Russian merchants, telling them that they need have no fear of the Chinese army, which, he was to add, "would only march on Narynsk," there to capture Bal Yan Khu (Bayan khun). The same Mahomed Khan had also heard that Lin Sho had received orders from the Tso Tsun Tan of Lianchow to repair the Muzart (Pass) road across the hills, to which end labourers were to have been sent out from Aksu. "This done Lin Sho"—the order goes on to say—"will march his troops across the Muzart, and join my (the Tso Tsun Tan's) forces between Karashar and Shikhs, not later than in the third moon (April). Should Lin Sho require horses, I have 27,000 horses ready at hand." The Chinese seem to be contemplating an invasion of Kuldja from the south and east simultaneously.

THE affairs of Cyprus will be administered, not by the Colonial Office, but by an Administrative Council or Committee selected from the Foreign Office, India Office, and Treasury. The gentlemen selected for this purpose are, the Whitehall Review believes, Mr. P. W. Currie, C.B., from the Foreign Office; Mr. A. W. Moore, from the India Office; and Mr. R. E. Welby, from the Treasury.

WE understand that the Government of India have recently addressed the Secretary of State regarding the selection of candidates for the Forest Service in India, their attention having apparently been drawn to the matter by the gradual falling away in the numbers of the candidates who annually present themselves for examination for admission to this service. One unsatisfactory result is derived from this state of things, namely, the necessity, which exists with a small number of candidates, of being guided in selection almost entirely by the number of marks obtained by the candidate under examination to the exclusion of such important considerations as constitution, physique, habits and modes of life, &c. To increase the number of candidates the Government of India think that no reasonable effort should be spared. They believe that the most efficient remedy would be the improvement of the emoluments of the professionally-educated officers of the department in India, and also the provision of better prospects of promotion than at present exist. They also suggest that the upper limit of age for admission to the service should be twenty-two years. This inter alia might have the effect of attracting to the Forest Service many of the men who fail for the Civil Service—men who have made up their minds for an Indian career, and who would gladly avail themselves of the chance which the raising of the limit of age would afford them. They recommend that the examination papers should receive wide circulation in all English schools and Universities, and they are of opinion that in view of the hardships, exposure, and disease incidental to the Forest Service in India the medical examination should be as strict as possible, and exclude all not possessed of really sound constitutions. This condition, however, could obviously only be applied to the improved state of matters desired by Government, under which a large number of candidates would yearly present themselves for examination.

WE are promised Arabic made easy in the form of "The Arabic Manual," by Professor E. H. Palmer, Fellow of St. John's College, and Professor of Arabic in the University of Cambridge, which will be shortly published by Messrs. W. H. Allen and Co. This compendium of classical and colloquial Arabic is intended to make the hitherto difficult language readily accessible to all who find themselves brought into official or commercial relations with Arabs in the Levant. Messrs. Allen are also about to publish "Turk and Slav, from a Geographical, Ethnological and Historical Point of View, with Special Reference to the late Political Situation," by Dr. R. G. Latham.

THE results of the extended observations made by Mr. Grattan Geary, Editor of the Times of India, during his recent journey through the Euphrates Valley, have been published by him in a letter to the Times. The following extract sums up the views of the writer on the utility of the railway, which are a valuable addition to the arguments already advanced by its promoter:—

When the route of the great railway is finally laid down, it will assuredly pass close to Aleppo. But from Aleppo to the plain of Antioch there is a succession of rolling hills to be surmounted, which will prove a serious difficulty to the engineer who desires to combine economy with despatch. It is possible that some route may be found which will turn these hills; but if such a route exists, it must be very circuitous, or the post would now be carried over it. The plain of Antioch, which stretches for eight or ten miles from the foot of the last of these rolling hills to the foot of the great Beilan mountain, is in half its extent a deep and formidable marsh, in the pools of which flocks of pelicans disport themselves. There are the remains of two great causeways over this plain, one constructed by the Romans and the other by Sultan Murad. Both have been nearly swallowed up in the deep and treacherous soil. The Beilan Pass itself is not so difficult as it looks. The highest point traversed by the very good road over it is only some sixteen hundred feet above the sea level. All the gradients are easy for horses. It is for engineers to say whether they can be made easy for locomotives at a reasonable outlay. Once over the Beilan, the level and pestilential plain to the edge of the Mediterranean, on which Alexandretta is built, lies before you like a map. The distance is about fifteen miles. Alexandretta is not a port; it is a roadstead, which is quite open to the southerly, and more or less, to the westerly winds. Between Alexandretta and Aleppo the trade is so great that ten thousand camels are employed on it. If a railway were constructed, it would be difficult to assign limits to the development of the trade of this region. A railway from the Mediterranean to the valleys of the Euphrates and the Tigris would pass through countries of great natural resources, and would tap provinces of wonderful fertility and boundless extent. It is a mistake to suppose that Asiatic Turkey is now "decaying." Nearly everywhere throughout a journey extending over fifteen hundred miles I saw evidence of progress rather than of decay. The population is scanty, but it is robust and well fed, and with proper inducement would work well. When you can get men any day to carry three hundredweight apiece for a few piastres there can be no want of hard muscle. The lax and inefficient more than oppressive administration under which the country has hitherto languished will now undergo a thorough reform under British supervision. The corruption of the small officials—and even of some of the great officials—may be expected to cease out of the land when salaries are regularly paid and peculation or bribery is followed by inevitable dismissal. The Arab and the Kurd can easily be brought to order by the establishment of a few military posts. What, then, will stand in the way of the development of the resources of Asiatic Turkey? British enterprise and British capital will furnish the means, and all the world, we may hope, will profit not inconsiderably by the result.

Odds and Ends.

DEPUTY-COMMISSARY THALES PEASE, Ordnance Store Department, has returned to England, having completed the important special duty with which he was entrusted in connection with the removal of the Indian contingent to Malta.

GEORGE TAKADU, a Japanese official to the Agricultural Office Interior Department, Japan, has been deputed by Sir Harry Parkes to visit the forest tracts of Northern and Southern India, with a view, among other things, to make himself acquainted with Indian timbers.

MR. LEPEL GRIFFIN has notified his intention of giving a prize of Rs. 500 to be shot for annually by the 1st Punjab Volunteer Corps, commencing next meeting (1879), under the following conditions:—To be called the Secretariat Prize, to be open only to members of the Punjab Secretariat Offices at Lahor, and to be divided into three prizes of Rs. 300, 150, and 50.

MAJOR WATSON, Acting President, Rajasthanik Court, is engaged in writing a history of Kattywar for the Bombay Gazette. The Major is an able writer and a distinguished Orientalist, and his work, when complete, will, no doubt, be a valuable contribution to historical literature.

ACCORDING to a Times telegram from Simla, the Gazette of India of the 31st ult. notified a reduction of 4 annas per maund in the Salt Tax in Bengal, to take effect from August 1, thus making a uniform rate of Rs. 2.8 per maund.

FOREMOST among the matters which will be discussed at the third session of the French Provincial Congress of Orientalists, to begin at Lyons on August 24, will be the results of the recent Governmental mission of the President, M. Emile Guimet, to the extreme East, whence he has brought back a large collection of documents relating to Oriental religions. Dr. Birch, Mr. N. Trübner, and Dr. Rost are the delegates for Great Britain.

THE Secretary of State has appointed—as Physical Science Professor for the Benares College—Mr. Lee, a gentleman who has taken high orders at Cambridge, and who passed with distinction for the Indian Civil Service examination, but was disqualified by the doctors.

THE chief officer of the Cyrene, one of the vessels in Colombo harbour, committed suicide on July 2 by throwing himself overboard. The death of the captain of the barque Hesperia is also reported, from congestion of the brain, the attack proving fatal in two hours.

THE Madras Times states that a wealthy French nobleman has presented Rs. 10,000 and a piece of ground to the Bishop of Pondicherry for the foundation of a hospital for the aged and infirm.

THE new building for the Canning College, Lucknow, which is nearly completed, will be opened by the Lieutenant-Governor of the N. W. Provinces next cold weather.

THE Statesman understands that the Government of Bengal has sanctioned a special grant of Rs. 252-11-9 for constructing a Memorial Tablet in the Presidency College in honour of the founders of the old Hindoo College, and represented by the Hindoo School and the Presidency College, payable from the savings in the College.

THE Madras Athenæum records the death of Mr. V. Vanugopaul Charriar, B.A. and B.L., one of the Municipal Commissioners for the town of Madras, which took place at his residence, Perambore, on June 27th.

THE first numbers of the new Ordu paper published in Constantinople afford, according to the Kossid Mumbai, a satisfactory pledge of its extensive sale and popularity amongst the Mussulmans of India. The style of the articles is calculated to render them intelligible to all classes of readers, both learned and unlearned; the paper and printing are of excellent quality, and the price, at present moderate, will be raised to Rs. 10 a year when the paper is issued weekly.

THE Lahor paper states that the Nepal Government has placed an order with Messrs. J. Bruce Gillon and Co., the East India agents, for two life-size equestrian statues in bronze of the late Maharajah Sir Jung Bahadoor. These are to be placed on sculptured granite pedestals, and are to cost about £5,000 sterling.

THE passage money to be allowed to officers who may go home in other vessels will in future be the contract rate with the P. and O. Company, minus the prescribed deduction for messing.

It is reported that Captain J. B. B. Savi, R.E., Manager of the Punjab Northern State Railway, is to assume charge of the management of the Indus Valley Railway, open line. He will be succeeded in Lahore by Captain W. Sedgwick, R.E.

THE WANTS OF ASSAM.

THE question as to the administrative amalgamation of Assam and Bengal is as yet undecided. The arguments on either side have been officially summed up in twelve reasons, published in the Indian papers. These reasons admit the undoubtedly backward condition of Assam. They suggest on the one hand as a remedy, annexation to Assam, of Bengal east of the Megna, and a liberal treatment of the new province by the Indian Government. On the other side, it is argued that Bengal, if Assam be amalgamated therewith, will be willing and able to expend some of the increasing revenue upon the development of Assam, especially as regards immigration of labourers. Without debating the question, we are content to gather from undoubted authority that Assam is in an undoubtedly backward condition, and that its great natural resources can only be developed by large grants. The existing arrangements with regard to the supply of coolie labour, upon which the future of the country depends, are admitted to be eminently unsatisfactory. Finally, the deficiencies of the Assam administration are stated to be due to the illiberality of the Government of India. Doubtless there are many reasons to be alleged for the admitted fact; nevertheless it is not particularly creditable to our administration of the Province that the rich valley of the Brahmapootra, with its thirty thousand square miles, has, after fifty years of peaceful occupation, no better tale to tell. When it was finally annexed to India in 1827, it certainly was in a deplorable condition, devastated by Burmese invaders, whose work of destruction had been completed by the hill tribes swooping down on an easy prey from their mountains. But the former relics of ancient industry, the ruined tanks and vestiges of canals, the traces of homesteads, still found in the midst of dense forests, attest that in olden times Assam was a populous and thriving country. The native Assamese are an indolent race, content with the simple supplies that the rich soil yields almost without labour, and finding a sufficient pleasure in opium. With a sufficient supply of labour, with proper means of communication, not only with Bengal, but also with China and Burma, Assam might become, not merely a great tea-producing country, but also the granary of the neighbouring districts of Bengal. At present she not only depends on her neighbours for a supply of labourers, but actually largely imports rice to feed the two hundred thousand coolies employed in the tea-plantations. Up to the present time, the main roads are very inefficient, and the natural highway, the Brahmapootra, has not been utilised, in any proportion to the needs of the residents. The means of water communication afforded by six steamers a month, occupying twenty days in a journey of six hundred miles from Goalundo to Dibrughur, may be justly characterised as of very limited utility.

In April last, a few gentlemen interested in the development of Assam, formed themselves into a Committee, of which Sir Rutherford Alcock was chosen Chairman, and Mr. Burrell Hon. Secretary. Their object was "to adopt all proper measures for improving the internal and external communications of the Province." It was subsequently agreed to present a memorial to the Secretary of State, embodying the views of the Committee. This was duly presented on Wednesday, and received the most courteous attention from Lord Cranbrook. The Government of India, however, have on their part not been inattentive to the demands of Assam. Without waiting for the decision as to the future administration of the Province, the Government have advertised for tenders for an improved subsidised service of steamers between Dhubri and Dibrughur. It is further proposed to construct a railway from Rungpoor, on the North Bengal line, to Dhubri. The total cost will be the outlay necessary for something less than twenty miles of light railway, and will, according to the Pioneer, be spread over five years. Four years ago, this scheme was recommended by a Committee presided over by Col. Keatinge, the outgoing Commissioner of Assam. The service, to be complete, seems to require an additional expenditure on a floating landing-stage, large enough both for custody of merchandise, and for the housing of passengers. If the Government succeed in establishing this improved service it will postpone for a long period the heavy expenditure on the proposed line of railway from Rangpur to Dibrughur.

We have said "if the Government succeed in establishing the proposed service." It has been pointed out by men experienced in the navigation of the river and conversant with the capabilities of the trade that the Government contract under the proposed conditions is not likely to be taken up. Steamers of a speed of fifteen miles an hour, running twice a week, and capable of carrying four first-class passengers, eight second class, and one hundred coolies, and ten tons of cargo, are not likely to prove a paying speculation throughout the year, even with the help of a Government subsidy. However desirable it may be, to accomplish the upward voyage in five days and the downward in four, it has been urged that eight days up and six down would, at least at present, amply satisfy the demand, or at all events be within the possibilities of an improved service. This, however, is a matter for future determination, and has been fully submitted to Lord Cranbrook, who will doubtless cause the opinions expressed by Mr. Holiday to be forwarded to the Governor-General of India, within whose jurisdiction, as his Lordship pointed out, this measure lies.

Another most important subject was dwelt upon in the memorial already mentioned, with regard to which the deputation may be congratulated. This was the threatened suspension of the surveys carried on up to the present time in the hills bordering Upper Assam. The work successfully begun by Major Godwin Austen, on the Northern frontier of Assam and Thibet, was, as stated by the President of the Royal Geographical Society, to be extended by further explorations. Arrangements were understood to have been made for Lieut. Woodthorpe's survey party to explore and map the country on the north-east of the Lakhimpur district in the vicinity of the Subansiri River, and also subsequently between the Dinang River and the Bramakund. This was arranged under the rule of General Thuillier, who has recently, on his retirement, been succeeded by Col. Walker as Surveyor-General. It has been rumoured, or rather stated from sure information, that from motives of economy it has been decided to break up the Assam Frontier survey party, and proofs of this have been given by the transfer of the leaders to other spheres of duty. The disadvantage of losing the services of a party who had become accustomed to the natives of these hills, and with whom, which is more, the suspicious and ferocious Nagas, Abors, and their congeners had become acquainted, would be very great. It was a great relief to learn from Lord Cranbrook that his impression was that the survey was to be continued for three years more, and that he would at once communicate with the Government of India on the subject.

The importance of pushing forward the reconnoissance of such survey parties is great, not only to geographers who desire to solve the question of the course of the great river of Thibet. The opening up of the communications of Assam with China and Thibet depends upon such explorations. The tentative advance of skilful surveyors must herald the progress of commerce over the hitherto inaccessible barriers between Assam and Bathang. It is true that the jungles of Lamanist ignorance and prejudice, and the mountain chain of Chinese monopolies have to be surmounted before the teas of Assam can compete with those of China in the mart of Bathang. In 1869 the intrepid explorer, Mr. Cooper, whose untimely fate we had so recently to lament, endeavoured to make his way from Sudiya to Bathang, but was stopped by express orders from the Chinese official at Roemah. Since that time the Chefoo Convention has conferred the nominal right of access to Thibet, and so through Thibetan territory to China. It is natural that our Assam planters look with longing eyes to the dusky wall of mountains, beyond which, only fourteen days' march from Sudiya, lies the emporium whence Thibet draws her supplies of tea, the great necessary of Thibetan life.

It may be that an avenue of access to the trade of the rich province of Szchuen may also thus be opened, but we have a vivid recollection of the difficulties described as surrounding the transit from Ta-tsien-loo to Bathang. Explorations of trade routes have not hitherto proved remarkably successful or profitable. The careful and gradual feeling the way of such surveyors as Lieut. Woodthorpe and his faithful Ghoorkas, or the cautious travels of a wily and daring Pandit will in the course of a few years do all that can be done to clear the ground to the frontier, and ascertain the practicability or utility of a north-eastern outlet for the trade of Assam.

A THOUSAND AND ONE QUESTIONS.

The Famine Commission—i.e. the President, the Secretary, and the Calcutta High Court Judge, the three Members now at Simla—are commencing their labours in what, with astonishing frankness, they call "the most convenient way." We are quite prepared to admit that asking a multitude of questions by means of the ordinary dak is more "convenient" than going oneself into the districts affected and making personal searching inquiry, examining and cross-examining with rigour; but whilst "convenient" it is not likely to be so effectual. Of the questions themselves we have no words to express but satisfaction with the thorough manner in which they seem to penetrate to the root of the matter, and if mere circulation of questions and collating of replies were calculated to secure the object the Commission has in view, it is not probable that wiser action could be taken. Inquiries of this nature, however skilfully the questions may be framed, are not likely to secure the object which we thought the Famine Commission specially had in view, viz., probe thoroughly the region of the disease and make an exact diagnosis, so that the suitable remedies might be applied. The kind of information which the Commissioners require will never be obtained in the manner sought, whilst it might be had by viva voce examination, the general nature of the questions to be asked being indicated to the witness beforehand to prepare his mind. The value of evidence given can never be properly assayed or tested save by cross-examination: theories which look wonderful on paper may prove to be really valueless when tried by one or two questions only. There is, too, a positive danger in the questions submitted being so numerous and covering the ground so completely. An Indian official—and it is only to officials that the questions are addressed—is likely to stand aghast when he sees four or five chapters of questions, the first chapter containing at least two hundred, and realises that if he is not to answer all, yet he is expected to wade through everyone to pick out those on which he knows most. In the preliminary observations which accompany their questions, the Commissioners say, "It is not necessary that everyone who answers these questions should attempt to answer them all. It will be more advantageous to the Commission if each person answers those questions regarding which he has most practical experience, or to which he has devoted special attention." And, again, "The questions are published so that the opportunity may be given to anyone interested in the inquiry (not officially called on to do so) to supply answers if he feels so disposed." But how are they published? Not, in the first instance, in the Gazette of India, or through the Press Commissioner, simultaneously to all journals, but appear in the Allahabad paper alone of the journals of the Empire. We have spoken of the questions as very complete in themselves. We will give two sets of questions to show this. Paragraph 9, Chapter I., is as follows:—

What is the ordinary economic condition of the portion of the agricultural population directly engaged in the cultivation of the land, and possessing any proprietary or occupancy interest in land?

Illustrate your reply by giving the actual facts as to a few typical instances of such persons taken from four or five different villages in several districts of your Province.

State, with regard to each, what area of land he holds for tillage or grazing, what his family consists of, what amount of food-grain and what value of other produce he raises on an average off his land in a year, what rent or revenue or cesses he pays for his land, what expenses he incurs in hired labour (other than his own labour and that of his family), what amount he spends in a year in purchases of necessities which he cannot produce on his land, what kind of house he lives in, how many rooms it possesses, and how many outhouses, what quantity of cattle or other live-stock he possesses, what other property, and what stock of grain.

How does he dispose of any surplus income, whether by hoarding or lending his money, or investing it in ornaments, or spending it on marriage ceremonies, or otherwise?

What are his debts, and to what are they commonly due?

State what proportion of the agriculturists of your district you believe to be in debt, and what proportion their average indebtedness bears to their average yearly income.

Endeavour to obtain the opinions on these points of well-informed and trustworthy native residents of different districts, and in submitting such opinions explain the position of your informants, and the probable means at their command of forming correct conclusions.

Surely the last paragraph of the above series is not to be taken au sérieux. "Endeavour to obtain the opinions," &c. Is not this what the Commission itself was appointed for? When the orders of the Secretary of State for a Commission were received and generally approved, it was not supposed that a number of the Commissioners would proceed to Simla for the hot season, and issue questions to the half, or wholly, worn-out officials on the heated plains, asking them to make inquiries of "well-informed and trustworthy native residents of different districts." This is what you, gentlemen Commissioners, were expected to do yourselves, and it was because you were supposed to have special qualifications for finding out the truth, a knowledge of the laws of evidence and the power of accurately testing the value or non-value of opinions given, that you were appointed to such high and dignified duties. We do not charge you with shirking your duty, but we certainly cannot commend you for doing it in the most thorough manner possible. Again, what guarantee have you that the officials you call upon to do this onerous and irksome duty have the necessary qualifications, or time? When the General Relief Committee of Madras, in August and September last, asked for the countenance and support only of the higher officials in each district in the formation of local Relief Committees, the Government of India said their servants had so much to do that they could not request them to take up additional duty. Eventually, liberty was given them if they could find time to help in the work of relief. But when we find the whole of the officials turned into Amateur Commissioners, and expected to do work of a very onerous kind, we shall begin to think the objections expressed last year were not sincere. Yet once more with regard to this particular series of questions and especially to others which follow, the Commissioners are engaged in a work of supererogation. The information they want, and such as can be obtained by written questions, are at their fingers' ends in some of the archives at Simla. For instance, let the Commissioners turn to pages 7, 8, 9 and 10 of the "Annual Report of the Superintendent of Government Farms (Madras Presidency) for the year ending 31st of March, 1875." In twelve paragraphs—19 to 31—they will find in a nutshell some facts which should stagger them if they think that in a few months at the outside they will have mastered the economic questions of India, and have provided remedies. We find our observations have extended too far to enable us to discuss as we could wish one other series of questions, the last batch in Chapter 1. They are of the highest and utmost importance; but, placed in the hands of an official without previous inquiry and discussion, are likely to lead to the utterance of the crudest opinions, and what little light there may be in men's minds will be darkened by the "knowledge" evoked. We think the Commission is going altogether beyond its legitimate scope in asking such questions as those we are about to quote. Only the Commissioners themselves, with all the collated information of the Empire at their command, could be expected to give answers of any value, and if the replies are not founded on good and satisfactory data, it would be better they were never given at all. In paragraph 26 of Chapter 1 the Commissioners say:—

It has been laid down by the Government of India as a settled principle that local financial responsibility should be enforced in the case of a famine as far as possible. With this view special taxation has recently been imposed on the country, the proceeds of which the Government has proposed to apply as a mutual assurance fund, which will be available for the benefit of the people on whom the calamity of famine may actually fall. But it has been recognised that it would be preferable if some portion of this taxation could be made more strictly local, both in its levy and its application to relief purposes.

Can you suggest any way by which it might be rendered practicable to provide that where State funds have been expended on the relief of famine, such expenditure should be recovered from the locality which has benefited by it under any system of (taxation in modification of or in substitution for that recently adopted and not in addition to it) in a manner that should bring into operation a sense of local responsibility, first in the direction of securing the lives of the people, and second of protecting them from unnecessary expenditure on relief?

How could such a principle be applied to a smaller area than that of a Province or Presidency?

Could the expenditure in a single district or sub-division of a district be recovered from that district or sub-division by such special taxation wholly or in part, or under any special circumstances, or in reference to any class of the community requiring relief, leaving a smaller or larger portion of the charge to be made good from the Province or Presidency at large, or from the resources of the Government of India?

Could any plan be suggested under which, subject to similar limitations, a municipality might be required to bear the cost of feeding its own poor?

What kind of special local taxation should be adopted for this purpose?

What would be the probable effect (1) on the minds of the people, (2) on the temper of the officials, of the knowledge that the cost of famine relief expended on their behalf or by them would have to be recouped by local taxation?

Is there any reason to suppose that the sense of local responsibility, if it could be brought to bear, would not operate beneficially in the case of relief of the distressed portion of the population in India?

If such questions as these were asked of a few selected men in each Presidency some light might be provided, but to place them in the hands of every District official is to invite a flood of crude and chaotic theory that will overwhelm and stifle the Commissioners when they come to deal with it. We had looked forward to the work of the Commission with great interest, for we had hoped it would regenerate India so far as liability to famine is concerned. And so it might still if the members would do their work themselves and not delegate it to other, and probably unfit, hands. And, if they would recognise that, their task is one of years, not months. —Madras Times.

THE POLICE ADMINISTRATION OF CALCUTTA.

The Annual Report on the Police Administration of Calcutta and its suburbs for the past year shows no very marked increase of cognisable crime, but an increase of no less than 7,709 in the number of non-cognisable cases, more than 6,000 of which were prosecutions under the Conservancy laws, for breaches of which process was issued against no less than 16,012 persons, and 5,857 persons were convicted. There were eight cases of murder; five in the town and three in the suburbs. Of the five cases in town, the murderer was detected in three; in one case no clue was obtained, and in the fifth the accused evaded arrest. Detection followed in two out of the three cases in the suburbs; in seven out of the eight cases the victim was a woman; in two a prostitute, murdered apparently from motives of avarice. In burglaries there was a decrease from 102 to seventy-eight cases; property was carried off in fifty-eight cases only. The number of cases detected was forty-one to twenty-five in 1876, and of convictions forty-one to thirty-two. The value of the property stolen showed a decrease from Rs. 11,595 to Rs. 11,311, and that of the goods recovered, from Rs. 2,995 to Rs. 4,690. In thefts, also, the action of the police was satisfactory. The number of cases was 1,989, against 1,991 in the previous year; but the number of cases detected was 977, against 821, and of persons convicted 1,173, against 935. Of the persons convicted under the Penal Code there were Europeans and Eurasians, 881; Jews, 8; Buddhists, 5; Hindoos, 3,411; Mohammedans, 3,005. The 881 convictions of Europeans and Eurasians compare unfavourably with 465 in the previous year. The number of suicides in town and suburbs was fifty-three, the same as last year. In forty-one out of these fifty-three cases the suicides were Hindus; while eight were Mohammedans, three were Europeans, and one was a Native Christian. The number of accidental deaths seems to be steadily increasing from year to year. In 1875 it was only 187, in 1876 it was 239, and last year it rose to 253, including no fewer than forty-one English sailors drowned in the river. Nine deaths occurred in the suburbs from snake-bite, and none in the town.

STATION TALK.

The difficulties of the journey to Darjeeling owing to the floods are thus graphically described by the Indian Daily News. The remarks that follow are for the delectation of intending visitors to our newly opened-out sanitarium:—The heavy rains which have fallen lately in the Darjeeling Hills have resulted in one or two landslips on the cart-road, which prevent the running of the tonga daks. The old road via Punkabaree is also partly cut up, although passable; but even then the journey is trying through the Terai, where one small bridge has been swept away, and others seem likely to follow. On the cart-road a bullock-hackery a few days ago was dashed over the khud, the bullocks were killed, the driver seriously injured, and the goods lost. There is a possibility of other landslips occurring, and it is only right to warn intending travellers that they had better not depend on the tonga dak at all, until communication is thoroughly restored, and the first break of the monsoon over. The country round Siligoree is partly swamped for half a mile on both sides of the main road, which is also much cut up, and the journey to or from that swamp has to be performed now by palkee dak. The crossing from Sara to Damookdeah, too, is not pleasant, even if it is safe. A correspondent, who has just returned from the Darjeeling district, reports the journey from Siligoree to Julpigoree by palkee dak to be most trying and difficult. The distance is some thirty miles, and the road is in many places two feet under water, few portions of the entire length being better than a morass. He had great difficulty in inducing the palkee bearers to proceed, and it took him over ten hours to do the journey with twelve men. He had also to leave all his baggage behind, owing to the difficulty of getting coolies at Siligoree. The palkees, further, are far from water-proof, and he arrived at Julpigoree wet through. There are also four small rivers to cross, rivers which are now torrents; and he describes the passage as something almost dangerous, and to ladies really alarming. Several people who were waiting at Julpigoree when he arrived came back to Calcutta rather than risk the discomfort and delay of the journey to Darjeeling in the present state of the roads and rivers; and in view of the wretched accommodation, or rather want of it, at Julpigoree. The line of railway from Julpigoree to Siligoree is interrupted, and will probably remain so for some time, several temporary bridges having given way, and the embankment is being washed away in parts. Persons compelled to make the journey must therefore arrange beforehand for a palkee dak from Julpigoree to Siligoree and for a pony or palkee dak from the latter place to the Hills. Let none, says our correspondent, be tempted to employ a bullock cart, as all the boats on the river-crossings have not bamboo stagings, and it is most difficult without these, and very difficult even with them to transport cart and bullocks over these few small but rapid rivers. On no account, he continues, make the journey from Julpigoree to Siligoree by night, as the place is most malarious, and the route sufficiently risky at present, even in the daytime. Another week's heavy rain would of course make it more so. There is no rest-house, and very few native huts even on the thirty-mile route between Julpigoree and Siligoree; and intending travellers should therefore provide themselves with refreshments, for not a drink of water scarcely can be had along the line of the road; and he warns people against drinking it even if it could be got. He advises travellers to the Hills on no account also to neglect to provide themselves with waterproofs and waterproof sheeting, since without these they will run the risk of rheumatism, cold, and fever. Those who can delay the journey until the cart-road is again put in order will do well to do so, he thinks. But it may be weeks before the cart-road is again open, and meantime the main crossing from Siligoree over the Mahanuddy may give way—the water being now within two feet of the bridge-planking, and several large trees, already blocking up some of the waterways, and threatening the safety of the structure. This bridge has several times given way, and is likely enough to do so again, should the rush of water from the Hills continue in force. One or two days, however, may make such a difference in these hill torrents that are sometimes rivers that nothing certain can be said. Cannot the Post-office authorities or the Carrying Company keep the public advised by daily telegrams regarding the state of the road and rivers?

Miscellaneous.

TIRHOOT.—The rains seem now fairly to have commenced in Tirhoot, and most indigo factories will be at work during the first week in July; both ryots' and planters' prospects seem to be tolerably good. Cholera has scarcely visited the district this year.

CAR OF JUGGERNAUT.—There was a tragic scene at Moisdal during the celebration of the Ruth festival. Of the hundreds that were dragging the car, seven men slipped and were run over. Five died instantly; the remaining two were promptly removed to the hospital, where they lie in a precarious state.

CHOLERA.—Cholera is now claiming its victims; in Bassein district, Berar, 1,662 cases have been registered, of which 1,089 have been fatal. Cholera has also appeared in Akola and Oomrawatee, in the villages contiguous to the civil station; out of forty-nine cases six have ended fatally.—Times of India.

NORTHERN BENGAL RAILWAY.—The latest advices state that the interruption on the Northern Bengal State Railway is likely to be temporary, and the line from Julpigoree to Siligoree is probably now open for goods traffic. It appears that the injury to the line was only on the unfinished part, where a temporary bridge at a diversion was washed down and another slightly damaged.

BANK OF BENGAL.—At the usual weekly meeting of the directors of the Bank of Bengal, held on July 4th, a dividend for the half-year just ended was declared at the rate of 10 per cent. per annum. From the balance of profits the sum of Rs. 1,50,000 was added to reserve fund, thus raising it to over Rs. 20,28,000, and about Rs. 41,000 carried forward to profit and loss account for the current half year.

"PARICHARIKA" is a Bengali Magazine written by Bengali ladies for Bengali ladies. The Hindu Patriot says:—We have the first two numbers of this periodical before us; the subjects are well chosen, the sentiments good, the style fair. There is an English paper on the "White Hills of Jubbulpore," sketchy and full of interest. We are told that it is written by a Bengali lady; need we say that it reflects great credit upon her? We wish every success to this literary project.

A FATAL ENTERTAINMENT.—A vernacular paper, the Koh-i-Noor, states that on the night of the 20th ultimo, at Gujrat, a large number of persons, at the invitation of a European gentleman, were at an entertainment, when suddenly the roof gave way, and fifty persons were buried under the debris. The Deputy Commissioner with the police were soon on the spot, and exerted themselves in removing those who had been entombed. Nineteen out of the fifty who were in the house were found dead, and the remaining number were more or less severely injured.—The Lahor paper has since confirmed the substantial truth of the story.—Pioneer.

PUBLIC INSTRUCTION.—In March last the Government of India recommended to the Secretary of State's consideration a scheme proposed by the Director of Public Instruction in Bengal for grading the subordinate officers in the Educational Department. The scheme, which was supported by the Lieutenant-Governor of Bengal, was approved by the Government of India with a modification. The Secretary of State now concurs with that Government in thinking that seven classes will be quite sufficient, and on the understanding that the expense involved is to be charged to the provincial revenues of the Lower Provinces, has sanctioned the proposed arrangement.—Times of India.

VENTILATION OF EMIGRANT SHIPS.—We understand, says the Times of India, that the Government of India have modified the rules regarding emigration for the port of Calcutta in the following point:—Emigrant vessels leaving that port for the West Indies will be required in future to be provided with the automatic ventilator invented by Mr. Thiers of New Orleans. Should any inconvenience, however, arise from want of longer notice in introducing the apparatus in ships chartered for the coming season, the Government of India, should it be thought desirable by the Secretary of State and the Secretary for the Colonies, are prepared to postpone the introduction of the new rules until the commencement of the emigration season of 1879-80.

MOGUL PRINCES.—Two Delhi State prisoners, sons of Shah Bahadin Shah, the late King of Delhi, and last of the Great Moguls, were arraigned a few weeks ago before the Assistant Magistrate of Rangoon for an assault on one Meer Hyder Khan, a Mohammedan. The first defendant is a slightly built man, and presented a marked contrast to plaintiff, who is twice his size, a fair complexioned, big-bearded, beetle-browed Pathan. The second defendant declared he had nothing to do with the matter, that he was not even present at the time of the alleged assault. The first defendant admitted having struck the plaintiff, but said it was only in self-defence. The plaintiff was a Resselidar in a troop of cavalry which formed part of the Bareilly Force that mutinied, and marched to Delhi under command of the so-called General Peer Khan, a Subadar of Artillery, and fought against the British at the siege of that city in 1857. It was Peer Khan's troopers who stood round the place of slaughter when the European prisoners, men, women, and children, were murdered.

SINGHALESE STUDENTS AT THE MEDICAL COLLEGE.—The Committee who are entrusted with the management of the fund—originally Rs. 30,000—founded by the munificence of the late Rustomjee Jamsetjee Jejeebhoy, Esq., a leading merchant of Bombay, for the maintenance of one or more scholarships in the Medical College, Calcutta, for natives of Ceylon—have issued a report. It appears that five candidates in all have been sent to Calcutta on the foundation, but three broke down while pursuing their studies, and of another nothing need be said. Mr. Tilliamuttu Everts alone distinguished himself, and his remarkable success at Calcutta, justified his friends in looking forward to an honourable professional career for him. On his return to Ceylon he was appointed Lecturer in Anatomy at the Medical School, Colombo, but he died in November last from the effects of a dissecting wound. The Committee of the fund are making arrangements to send two young men to Calcutta this month. The endowment now amounts to Rs. 40,209.

SIMLA RIFLE VOLUNTEERS.—His Honour the Lieutenant-Governor of the Punjab inspected this Corps at Annandale on Saturday, the 22nd ult., in the presence of a large gathering of spectators. The Battalion paraded at 4.30 P.M., under the command of Major Peterson; the muster was a good one, four strong companies turning out. After the inspecting officer, the Hon. Mr. Egerton, had made a minute inspection of the Corps, the Battalion broke into column to the right, and marched past. This movement, considering the nature of the ground, was well performed: the steady marching and even dressing of letter C Company being particularly commended. The usual evolutions incidental to a field-day were then gone through, at the close of which his Honour addressed the Corps in a few flattering remarks, and earnestly impressed upon them the advantages of constant practice at the target with the splendid weapon they are now armed with. He also announced his intention of giving a prize this season to be shot for amongst the Corps.

DRUGGING.—A serious case of murder, in connection with the rice trade, has occurred near Dinagepore. During the past month, gangs of carts, or long trains, scoured the country in search of rice. Among these, four carts went to a place three miles south-east of Neckmurud, and put up for the night, after engaging to buy rice. As they were about to cook, their host offered to prepare food for them, which he did; during the night the four men got up mad; they had been over-drugged. Next morning two were found dead on the road, one mile south-east in an old fort; the other two went wandering about mad; their carts were found. The native police reported the occurrence of a dacoity, accompanied with murder. On the arrival of the European Assistant Superintendent of Police, to make an investigation, the villagers found the use of their tongues, and talked openly of its being a case of over-drugging, with the object of robbing, and pointed out the absurdity of supposing dacoity would make two men mad. Further investigation showed that the village gossip was true. One of the men recovered from the drugging, and helped materially in the final investigation. The case has gone into the station of Dinagepore for further investigation and trial.—Indian Daily News.

POISONING.—A wealthy native gentleman, named Shib Chunder Bhattacharjee, lately came by his death at his family residence in Shambazar under very suspicious circumstances. On the 23rd May last the deceased, who had been for some years past suffering from asthma, but was otherwise in good health, got sick immediately after his dinner. A medical man, called in by his friends, pronounced him to have been poisoned, and recommended his removal to the Medical College Hospital; but he died shortly after admission, denying that he had taken poison. In the subsequent post-mortem examination traces of arsenic-poisoning were at once discovered, but though the police made every effort they failed to make out a case against anyone. Suspicion, however, fell on the son of the deceased, said to be a young man of not very regular habits, and who was not on good terms with his father before his death; but the police failed to establish his complicity in the crime. The coroner's jury returned an open verdict, to the effect that the deceased came by his death in consequence of poison having been administered to him, but that there was not sufficient evidence to show by whom this was done.

NORTH WEST FRONTIER TRIBES.—The Lahor Correspondent of the Pioneer contrasts the loyalty of Pattiala with the conduct of the Frontier tribes. Three villages in the Peshawar district have been lately disarmed for the misuse of those weapons which Government allowed them. The first of these is Hind, which had a long train of misdeeds to suffer for. It was here that, in 1875, Shahdad Khan, Khan of the village, was murdered; the offenders, too, escaping punishment, owing to the hostile attitude of the Khan Khels of Hind to the deceased, and the partiality shown by the residents in screening the murderers. In 1877 another murder was committed within the limits of the village; and again in March of this year a serious attempt was made to murder five men belonging to the party of Azad Khan, son of Shahdad Khan, on an island half a mile from Hind. Besides these specific acts, there were more general reasons for its disarmament. It is not on the border, and the arms possessed by the residents were used, not against raiders from across the border, but for the gratification of private animosities. Akora, in the Nowshera tahseel of the Peshawar district, is the second of these offending villages. A case of burglary and murder occurred there, which perhaps of itself would not have been sufficient to necessitate the strong measure of disarmament; but this, it appears, was merely a part of a systematic plundering of the Hindus by certain Mohammedans of the village, and so great was the fear created, that not even the actual sufferers would come forward to give evidence. In fact, a regular system of terrorism was carried on, and the punishment was richly deserved. In Adizai, the third and last of the villages brought under the Arms Act, the Khadu Khel section has been disarmed, owing to constantly recurring blood feuds. The last outbreak was an attempt by the opposite faction to murder a lumberdar of the village.

THE RED SPIDER IN THE TEA-GARDENS.—Up to the burst of the rainy season the damage inflicted in the tea plantations by this pest was, according to the Darjeeling News, almost incalculable. Several gardens have for practical purposes been compelled to stop manufacture owing to the ravages of this mysterious insect. So far as can be gathered the "spider" is to be found equally on young and old bushes, on bushes growing in good and bad soil, on bushes that have been heavily plucked and in nurseries. But spiders appear to do much more harm to stunted, overplucked bushes than to healthy ones, and his ravages above three thousand feet of elevation seem harmless compared to the damage he does at lower elevations. Somehow he seems to be languid and somewhat out of his latitude above three thousand feet, and does not take so much out of the bushes. Heavily plucked (weakly) bushes seem, however, to suffer more than strong ones from the attacks of the "spider," and it is generally acknowledged that heavy and continuous rain exterminates the insect more or less. Whether this is merely a coincidence remains to be proved. That is, no body apparently seems to know whether the rains, which begin about the middle of June, kill the spider, or whether the insect having by that time deposited ova and accomplished the end of his existence dies off spontaneously. If this question could be solved it might not be very difficult to find a means for at all events mitigating the ravages committed by it. The point to be attended to is to nip the mischief in the bud; to ascertain when and where the eggs are laid and to find out the cheapest and most expeditious means of killing both the parents and the ova at the same time. So far, literally nothing of any practical value is known about the habits, growth and propagation of an insect pest which has already done an incalculable amount of damage to the tea plant in this district within the last few years.—Darjeeling News.

THE VOLUNTEER MOVEMENT IN OOTACAMUND.

A numerously attended meeting took place on the 29th ult. at the Assembly Rooms, kindly placed at the disposal of the Commissioner for the purpose by Mr. Misquith, to hear the report of progress made in the Volunteer movement from the Joint Secretaries of the Committee appointed to further the same. His Excellency the Commander-in-Chief had been requested to preside. He, however, declined to do so in a letter addressed to Mr. Barlow, which inadvertently was not read to the meeting, and expressed an opinion that the Commissioner was the fittest person to direct the proceedings on the occasion. Mr. Barlow accordingly took the chair, who explained that since the last meeting at Ootacamund, a successful meeting in aid of the movement had been held at Coonoor, at which numerous Volunteers promised to enrol themselves, that under instructions from Government, Major Pigott had been making inquiries and had ascertained that the probable number of volunteers would be over 250, that his Grace the Governor, though unable to attend, had written expressing his strong sympathy with and interest in the movement, and that the Commander-in-Chief, though declining to preside, showed by his presence his interest in the movement and his desire to help it. Mr. Barlow concluded by pointing out the advantage of a strong body of Volunteers in such a commanding position as these hills. Captain Campbell then read a letter from his Grace the Governor, and addressed the meeting at length regarding the various steps that had been taken in furtherance of the movement, and stated that the total number of volunteers would be 255, according to Major Pigott's calculation as under:—Octacamund, 100; Coonoor and Wellington, 50; a Mounted Corps, 40; Kotagherry, 15; Wynaad, 50. His Excellency the Commander-in-Chief next forcibly set forth to the meeting his concurrence in the utility of a Volunteer corps, and the special advantage of a mounted troop attached to the same. His Excellency pointed out that the uniform of the corps should be plain and simple and concluded by specially addressing himself to the elder laids from the Lawrence Asylum, telling them how useful boys of their age had been in the defence of Lucknow. Major Pigott then addressed the meeting, reading extracts from the Army Regulations, the number of drills that had to be attended, and the necessary qualification to claim the capitation allowance from Government. Mr. Cowdell next spoke, expressing his own willingness to sacrifice sufficient time to enable him to perfect himself in drill, and the other duties of a soldier, and pointed out the necessity for others doing the same. He concluded by strongly advocating the admission of loyal natives to the corps. Proposed by Mr. Cowdell and seconded by Capt. Campbell, and carried: "That natives be admitted to the corps if duly qualified in the opinion of the Commanding officer." Proposed by Captain Campbell and seconded by Captain Rae, and carried: "That the uniform for the corps be red jacket, blue trousers and white helmet." Major Pigott having stated that about Rs. 2,000 would be required to start the corps, in dress, &c., till the men could qualify for the capitation allowance, it was resolved that a subscription list be opened for the signatures of the meeting, and for circulation hereafter to the public. The meeting terminated with votes of thanks to his Excellency for his promises of support and to the Acting Commissioner for presiding. A sum of Rs. 600 was subscribed on the spot.—South of India Observer.

THE PULNEY HILLS.

The Pulney Hills are but little known beyond the circle of officials and missionaries connected with the districts in their immediate neighbourhood, because, until lately, they have been so difficult of access; but now that the S.I. Railway passes within thirty miles of the foot of the old ghaut, and within about thirteen miles of that of the new ghaut intended for wheeled traffic, they well deserve a larger share in the patronage of health and holiday seekers, and probably of market gardeners, though the latter do not seem to have given the place a trial yet. The station, Kodikanal, is said to be between 7,000 and 8,000 feet above sea level, while there is another spot, Chambaganore between 1,000 and 2,000 feet lower, with an outlook over the plain towards the east, but sheltered on all other sides by the tall grass-covered hills. As will be supposed from the elevation, the climate is delightfully cool, though being on a spur projecting eastward from the main chain of the ghauts, these hills are, during the south-west monsoon, comparatively dry. On first going up, some people, long accustomed to the plains, feel a tightness across the chest, which, however, wears off in a day or two. With the exception of a few dense sholas, there is not much natural forest higher than the lower station, but there are some splendid downs covered with coarse grass, and a springy peat turf, and the Australian gum trees that have been largely planted around the houses and in scattered spots have grown so freely as already to form pretty copes to shelter the cottages peeping out from amidst their light grey green foliage and to give to the Kodikanal basin a very pleasing park-like appearance. Among the indigenous trees are rhododendrons, the wild jack, a large tree bearing a small species of lime, some very fine tree-ferns, blackberries, and wild raspberries and strawberries. There are many varieties of moss and ferns, and many pretty wild flowers, among which are representatives of the butter-cup, daisy, violet, balsam, and hare-bell blue. Roses grow to an extraordinary size, and in great profusion, and with geraniums seem to run wild, as if in their native clime. Other English flowers grow luxuriantly where at all cared for, as may be seen in the gardens of the Lord of the Manor and of the R. C. Mission. A few furze bushes at a little distance from the lake have a healthy appearance. Peaches, apples, pears, loquots, plums, and strawberries flourish. There are one or two small native gardens, in which may be seen potatoes, cabbage, &c., in good condition; and there is good reason to believe that other European vegetables would also succeed here. At two native villages, about four and twelve miles respectively from Kodikanal, garlic is largely cultivated and sent to the plains. Poultry get on well after they are acclimatised, but suffer from the cold when first brought up from the lowlands. Sheep, however, suffer most, and the natives seem to keep none, while the Europeans find it necessary to kill, almost at once, such as they get up. Sheep from Mysor or some other moderately cool region would probably suit these hills much better than such as are imported direct from the burning plains of Madura. There are large numbers of a small breed of country cows to be seen grazing about on the hills close to the villages. Horses and ponies from the plains are liable to suffer if not sheltered in warm shut-up stables. Chambaganore, the lower station, contains only one house, usually occupied by the family of one of the civil officers of the district, and two chattrams. At Kodikanal there are at present eighteen or twenty houses occupied, and two more in course of erection. Most of these residences are small and snug, and come rather under the designation of cottages than of houses, but are large enough to meet the wants of the few residents, and the great majority of probable visitors. They are all provided with one or more fireplaces, which serve greatly to increase the feeling of comfort, for a fire in the evening is almost a necessity, even in May and June, at any rate for folks from the lower regions. All of them have gardens—some very pretty, and capable of being easily made so. Several of them have badminton or lawn-tennis courts. All of them have very nice views either of the lake and its surroundings or the broad expanse of plain far below, or of both. The principal drawback is the absence of a bazaar or anything in the shape of a shop, so that everything has to be procured from the plains by each person for himself. Steps are, however, being taken for the establishment of a weekly fair, for which a piece of ground has already been taken, so that it is hoped the arrangement will soon come into operation.—Madras Athenæum Correspondent.

Miscellaneous.

BANK OF MADRAS.—A dividend has been declared by the Bank of Madras at the rate of 10 per cent. per annum for the half year just ended, Rs. 25,000 have been carried to the reserve fund, which now amounts to Rs. 6,25,000. The balance at credit of profit and loss is Rs. 41,933, carried forward to next half year.

ARRIVAL OF A SHIP WITH ICE.—The American ship Harmonia arrived from Boston on June 28, after a passage of ninety-five days, bringing 650 tons of ice, 500 cases of kerosine oil, 50 bales of drill, and 10 cases of cotton sheeting. Mr. C. H. Joes, an assistant for the Ice House at Madras, arrived by the vessel.

LOCUSTS.—In Mysor during the past month many millions of locusts have been destroyed, but notwithstanding the energetic measures adopted by the civil authorities these pests are increasing in some taluks. Within a few miles of Mysor a swarm lighted on a banyan and on a neem tree, and their weight brought down branches about the thickness of a man's arm.

MAIL ROBBERIES.—The Mysor correspondent of the Madras Times states that the Imperial Mail from Bangalor was robbed about two o'clock on the morning of July 1st, near Seringapatam. The intelligence of the robbery was received at Mysor, at daybreak, when the Deputy Commissioner, Major Pearse, at once proceeded to the place and made the necessary inquiries.

REVIVAL OF TRADE.—Large consignments of cotton are now daily arriving at Madras from stations on the North-West Line of the Madras Railway, particularly Adoni and Bellary, consigned to several of the Agency houses in this city. Last year the cotton traffic was very dull, and very small quantities were brought down. The trade in this staple appears now to have revived. The South Indian Railway Company, too, are bringing into Madras large quantities of cotton.

COFFEE CROP.—The Madras Times correspondent for Nagercoil writes, at the end of last month, that judging from what one hears on all sides, it seems as if this season's coffee crop in South Travancor will be a very poor one. The planters have much to complain of, though it cannot be denied that they have had much done for them by the Government, considering that natives do not and cannot always see the advantage of fostering enterprises that will benefit a Government indirectly to a greater extent than directly.

HEALTH OF BRITISH TROOPS AT BANGALOR.—His Excellency the Commander-in-Chief has requested Government to address the Chief Commissioner of Mysor on the subject of the insanitary condition of Bangalor, as affecting the British troops located at that station, caused by the Hindu cemetery being situated contiguous to the Ulsoor Tank, from whence the British troops are supplied with drinking-water. The graveyard is, from a sanitary point of view, reported to be a filthy, loathsome spot, and emitting a most offensive and overpowering smell; and its proximity to the source from which the troops get their supply of drinking-water is a matter which seriously affects the health of the British troops. Government have accordingly addressed the Mysor Government on the subject, and have suggested the closing of the cemetery and the preservation of the future conservancy of the ground.—Madras Times.

THE LEGISLATIVE COUNCIL.—At a meeting of the Council of the Governor of Fort St. George, for making Laws and Regulations, held at the Council Chamber Ooty, on June 29th, the President announced the assent of the Governor-General to the Act for licensing trades, dealings and industries in the Madras Presidency, and to the Canals and Ferry Act; and the Assistant Secretary reported that the Act to provide for the payment from Municipal Funds of a portion of the cost of the Police had been forwarded for the assent of the Governor-General. Sir William Robinson introduced the Abkarri Law Amendment Bill, which was passed as amended. The Hon. W. Huddleston presented the report of the Select Committee on the Bills to provide for the protection of game and acclimatised fish in the Neilgherries. The Bill as amended was unanimously passed.

A FLIGHT OF LOCUSTS.—A flight of locusts, which made its appearance at Sattimungalum on the 10th ult., is thus described by the Bombay Gazette:—The people beat drums and made a noise, but the locusts settled about three hundred yards off on the ground, and presented the appearance of small stones, like gravel, spread thick and close on even soil. When run up to with a noise they did not start up again till got at within six or eight yards, when they flew again for three hundred yards or so and settled again. A heavy and continued swarm of bees passing from one place to another would be an exact description of the flight to anybody who has seen a large number of bees on the wing. The flight continued for nearly two hours, which would make about twelve miles of length, two hundred yards wide and about three feet thick; and allowing fifty locusts flying to the cubic foot, there were about 533,600,000. They appeared at the height of about two hundred yards to be as small as the hill bees, and when taken measured one-and-a-half inch in length, but the wings measured three-eighth inch more.

SAD CASE OF DROWNING.—Two lads, named Ebenezer Cripps, a resident of Madras, on a visit to St. Thomas's Mount, and Sydney Smith, a resident, went out on the 29th ult. to have a bath in the river at the back of the hill. They were accompanied by some girls and Mrs. Smith, mother of Sydney Smith. It would appear that, on reaching the river, both the boys got into the water, but, very shortly afterwards, the lad Cripps slipped into a hollow and disappeared. His companion Smith at once went after him, and he also was not seen again. Smith's mother, who was standing on the bank, seeing what had happened, stood aghast, not knowing what to do, but after a little while she managed to call out for help. Help, however, was than too late. The two unfortunate boys were taken out of the water dead and locked in each others' arms. Mr. Netscher, the senior apothecary of the Garrison Hospital, and apothecaries Whitwell and Eate were on the spot soon after the accident, but they could do nothing. Both the boys were about fourteen years of age. Cripps was a Bishop Corrie's School boy, while Smith, whose mother is a widow with a large family, attended the Mount Army School.—Madras Times.

A PUBLIC CLOCK FOR OOTACAMUND.—A correspondent, writing to the Madras Times from Ootacamund, states that, on the occasion of his Royal Highness the Prince of Wales's visit to India in November, 1876, it was expected that his Royal Highness would visit Ootacamund, and that with the object of giving him a fitting reception a considerable sum of money was raised. The expected visit, however, did not take place, and the committee, having some Rs. 1,500, which they did not know what to do with, called a meeting of subscribers to decide on the disposal of the available amount. The meeting was held in the Ootacamund Court house on the 20th December, 1876, when Captain Morant suggested the purchase of a clock, to be placed in the tower of the Breeks' Memorial School. This proposition on being put to the vote was carried. Since then, for some reason or other, nothing was done to carry into effect the determination of the subscribers to the Prince of Wales's Fund. The matter, however, is now being revived, and Messrs. Orr and Sons of Madras have been asked to furnish Captain Morant with an estimate of the cost of a turret clock for the Breeks' Memorial School.

DEATHS OF MEDICAL OFFICERS.—We much regret to have to announce the death from heat apoplexy, at Sumbulpore, of Surgeon George Charles Bouton, Madras Medical Department, attached to the wing of the 2nd N.I. at that station. He was appointed to the Medical Service so recently as March last year, and he arrived in Madras last November; he was a young gentleman of much promise and great social accomplishments, and his loss will be deplored by many in Madras who lately had the pleasure of his acquaintance. When he was in Madras before the hot weather had set in he suffered much from the heat, and he left reluctantly for Sumbulpore, as he doubted his ability to endure the great heat which in the hottest months is experienced at that station; he could hardly have been more than twenty-three years of age. News has also been received by telegraph of the sudden death of Surgeon Peter J. Farrell, B.A., M.B., Acting Zillah Surgeon of Guntoor, but particulars of this melancholy occurrence are not yet to hand; Dr. Farrell obtained his commission in March, 1876. During last month Dr. T. Gynne Howell, 19th N.I., died at Ootacamund, and Dr. Philip Thompson, 20th N.I., died at Banda, so that the Madras Medical Department has to deplore the loss in one month of four of its officers.—Madras Mail.

THE LATE MR. KERSHAW.—In the recent death of Mr. W. R. Kershaw the Government have lost a thoroughly conscientious servant and an efficient educational officer. Mr. Kershaw was, for many years, Head Master of the Bellary Provincial School, and probably there are but few men in any department of the service who have worked so hard as he did there. He was then a man of studious and retiring habits, and seldom went into society. Indeed, a great part of the leisure time to which he was entitled was ordinarily devoted either to the private teaching of his more promising pupils, or to the careful examination of written exercises given in class, so that he had but little time to give to social intercourse. Many who were fortunate enough to have him as an instructor, and who are now occupying important spheres of usefulness and of emolument, will ever retain a grateful remembrance of his earnest and self-denying labours on their behalf. Mr. Kershaw had always a strong aversion to the pushing of his claims to promotion on the notice of his superiors in office, and as a direct consequence of this he experienced the mortification of seeing men, his juniors in the service, and by no means his superiors in ability and attainments, advanced to positions for which he had a prior claim. Ultimately, however, his merits were acknowledged, and he was appointed to the Inspectorship of the 1st Division, in the faithful discharge of the duties of which office he died on the 19th inst. The material that he had to work upon in the Bellary Provincial school was but little fitted for display in University examinations, though in this direction he achieved more than any of his successors, and the gradual subsidence, since his removal, of that institution to the position and status of a Zillah School speaks volumes for the energy and ability with which he fulfilled his duties as Head Master.

THE CAPTAIN HENRY MEMORIAL FOUNTAIN.

When, rather more than a year ago, poor Captain Henry, late Superintendent of the P. and O. Company's establishment in Bombay, met with the sad accident which caused his death, the regret felt was universal, and measures were taken publicly to organise a memorial of him, with the result that a bust of the deceased gentleman will shortly be placed in the hall of the Sailors' Home, of the Committee of which institution Captain Henry was President. The memorial fund will also serve to considerably augment the resources of the library of the Home. This is the memorial subscribed to by personal friends of Captain Henry and by the public of Bombay generally, amongst whom he was much respected. There is another memorial, the funds for establishing which were subscribed solely amongst the members of the great Ocean Mail service, to which Captain Henry belonged. Mr. F. D. Parker, who had been appointed by telegram to act as Superintendent for the Company, naturally, and with commendable alacrity, took the initiative to afford means for a combined expression of the general wish. A meeting was called together on March 1st, 1877, at which Mr. Parker presided, and which was attended by nearly all the officials of the Bombay establishment, and the commanders of the P. and O. ships then in harbour. It was decided that the memorial fountain should be erected somewhere near the P. and O. dockyard at Mazagon, a subscription list was satisfactorily started, and a committee appointed to carry out the desired object. The Committee availed themselves of the services of Mr. James W. Smith, Associate of the Institute of Civil Engineers, who had offered to act as honorary architect. The first point to be determined was necessarily the site, and the north-west angle of the Pedder Markets compound was asked for, and at once given by Mr. J. H. Grant, then the Acting Municipal Commissioner. This site is eminently appropriate, not only on account of its close proximity to the P. and O. Dockyard, but also because Captain Henry was particularly energetic in obtaining the erection of the Pedder Markets, and the consequent conversion of a malarious swamp into a well-kept garden. The design prepared by Mr. James W. Smith was much admired by the Committee, and it was resolved to endeavour to carry it out. It was intended that the materials should be the blue trap of Bombay, the red stone of Andheri, and Coorla freestone, the tablets being of statuary marble, and the columns of dark marble polished. It was found, however, that the subscriptions would not amount to a sum sufficient to carry out the original intention, and yet the committee was loth to abandon the design. A suggestion that the greater part of the work, and with a few modifications, should be executed in terra cotta, afforded a solution of the difficulty, and Mr. Antonio Rampana, an Italian artist, engaged on the new palace of H.H. the Nizam of Hyderabad, entered into a contract to carry out the design principally in terra cotta for the sum then raised. As frequently happens, the foundation amounted to considerably more than had been anticipated; for, although in one part of the site the rock was but a little below the surface, yet it shelved off steeply from that part, being found, on continuing the excavation, to have been quarried out. The following is a description of the fountain as it has been completed. Above the foundation a platform of blue trap rises 1ft. 6ins., in three heights or steps. The plan is octagonal, the first step being 20ft. 2in., and the top step 10ft. 2in., measured across from the middle of one side to the middle of its opposite side. From the platform rises an octagonal red shaft, with blue trap plinth, buff moulded base, and buff capital or cornice supporting a red basin 10ft. 2ins. across, all in terra cotta except the plinth. The capital is ornamented with foliage, and the basin has ornamental bands. From each side of the shaft projects a winged lion in a sitting posture, having in its mouth a brass valve to supply the native chatties, for supporting which long stones stand out from the plinth. Out of the basin springs an octagonal plinth in two heights, and from the upper plinth water flows by eight jets into the basin. On the plinth stand eight slabs of white Italian marble. On the panel parallel with Dockyard-road the following inscription is engraved: "1877. This Fountain is presented to the City of Bombay by members of the P. and O. S. N. Co's Service, being raised by them as a memorial of Captain G. F. Henry, an energetic citizen, and a friend whom in life they regarded with esteem, and whose sudden death they deeply deplore." On the panel, parallel with the side road, is another inscription, as follows:—"George Fitzgerald Henry, of the Peninsular and Oriental Steam Navigation Company, a commander of their ships, and their Superintendent afterwards for many years at Bombay. Born in Dublin 1822. When driving to his office he was thrown from his carriage in the near neighbourhood of this spot, and died within two hours. February 23, 1877." In the centre of the slab between these two panels and also in the opposite slab is a Circular medallion, with a portrait of Captain Henry in basso relievo. Two other slabs are prepared to receive medallions, which will bear symbols used by the P. and O. Company; but, owing to some misapprehension, they were not sent from Italy with the rest of the work, and have yet to arrive. At the angles of the slabs are eight black columns, with buff bases, bands and foliated capitals, supporting eight foliated gablets, from the intersections of which spring an octagonal spire ornamented with crockets and bands, and surmounted by a metal finial. The total height, from the surface of the ground to the point of the spire, is 19 ft. 7 in., and the finial rises 2 ft. 2 in. higher. The cost, including the new gate and the necessary alterations of the compound wall, has been about 6,000 Rs. On Saturday afternoon this handsome fountain was formally handed over by the Committee to the Municipal Commissioner (Mr. Grant) as the representative of the Municipality and the public. The weather was very unfavourable, the rain descending in torrents, but nevertheless a number of gentlemen assembled on the occasion.

Miscellaneous.

DEATH OF THE REV. DIGBY COTES.—The Rev. Digby Cotes died suddenly at Kurrachee on July 10, and was buried on July 11. The funeral was largely attended.

ROYAL ALFRED SAILORS' HOME.—Captain Carew, Superintendent of Marine, and Captain Parker, Master Attendant, have been elected Directors of the Royal Alfred Sailors' Home, vice Captain Searle and Captain Morland, who have left the Presidency.

THE PARSEES.—The Parsee communities, of Surat and some other towns having petitioned the Government of India that Parsees may be exempted from the operation of the Administrator General's Act, 2 of 1874, the question has been referred for report to the local Governments concerned.

MR. M. BALFOUR, Secretary and Treasurer of the Bank of Bombay, has been appointed a member of the local Legislative Council in place of Mr. Lang. Mr. Balfour's long connection with the city and intimate acquaintance with financial affairs will enable him to afford valuable assistance to Government in his new capacity.

The Portuguese Press, according to the Pioneer, has caught the vernacular infection of abusing dignities. The editor of the weekly Goa paper, the Ultramar, was, on the 17th ult., found guilty "of abusing the liberty of the Press," in defaming the character of Senhor Serra Moura, the Crown Advocate, recently made Chief Justice of Portuguese India. The editor was condemned to fifteen days' imprisonment, or to pay 15,000 reis.

THE JEWS AND JURIES.—The leading members of the Hebrew community of Bombay have presented a petition to the Chief Justice and Judges, praying to be exempted from serving on the jury on Saturdays, their Sabbath, and their petition has been granted. The names, therefore, of Hebrew jurors will not be called on Fridays or Saturdays. Should any of them be called on Thursday, they will have to take the risk of the trial lasting to Saturday.—Pioneer.

THE RAINFALL.—The rainfall this year is quite unprecedented. Up to the 4th more than forty inches of rain fell in fourteen days. This is supposed to be the greatest quantity ever registered here. The monsoon fairly broke on the 21st, and from that date to the 5th the rainfall was almost continuous. The total rainfall in 1876 was only a few inches more than the fall up to date in the present year. The rainfall has been fairly good in most of the Presidency districts. The Times of India, however, has been informed that, great as has been the downpour, it is not unprecedented, for an apparently reliable authority declares that twenty-four inches have been recorded in a single night in the neighbourhood of the city.

NEW FLAGSHIP.—The Bombay Gazette understands that the Undaunted, flagship, which has been lying at Aden for the last five months under instructions from the home Government, will not return to Bombay, but will be replaced almost immediately by a new flagship, the Euryalus. The Euryalus is an iron wooden-cased corvette of 4,000 tons, carrying sixteen heavy guns, and belongs to the class of new swift unarmoured cruisers which are now a favourite type of men-of-war. Admiral Corbett with his staff only will be transferred from the Undaunted to the Euryalus, the officers and crew of the Undaunted going home in her.

THE GOVERNOR'S LEVEE AT POONA.—H.E. the Governor's levee was held at the Council Hall on the 6th inst., when H.E. Sir Charles Staveley, K.C.B., Commander-in-Chief, Major-General Primrose, C.S.I., and their Staffs, and all the Members of Council and the élite of the station were present. H.E. the Governor's band was present, as well as the band of H.M.'s 5th N.L.I., which regiment also furnished a guard of 100 rank and file with colours under the command of a European officer. The guard was drawn up opposite the principal entrance of the Council Hall, and received his Excellency at the specified hour, the band striking up the National Anthem, the front entrance being kept clear for his Excellency and Staff. After the usual formalities of the evening were concluded the officers commanding native corps and depots remained in attendance for the purpose of introducing the native officers of their respective regiments and depots to his Excellency the Governor.—Poona Observer, July 8.

DEATH FROM SUNSTROKE.—A party of seventeen engineers and subordinates while travelling to Lahor from Kurrachee, en route to the Oudh famine line survey, lost two of their number from sunstroke. The circumstances connected with the death of one of the victims, Mr. Youngusband, assistant engineer, are very painful. Feeling ill, he appears to have left his carriage for the purpose of joining his companions, or for some other reason, and to have lost his footing. He was not missed until the train arrived at Shugabad, when, as no news could be obtained from the nearer stations of his having been left behind, a search was instituted along the line, resulting in the discovery of his lifeless body. The other, Mr. Porter, sub-engineer, died soon after his arrival at the Multan dak bungalow.

THE THAKORE OF PALITANA.—Frequent complaints have been rife of the conduct of the Thakore of Palitana; and Mr. Peile, the Political Agent in Kattywar, in his last annual administration report, animadverted very unfavourably on the Chief's rule in his principality. The Bombay Gazette notices a case of wanton cruelty exercised at the hands of the Chief himself. Amursey Trikam Paruk, and his brother Tribhovan (vakeels), and their father, an old man, who were supposed to be friendly with the late Ministry, were sent for on the 31st May last, and severely flogged by the Thakore himself, and then by his servants. They were so mercilessly treated that the inhabitants of the town of Palitana were terror-stricken, and some families in consequence left and sought refuge in Bhownuggur. The old man and his sons were afterwards heavily laden with fetters and imprisoned, so that no complaint might be laid before the Assistant Political Agent. One of the prisoners, Amursey, however, managed to escape from his confinement, and went straight to the camp of Mr. Fitzgerald, showed the marks of violence on his person, and narrated the woful tale of his sufferings and those of his companions. Mr. Fitzgerald, who happened to be at the time at Gogo, had the man examined by the medical gentleman in charge of the Government dispensary, and having satisfied himself of the accuracy of the complaint, the Assistant Political Agent repaired to Palitana, on the 10th June, with the doctor, and had all the prisoners examined. Mr. Fitzgerald sent in his report to Government, through the Political Agent, who, the most recent advices inform us, has declined to interfere in the matter.

PRIVATE SUBSCRIPTIONS IN AID OF FAMINE RELIEF.

The following despatch contains the views both of the Secretary of State and the Government of India with regard to local or presidential appeals to the benevolence of the public in cases of famine, and as the rule of any future appeals, is of general interest:—

India Office, London, May 16, 1878.

From the Secretary of State for India, to the Government of India.
With reference to the second paragraph of my despatch, No. 18, dated 21st February, I have now to take under consideration the proposals made in the concluding paragraph of your letter, dated 21st December, regarding the proceedings proper to be taken in respect of appeals for charitable contributions towards famine relief.

2. You are of opinion that, in cases of future famine, no appeal should be made by a local Government to the charity of an English public, excepting with the approval of the Governor-General in Council; that the Governor-General in Council should, in the first instance, define the objects, to which (as distinct from the obligation devolving on the Government) such charity will be devoted; and that, to inspire confidence in the public, as well as to secure the efficient administration of the funds, local committees should conduct their operations under the control of Government and with the co-operation of its officers.

3. I entirely concur in the soundness of these principles.

4. Your Excellency in Council has made these proposals in reference only to appeals preferred to the English public. Their adoption in such cases will not, however, preclude appeals being made to the Indian public by local Governments, or for lesser objects, within more limited areas, by high officials.

5. Amongst the wealthier classes of India there is an ample fund of benevolence, which may well be drawn upon (as, indeed, it has on previous occasions) by judicious appeal from the local authorities. Much judgment is, no doubt, needed as to the mode in which such contributions should be invited, in order that the action of the public may be entirely voluntary, and without even the appearance of constraint. But the well-known disposition of the people to succour the distressed leaves no room to doubt that aid would be cheerfully rendered upon all occasions of urgent necessity.

AMONG recent publications in the vernacular at Madras is a poem based on the tragic story of Madura Verappen, who was "left exposed in the wilderness when born with something unpropitious to his father, King of Benares, and who was picked up and fostered by a woman of a low tribe in the chief town of the chief named Bommana, where he afterwards eloped with the chief's daughter and brought on a conflict, in which the chief was slain. He then took service as a soldier and cleared the Madura country of robbers, and afterwards by a misadventure and in the fane of Menacshee he had his limbs cut off by the king's order. Verappen vowed next to become a devotee of Menacshee, by whose grace his two wives were restored, and cut his own throat. Then follows a strange story of his spectre."

ROYAL INDIAN ENGINEERING COLLEGE.

The prizes gained during the past year by the students of the Royal Indian Engineering College, Cooper's-hill, were distributed on Friday last by Lord Napier of Magdala, in the absence of Lord Cranbrook, Secretary of State for India, who was summoned at the last moment to attend a meeting of the Cabinet. A large company assembled in the theatre to witness the ceremony, amongst those present, in addition to Lord and Lady Napier of Magdala, being Sir Louis Mallet, Permanent Under-Secretary for India; Sir F. Halliday, Colonel Sir W. Merewether, Sir Philip Wodehouse, Sir George Campbell, M.P., Sir John and Lady Adye, Sir G. D. and Lady Forsyth, Sir F. and Lady Pollock, Colonel Sir Lewis Pelly, Sir E. F. and Lady Du Cane, Sir F. and Miss Goldsmid, General Sir Arthur Kemball, Sir J. and Lady Fayrer, Mr. D. Onslow, M.P., Sir H. Norman, Major-General and Mrs. Thuillier, General and Mrs. Bunn, General and Mrs. Hopkisson, and Colonel Chesney, President of the College.

Colonel Chesney said that although the academical year just closed had been uneventful, it had been marked by a change of some importance. Hitherto one half of the last of the three years over which the College course extended had been devoted by the senior students to practical work in some part of the kingdom. In future, however, they would pass the whole of the third year in the College, and undergo a practical course after entering the public service. The further course would be made at the cost of the State, and the extension of the period of training would be compensated for by a reduction in the limit of age for admission into the College. For the senior students the principal distinction available was the Foundation exhibition, established by the civil engineers of the Public Works Department, which had been won by Mr. W. Chadwick. The two senior Foundation scholarships had been gained by Mr. J. W. Wyatt and Mr. W. E. Pedley, and the two junior by Mr. R. C. Dyson and Mr. E. J. Alexander. The Argyle scholarship, the gift of the Secretary of State, had been secured by Mr. H. Roche; that given by the Public Works Committee of the Council of India for applied mathematics by Mr. W. H. McConnel; the Dickens' scholarship in mathematics by Mr. A. Hill; the President's prize for Indian history by Mr. H. G. Savory; and the accounts prize by Mr. W. Chadwick. In the telegraph department the prize for general proficiency had been awarded to Mr. T. Berrington. The College had now outlived whatever dangers might have beset its early years, and was encountering the incidents of successful manhood.—(Cheers.)

The prizes were then distributed amongst the successful students by Lord Napier of Magdala.

Sir Louis Mallet, in the name of Lord Cranbrook, congratulated Colonel Chesney and his Staff upon the successful results of the past year, and expressed his sympathy with them in their ambitious aspirations. He shared the belief that the prolongation of the course of study with a view to practical objects would produce the best possible consequences. An addition had been made of students in the telegraph service, and it would have been difficult to have effected a better arrangement. He could not help thinking that it would be an advantage if in future the engineering and telegraph services were more and more brought together. The interest of meetings like the present was very great, and the students must derive benefit from meeting face to face men who were distinguished in the contemporary annals of English history. Intellectual culture, sound knowledge, and high moral principle should be combined as far as possible, those being the title-deeds of British administration in India.—(Cheers.)

Lord Napier of Magdala, who was received with cheers, then addressed the students. His lordship said:—My visit is one of great interest to me, to see my brother engineers, as I may call you, starting on your career. I congratulate you upon the great advantages that you possess here—advantages which we who worked in India without anything like the same preparation can thoroughly appreciate. The engineers who started in my day were not only constructors, but were hewers of wood and drawers of water. We quarried, we made our nails, we burnt our lime, we made our bricks, and did every subordinate work that an engineer now finds done to his hand. You will have much more time than we had to advance the engineering profession and engineering science in their higher branches. I heard with pleasure the remarks which Colonel Chesney made as to maintaining the period of instruction and commencing at an earlier date, for those who are advanced in life can appreciate the advantage of youth in every undertaking, and especially in India, where the utmost activity and energy are required. It is very satisfactory to observe that every branch of engineering is cultivated here. I have known an engineer prepared to execute any large work—I must admit that he was not a military engineer. He would say, "I am quite ready to commence, but you will be kind enough to send me a surveyor to survey the ground first." It is perfectly clear that no such one will be found among the engineers who start from this institution. As an engineer one of the first essentials which I held to be necessary in constructing any work was to see the foundation made with my own eyes, and I would willingly ride a hundred miles, if I had my building to construct, in order to see the first stone of the foundation laid. When the foundation had been well laid, I was quite sure that the superstructure was safe, and such is the course here. My friend, Colonel Chesney, with his own hands, is laying an excellent foundation, and I think we may all trust confidently that the superstructure will be everything that can be desired. Among the very important studies in which so many have shown proficiency I attach particular value to that of Indian history. You will have many great works to execute, probably much greater than we have yet seen in India, but success in your career will depend very much, in addition to your professional skill, upon your knowledge of the country and the people, and the way in which you treat the people. Without a knowledge of the people and their history you are very apt to be led to false conclusions; but when you know them well, when you know their history and all that they have been subjected to, you will bear a kindly thought for their deficiencies, and thoroughly appreciate all the excellent qualities that you will find. I have said before here, but I think I may repeat, that I never did a kindness to a native of India that it was not returned a hundredfold when there was an opportunity. Every year is bringing us nearer in appreciation, and nearer in feeling, to that great country to which you are going. I have always held out, in conversation with Indian princes and chiefs, the hope that year by year the union of the two parts of the empire will become closer, and that we shall form one grand whole, unassailable by the rest of the world; and that end will be greatly facilitated by the bearing and conduct of the young men who start for their career in India. You are a mark for every eye to the native population; every act and every word will be observed and scanned by some one, and by very keen judges of character. I am sure that the training you have received here will lead you to conduct yourselves in such a high manner, and with such high aims, that you will carry with you the respect and attachment of the natives of India, amongst whom you will have to live.—(Loud cheers).

INDIA CIVIL SERVICE.

The following are the successful candidates at the recent open competition for the Civil Service of India, but their selection is conditional on their passing a medical examination to be held in London in the course of the next few days:—

Miscellaneous.

IMPORT OF SPECIE.—The Peninsular and Oriental Company's steamer Teheran has left Point de Galle for Suez and Southampton with £230,000 in specie for Europe.

THE INDIA OFFICE will issue, in a few weeks, a collection of Pali, Sanskrit, and Old Canarese inscriptions from Western India, arranged by Mr. Fleet, B.C.S., under the direction of Mr. Burgess, Government Archaeological Surveyor.

THE next volumes in Mr. Longfellow's series, "Poems of Places," will, says the New York Publisher's Weekly, be devoted to Asia. "The first of these includes Syria; the second, Asia Minor, Mesopotamia, Arabia, Turkestan, and Afghanistan; the third, Persia, India, China, and whatever other parts of Asia have been fortunate enough to be sung about."

BILLS ON INDIA.—Tenders were received at the Bank of England on Wednesday for £300,000 in bills on India. The amounts allotted were: To Calcutta, £216,400; to Bombay, £75,900; and to Madras, £7,700. Tenders on all presidencies at 1s. 8 1-16d., will receive about thirty-four per cent.; above that price in full. These rates show a reduction of about 1-16d. compared with last week.

Two interesting works published at Calcutta are announced in the Athenæum. One is the first instalment of a translation of "Tulsee Dass Ramayana," by Mr. Gronse, of the Civil Service. Tulsee Dass occupies in the Hindi vernacular the position of Shakespeare in the English language, while the poet Chand dates back 600 years, and occupies the position of Chaucer. The Ramayana is an independent poem, and not a translation from the Sanskrit. It is most popular with the people, and deservedly so, but up to the present time quite unknown in Europe. The second is the preface to the new and first edition of the Sanskrit text of the "Lalita Vistara," the only authentic account of the life of Sakya Muni, of Buddha, published by Rajendra Lal Mitri. This work is known to us by translation from the Tibetan version by Foucaux in French, and from the Chinese version by Mr. Beal in English. The work is replete with linguistic and religious interest.

LOCAL SELF-GOVERNMENT IN INDIA.—The East Indian Association have just received from Lord Cranbrook, Secretary of State for India, a reply promising to give due consideration to the Association's memorial in advocacy of the extension of the village Panchayat system of local self-government in India as an efficacious means of promoting good-will among the rural classes and reducing mischievous litigation, and also as providing a remedy for the agrarian disorders, which largely originate in the action of the Civil Courts in dispossessing the landholders who have fallen into extreme poverty and indebtedness. The memorialists prayed that the Secretary of State for India in Council would be pleased, by the appointment of a Commission or by such other means as might appear fit, to direct inquiry to be made in order to ascertain how far the poverty and indebtedness of the cultivating classes is due to defects in the existing judicial system for the recovery of debt, and whether the delay, vexation, uncertainty and expense of litigation might not be materially reduced by restoring the ancient and customary institution of village Panchayats.

INVENTIONS FOR INDIA.—Specifications of the undermentioned inventions have been filed in the office of the Secretary to the Government of India in the Home Department:—Mr. G. K. Winter, F.R.A.S., Telegraph Engineer, Madras Railway, Arcotum, in the Presidency of Madras, for improvements in block telegraph instruments. Mr. R. W. H. P. Higgs, of No. 12, Queen Anne's-gate, Westminster, in the County of Middlesex, England, electrician, for improvements in electric telegraphs. Mr. C. R. Cowie, Rangoon, British Burma, for improvements in the construction of steam boilers, and of furnaces in connection therewith, for the more profitable combustion of refuse combustible matters as fuel. Mr. J. C. Allen, of Cachar, India, tea planter, for improvements in drying tea and in apparatus employed therein. Mr. J. F. Baness, of the Indian Survey Department, residing at No. 37, Park-street, Calcutta, for a new khus-khus or grass tattie and chique, with feed arrangements for cooling houses, rooms, railway carriages, &c. Mr. F. W. Birch, of Mayfield, Mussoorie, for the cure of hydrophobia. Mr. J. Wright, of Tipton, in the County of Stafford and Kingdom of England, for improvements applicable to steam-engines for heating and purifying water, and heating and cooling air or other fluids, and for condensing exhaust steam. Messrs. N. Yagu and L. Survillo, both of Moscow, Russia, for improvements in the method of measuring heights by means of a new apparatus. Mr. J. Hinks, of Birmingham, in the County of Warwick and Kingdom of England, manufacturer, for improvements in lamps.

DEPUTATION TO THE SECRETARY OF STATE FOR INDIA.—A deputation of merchants and others interested in the province of Assam, waited upon Viscount Cranbrook on Wednesday in order to urge upon him the importance of improving the means of communication between Calcutta and Assam, in order to remove the difficulty of obtaining cheap labour from Bengal to the Assam tea plantations, and also of continuing the topographical survey of the hills bounding Assam and the Mishmi country, with the view of determining whether a trade route between Assam and the Western province of China might not be ultimately established. Mr. Forster, M.P., introduced the deputation, and Sir Rutherford Alcock and other gentlemen explained its objects. Sir Rutherford represented that in no province which had been so long in our possession had so little been done to improve the means of communication. It was also urged that, if an ample supply of labour could be procured, enormous tracts of fertile country, with a large and almost unvarying yearly rainfall, might be made available for supplying rice and other cereals to other districts of India more liable to drought and its accompaniment, famine. Lord Cranbrook said the objects of the deputation seemed very reasonable, and he would communicate them by the next mail to the Government of India. He was impressed with the importance of the exploration on the north-east frontier being continued, and he showed by a reference to recent despatches that it was contemplated that the work of the exploring party should go on for at least three years more. The deputation, having thanked his lordship, withdrew.

PUBLIC ACCOUNTS.—A Blue-book has been printed containing the second report of the Committee of Public Accounts. Among other matters the report refers to War-office charges on account of India, and the Committee express their satisfaction in being able to report that the proposals of the Treasury in respect to the home-charges, which have remained unadjusted for more than eight years, have been accepted by the Secretary of State for War and the Secretary of State for India in Council. The Treasury Minute explaining the nature of these proposals had been laid before the Committee, and is printed as an appendix. The minute refers to a memorandum drawn up in December, 1877, by the Financial Secretary of the Treasury, and also to a memorandum prepared about the same time explaining the views of the India-office, and it indicates that both of these memoranda point to the same solution of the difficulty as regards the past—viz., that past accounts should be adjusted on the basis of actual payments. In other words, that the sum paid in past years into the Imperial exchequer should be taken in full discharge of the claims of the Imperial upon the Indian Government in respect of the effective charges paid in England on account of her Majesty's troops serving in India. A suggestion to adopt this basis of settlement was made by Sir H. Selwin-Ibbetson to the Secretary of State for India in Council, and the Secretary of State laid the suggestion before his Finance Committee, which passed the following minute:—"On the understanding that the proposition of Sir H. Selwin-Ibbetson is that the advances made on account of the effective services of her Majesty's Regiments on the East India Establishment, in each year, from 1870-71 to 1877-78, and the estimated sum of £530,000 for the year 1878-79 will be accepted by the Treasury in full discharge of all claims of the War Office on that account up to the 31st of March, 1879, the Finance Committee recommend that the proposition be adopted." The Treasury accepted this proposition, subject to the following modifications—viz., that the cost of stores, arms, accoutrements, clothing, and the charges for officers and non-commissioned officers of the Royal Engineers should be still settled in actual bills.

India in Parliament.

HOUSE OF COMMONS, TUESDAY, July 30.—THE PAYMENT OF INDIAN TROOPS.—Sir G. BALFOUR asked the Chancellor of the Exchequer to state the arrangements for paying the troops from India, as respected the coins and rate of conversion used for the issue of those coins in lieu of the rupee coin; and whether the same rate of conversion was in force for officers as for soldiers; and, if not, what rates were used for those two grades, and on what ground a distinction was made between the soldier and his officer.—The CHANCELLOR of the EXCHEQUER said the position he believed to be this—The troops sent from India to Malta received an advance of pay in rupees, but from the date of the expiration of that advance the payments at Malta were made in sterling, and it had been decided to pay the troops at the rate of 2s. for each rupee. As far as the officers were concerned, it was, as he understood, decided to pay them at the current rate of exchange, which was about 1s. 9d. for each rupee.—Sir G. BALFOUR gave notice that on an early day he should call attention to the question.

THE INDIAN FAMINE.—Mr. FAWCETT asked the Under-Secretary of State for India when the papers relating to the statistics of mortality caused by the recent famine in Madras and Bombay would be in the hands of members; and whether, considering that the mortality in the North-West as recently as April last is said to have exceeded by 100 per cent. its normal rate, the papers would include statistics on that subject.—Mr. E. STANHOPE: I am much obliged to the hon. member for giving me an opportunity of stating what really happened with regard to this matter. In accordance with the pledge which I had given to this House, I laid these papers upon the table the moment that they arrived, and on the very day on which he spoke my noble friend had also moved for them in the House of Lords. I have seen the proofs of a great part of the return and hope that it will not be long before it is distributed; but we are very anxious not to leave out any facts which throw light upon the subject. At the best, however, the return must give a very imperfect account. As regards the mortality in the North-West, we have just received a despatch from India in which there are two paragraphs referring to this subject. They shall be added to the other papers.

HOUSE OF COMMONS, THURSDAY, Aug. 1.—THE FAMINE IN KASHMIR.—Mr. E. STANHOPE, in reply to Mr. RALLI, said the Government had not yet received any official information as to the extent and causes of the famine stated to be now existing in Kashmir.

THE INDIAN BUDGET.—In reply to Mr. BRIGGS, the CHANCELLOR of the EXCHEQUER said he could not yet fix the date for the Indian budget. On Monday it was proposed to proceed with the Education votes and on Tuesday with the supplementary estimates, the statement respecting which he should make on Tuesday.

SUICIDE IN INDIA.

At a meeting of the Bengal Social Science Association a paper was read by Dr. K. McLeod on "the Causes and Statistics of Suicide in India." His general conclusions are:—

1. That the rates of suicidal deaths vary greatly in different presidencies and provinces. They are shown to be as follows:—Punjab 12.7 per million of population, Bengal 31.3; N.W. Provinces 43.2; Bombay 49.0; Oudh 51.4; Madras 55.6; Central Provinces 70.5; the rate in England and Wales being 66.2.

2. That whatever the rate of any province or presidency, whether high or low, in any year, or on the average it was closely maintained and repeated in the series.

3. That in every province or presidency, certain districts indicated high rates, and other districts low rates; and that these high or low rates were maintained and repeated from year to year. Five districts exhibiting abnormally high rates were tabulated in each case. In Bengal the districts of Pooree, Cuttack, Nuddea, Patna, and Gya, were found to record the highest rates—namely, 100.7, 85.2, 71, 56.7, and 49.5.

4. That towns give higher suicidal rates than district areas. Thus the rate of London is 82.8, against 66.2 for all England; of Calcutta 77.6, against 31.3 for the province (probably an under estimate); and the town of Madras 91.0, against 65.6 for the presidency; and the town of Bombay 90.1 against 49.0 for the presidency. Smaller towns were found to give similar results as compared with rural areas.

5. That throughout India the number of suicidal deaths is higher among females than among males, the reverse being the case in England. The proportion in England being 100 male suicides to 33.2 females; the mean proportion in India was about 100 males to 150 females. The result is contrary to all experience of vital statistics in India, which show a universal tendency to understate facts as affecting females. The truth of the result is strengthened by this consideration, and further confirmed by the fact that localities which give habitually high rates of suicide also render higher proportions of female suicides.

Among physical causes, season was shown to possess a marked influence, the majority of suicides occurring in the hot weather. Famine and physical suffering caused by disease are frequent determinants to self-destruction, more especially painful conditions of the abdominal viscera caused by bad food, worms, &c.

WHITE'S MOC-MAIN LEVER TRUSS, Perfected and Exhibited in the Great Exhibition of 1861, is allowed by upwards of 500 Medical Gentlemen to be the most effective invention in the curative treatment of Hernia. The use of a steel spring, so often hurtful in its effects, is here avoided ; a soft bandage being worn round the body, while the requisite resisting power is supplied by the MOC-MAIN PAD and PATENT LEVER, fitting with so much ease and closeness that it cannot be detected, and may be worn during sleep. A descriptive circular may be had, and the Truss (which cannot fail to fit) forwarded by post on the circumference of the body two inches below the hips being sent to the Manufacturer.

NOTES ON MUHAMMADANISM.

REV. T. P. HUGHES, M.R.A.S.,

C. M. S., Missionary to the Afghans, Peshawar.

Opinions of the Press on the First Edition.

"Altogether an admirable little book. It combines two excellent qualities, abundance of facts and lack of theories. . . . On every one of the numerous heads (over fifty) into which the book is divided Mr. Hughes furnishes a large amount of very valuable information, which it would be exceedingly difficult to collect from even a large library of works on the subject. The book might well be called a 'Dictionary of Muhammadan Theology,' for we know of no English work which combines a methodical arrangement (and consequently facility of reference), with fullness of information in so high a degree as the little volume before us."—The Aca- demy.

"It contains multum in parvo, and is about the best outlines of the tenets of the Muslim faith which we have seen. It has, moreover, the rare merit of being accurate ; and although it contains a few passages which we would gladly see expunged, it cannot fail to be useful to all Government employes who have to deal with Muhammadans, whilst to Missionaries it will be invaluable."—The Times of India.

"This small book is the most luminous, most convenient, and, we think, the most accurate, outline of the tenets and practices of Islamism that we have met with.
It seems exactly the sort of comprehensive and trustworthy book in small compass, on this subject, that we
and many more have often looked for in vain. . . .
The author has evidently studied his subject in a faithful, laborious, and scholarly manner, and has not only studied but mastered it. The work is of great value for general students, and for men whose work lies among the Mussulman population, such as Civil Servants and Missionaries, it seems to be the very work that is wanted."—The Friend of India.

"In brief compass it contains a large amount of reliable information. Instead of theories and fancies, facts are placed before us. Muhammadanism is represented as it really is, not as it is supposed that it might possibly be. Instead of retailing the speculations current in literary society at home, Mr. Hughes furnishes us with brief but incisive statements, which, so far as they go, leave nothing to be desired."—The Church Mis- sionary Intelligencer.

PYRETIC SALINE.

USE NO SUBSTITUTE.—See perpetual injunction against imitators; also the unanimous judgment before the Lords Justices Bramwell, Brett, and Cotton, Jan. 22, 1878, in H. Lamplough's favour.

Important to all, more especially English Ministers, British Consuls, and Europeans seeking to reside in safety in Tropical and Foreign Climates.

His Majesty's Representative, the Governor of Sierra Leone, in a letter of request for an additional supply of PYRETIC SALINE, states:—"It is of great value, and I shall rejoice to hear it is in the hands of all Europeans visiting the tropics."

SICKNESS, HEADACHE, and NAUSEA are in most cases immediately relieved by taking a teaspoonful in a tumbler of cold water. This can be repeated once or twice in two hours, if needful.

SEA VOYAGES.—It is a very valuable accompaniment, and should on no account be omitted. It instantly allays the sea or bilious sickness.

For BILIOUS CONSTITUTIONS, giving rise to vitiated secretions, Indigestion, and Eruptions on the Skin, a teaspoonful should be taken daily with the dinner in a tumbler of water, and the same quantity on going to bed. May be obtained of the Proprietor.

Summary and Review.

OUR latest advices by the Overland Mail are, from Bombay, July 19; Ailahabad and Madras, July 17; Calcutta, July 16.

THE fears entertained as to the condition of Puna, where, up to the 15th ult., only three inches of rain had fallen, are a thing of the past. The Times telegram of the 4th inst. contains the cheering information that the latest weather reports received at Simla are more encouraging. Sir Richard Temple announces that all anxiety concerning the Bombay Presidency may be dismissed. In Madras the number on relief works is decreasing, and the tendency of prices is downwards. Rain there has been—moderate but general. Relief operations are being closed in Mysor. In the North-West the numbers in receipt of relief increased by 10,000 during the late cessation of rain, but within the last few days there has been a fair general rainfall, Agra and Roy Bareilly having now received their long overdue instalments. The Lieutenant-Governor has telegraphed to Simla that if the favourable weather which has set in continues for some time longer all fears regarding famine will be at rest.

ADVICES from all districts of the North-West and Oudh provinces up to July 10 conveyed the good news of abundance of rain for the Kharif sowing, the Bombay news reporting good rainfall from all parts, except Indapore, where the Kharif crop is entirely spoilt. Relief works had been opened for several thousand people. In other parts the price of grain was steadily falling. In Northern and Eastern Bengal the rain fall had been excessive, and floods were threatening injury to the crops; excessive rain-fall was also reported from Colombo. In Assam the floods are described as exceptional. In Mysor locusts have caused immense damage to the young crops, but the energetic efforts to exterminate them had been fully successful, 43,836,975 have been destroyed in the Mysor District, at a cost of Rs. 3,246, at the rate of four annas a koodoo, or one pie for 75 locusts. The largest number was got rid of in Yedatore taluk, where 14,918,400 were destroyed, and in Mysor 11,248,175. In Goa fears are entertained that these insects may repeat the devastations of last year. The Indian Daily News points out that according to the normal rule, Madras looks to the later North-East Monsoon for the annual supply of water; Mysor, on the contrary, enjoys a good share of the South-West Monsoon, and has a good prospect of being safe for this year and the next.

ACCORDING to the official report from the North-West Provinces, July 10, a considerable amount of rain had fallen in northern tracts, excessive in some. The fall has been pretty general all over the Punjab; between Jhelum and Lahor the country has been flooded and the mails delayed. The kharif prospects are described by a Rawal Pindi correspondent as excellent, but no sensible falling off in grain prices had taken place up to July 7. Advices from Multan, dated 9th July, state that the Indus Valley line had been cut by the floods. Between Mirpur and Ghotkee at that date the water was only nine inches below the top of embankment, and still rising.

THE following is the report of the season and prospects of the crops for the week ending 9th July:—In Madras more or less rain is reported from all districts except Tinnevely; it has, however, generally been light in the Southern districts on the East Coast; there has been good rain in South Canara, but not much in Malabar; prospects are reported to be “slightly improved in some districts.” The total number on works is 139,798, and gratuitously relieved 75,814, more by 2,177 and 1,684 than last week respectively. In Mysor good rain has fallen in Bangalor, Kalar, Tumkur, Mysor and Shimoga, and light showers elsewhere: more is required in Hassen and Kadur; the crops are in good condition, and prospects are favourable; the total number on relief works for the week ending the 29th ultimo was 37,244, and gratuitously relieved 12,231, more by 114 and 172 than in the previous week. In Bombay very heavy rain has fallen in the Konkan, and good general rain throughout Guzerat, Kattywar, Kanara, and Khandeish; fair rain has fallen all over the Deccan and the Southern Mahratta country, except in parts of Ahmednagar, Poona, Satara, and Belgaum; some rain is also reported from Sind, where the river continues high. In the Central Provinces there has been general rain, but more is wanted in Bilaspur, Sambulpur, and Jubbulpore; sowings are being pushed on. In Berar good rain has fallen, and prospects are favourable. In Central India general rain appears to have fallen, and prospects are good. In Rajputana also the monsoon has set in, and except in Marwar, where rain is wanted, prospects seem to be favourable. In Bengal heavy rain has fallen in the Northern districts, and good rain elsewhere; more is wanted in Balasore, Saran, and a few other districts. In Assam there has been general rain, and prospects are good. In Burma the fall, though generally fair, appears to have been light in some of the inland districts. In the North-Western Provinces and Oudh there has now been general rain, which was very heavy in Rohilkhand; prospects are good. In the Punjab very heavy rain has fallen at Delhi, and good rain elsewhere, except at Peshawar; prospects are favourable throughout the Province. The meteorological summary of July 12 adds that the monsoon has consequently made its final advance during the past week, and is now established over the whole of India. The final advance was marked by excessive rainfall in the western districts of the North-Western Provinces and adjacent districts of the Punjab. A table of average rainfall from July 1 to 11, with a maximum at Bombay of 24·30, and a minimum of no rain at Peshawar, the only exception, shows that rainfall quite up to the average has fallen over the whole of India, except in Southern Bengal, at Allahabad, Lucknow, Jubbulpore, and probably the neighbouring districts. Heavy rainfall was registered on July 12 in Southern Bengal. The amount at Chittagong was 7·5 inches, and at Dacca 6·5 inches. The monsoon has consequently up to the present date given fair rainfall almost without exception to the whole of India.

INTELLIGENCE has reached India that Sirdar Abdulla Jan, the Heir Apparent to the Throne of Kabul, is seriously ill. The Times of India considers the news as important if true.

THE Times' telegram of the 4th inst. states that, as has already been briefly mentioned, a Gazette of India Extraordinary has been published, containing notifications ordering a reduction of the Salt Duties in the Bengal Presidency by 4 annas a maund, thus fixing the duty at a uniform rate throughout the greater part of British India of 2 rupees 8 annas per maund. The Government Resolution states that for many years past the Government have been anxious to equalise the burden of the salt taxation throughout India. The rate of duty on salt has always been higher, and until the beginning of this year very much higher, in Bengal than in either Madras or Bombay. In April, 1861, the salt duty in the Lower Provinces of Bengal stood at 3 rupees 4 annas per maund, and in the Upper Provinces at 3 rupees per maund, but in Madras and Bombay at only 1 rupee 4 annas per maund. In the Northern Provinces, moreover, the cost of salt was further enhanced by their greater distance from the sources of supply, the result of all this being that the price of salt in those parts was much higher than elsewhere. The financial exigencies of the State did not, however, permit of a loss of any portion of revenue derivable from salt duties, and it became obvious that the only practicable way of reducing the excessive prices in Northern India was to equalise the duties throughout the whole country, there being no justification in principle for establishing different rates of duty in different parts. In the five years ending 1877-8 the average annual quantity of salt taxed in British India was about 240 lakhs of maunds, and the average annual duty about six crores of rupees, giving an average rate of taxation of 2 rupees 8 annas per maund. As the object of the Government was not to increase the total revenue from salt duty, but only to maintain the amount which had been previously realised, a rate of 2 rupees 8 annas per maund was taken for general adoption. The duties in Madras and Bombay have accordingly been gradually raised until, in December last, they were fixed at 2 rupees 8 annas per maund, the duty in Bengal being at the same time reduced in the Lower Provinces to 3 rupees 2 annas, and in the Upper Provinces to 2 rupees 12 annas per maund. As announced in a financial statement of the present year, the Government have been in negotiation with the Native States of Rajpootana and Central India with a view to the adoption of a measure which would admit of the abolition of the Inland Customs' line, the maintenance of which had been necessary to prevent the salt produced in those States from passing untaxed into Northern India, and to secure the full rate of duty on the imports of the less highly taxed salt of the South. These negotiations have now been brought to a close, and the Customs' line will shortly be abolished. The measure of equalisation fixed at 2 rupees 8 annas per maund may be regarded as a final financial limit, the dues in British India not admitting of any lower general rate.

THE Chief Commissioner of Assam, Sir Stewart Bailey and Staff, arrived at Dhubri on July 12th from Darjeeling via Rungpore. The roads had been much injured, owing to the exceptional floods, but the journey was accomplished in fifty-four hours.

IN the Railway Fraud case, the trial of which had concluded at Sholapore, the Judge acquitted Mr. Bedford and the other accused, and found that the principal witness had perjured himself, that the other evidence was untrustworthy, and obtained while the witnesses were under police surveillance, and that the books in the possession of the police had been tampered with.

MAJOR SANDEMAN left Simla for Khelat on the 16th ult. He will, before long, undertake a journey through the heart of Beloochistan to Mekran, on the Persian border, returning probably by the sea coast to Kurrachee, as the country to be visited is almost a terra ignota. Major Sandeman will, no doubt, be accompanied by a small escort, but his safety is tolerably well assured without one.

THE following Resolution of the Government of India has been published:—"The Governor-General in Council directs that, in the case of a State Railway, whether Imperial or Provincial, the control of which is vested in a local Government or Administration, serious accidents occurring on an open line shall be inquired into by an officer appointed, or approved, for that purpose, by the Government of India. Such officer will enter upon all needful investigations on receiving information from the Manager or Officer in charge of the Railway, whose duty it is to give the promptest advice of such accidents. And the report of the results of such investigation will be submitted to the local Government or Administration controlling the Railway concerned, by whom it should be forwarded without delay for the information of the Government of India, together with a copy of the orders passed upon it."

A DARBAR had recently been held at Hyderabad, for the purpose of presenting to H.H. the Nizam, for ultimate delivery to the grandmother of his Highness, the very handsome insignia of the Crown of India, which the Empress of India had specially conferred on this lady, the Dilawar-ul-nissa Begum. The patent of the Order had been sent some time ago, and the insignia were given on this occasion. The Resident, in presenting the insignia to the young Nizam, in a few words expressed the great pleasure he felt in being made the medium of conveying this gracious mark of the friendship of the Empress towards his Highness's family. H.H. [the Nizam] begged that his thanks might be conveyed to the Viceroy and through his Excellency to the Empress of India, and this ended the proceedings.

INTENDING passengers by the Egyptian Railway will welcome the following notice signed by Major General Marriott:—"The Egyptian Railway Administration, being willing to provide sleeping carriages in the trains conveying the Indian passengers, provided that there would be an adequate demand for them, has fitted a carriage in each train with sliding boards and spare cushions so as to make a bed of each pair of opposite seats. A double seat so fitted may be had for payment of ten shillings extra. Travellers desirous to have this accommodation are requested to give their names to the purser or head steward, who will send a list to the station-master, who will receive the payment at the station before starting. At present there are only twelve such sleeping seats available in each train. If the demand shall be found to exceed this number, more will be provided, and superior sleeping carriages will be built hereafter."

THE Anti-Vaccination Society will be delighted to found a new argument against preventing small-pox on the malpractices of an official vaccinator in Southern India, as narrated by a correspondent of the Cochin Argus. In Mayvelikkara the Vaccination Department is becoming a nuisance. If any passer by appears in the Vaccinator's eye to be a stranger to the place where he is, he goes up to him and threatens to vaccinate him without caring whether the poor man is on a journey or under a heavy load. As might naturally be expected, the man will entreat the Vaccinator to leave him unhurt. No sooner he shows signs of timidity, than he speaks more harshly to him, and asks him to pay him a few chuckrams at least. If the Vaccinator finds all his efforts ineffectual he makes an extraordinary operation on the man, so as to produce a good quantity of blood from his arms. It is to be hoped that the Chief of the Department will try to put a stop to such unbecoming practices on the part of his subordinates.

A REPORT by Mr. Robert Cross (well-known by his labours in the Chinchona Forests of South America), on the subject of india-rubber yielding plants, and their possible introduction into India, has recently been issued by the India Office. The Planters Gazette of the 31st ult. contains an interesting summary of the results of Mr. Cross's visit to Para, and his observations on the Para and Ceara rubber-trees, which are distinct plants. With regard to the introduction and propagation of the Para rubber-plant into India, the hottest parts and the low-lying, moist tracts, or land subject to inundations are recommended; deep, humid land suitable for cane and coffee planting is quite suited for the tree. The Malay peninsula, Burma, Ceylon, and Southern India are said to possess many suitable localities. The value of the Ceara rubber makes it desirable that it may be established in India. Mr. Cross suggests that in the districts of Madras, Cochin, Calicut, Cannanore, Mangalore, and Bombay, many localities possessing all the conditions essential for the growth of Ceara rubber may be found, and the plant might also be tried in the deep tropical valleys of Assam; indeed, in all the parched regions of India within the limits of coffee culture.

THE annual report on the revenue administration of British Burmah for 1876-77 has been before the Secretary of State in Council, and is, on the whole considered very satisfactory. The area of land under assessment was increased during the year by 104,056 acres, and the land revenue during the year exhibited, in comparison with that of the previous year, the following demands:—

1876-77	...	45,69,186

The remissions granted were Rs. 41,275 as against Rs. 1,95,555 in the preceding year. The net revenue of the two years is thus exhibited:—

thus showing an increase in the return of the latter of Rs. 2,70,011. The land under rice cultivation increased by 76,336 acres, while the assessment was enhanced by 66,563 rupees. Garden and orchard land, and land under miscellaneous cultivation, such as cotton, tobacco, sugarcane, &c., also showed an appreciable increase, as well as a satisfactory enhancement of assessment. There was an increase of revenue under the capitation tax of Rs. 39,206, as also a slight increase in the salt excise, which had been falling off. The excise on opium, drugs and liquor, with the duty on imported liquor, showed an increase of Rs. 2,54,334, and the stamp revenue an increase of Rs. 95,089. Marine receipts exhibited an increase of Rs. 11,883, chiefly derived from the collections on account of coast light dues consequent on the completion of the light-house on the Oyster Reef near Akyab. Passing to the less favourable features of the report, it appears that there was a considerable decrease of revenue under Customs, Forests and Fisheries. The decrease in customs was chiefly due to the diversion, on account of the famine, of rice cargoes to Indian ports, which cargoes were thus relieved of export duty. The decrease in forest revenue was caused chiefly by the diminished demand for timber on the part of the Railway and other public departments. In fisheries the decrease occurred partly on account of embankments, which produce a counterbalancing increase of land revenue, and partly from a falling off in the sums derived from licences on nets—a matter which is now under investigation. The total decrease under these three heads is stated to be Rs. 82,249, that is in comparison with the previous year's revenue. But this statement is not considered unsatisfactory, for had it not been for the decrease in Customs revenue the general revenue of the province would have shown a considerable increase on the returns of 1875-76, the most favourable year since Burmah became a British possession. On the whole the Secretary of State thinks it is clear that the province has continued to make a real progress in prosperity.

THE prompt rebuke of the Speaker may perhaps have made even the member for Carlisle ashamed of his unseemly language. Nevertheless it has gone forth that a Member of Parliament could, in a grave debate, describe the Indian Contingent as "all the savages and cut-throats of India." The inhabitants of Malta were at first nearly as ignorant and prejudiced, with regard to the native soldiers, as Sir W. Lawson, but personal experience, according to eye-witnesses, has convinced the Maltese of their error. They "were surprised to find the people, whom they had hitherto looked on as savage heathens, ready to eat their children, and murder them in cold blood, gentle and courteous as any body of men they had ever seen, and as respectfully considerate towards their religious prejudices as the most refined of their Continental neighbours." It will perhaps astonish the Pickwickian baronet to learn that one Madras Regiment alone, during their short stay at Malta, remitted Rs. 900 to their families at home. Some of "the savages," notably the Sappers and Miners, applied themselves to learn Italian, and of all the Indian soldiers the correspondent of the Pioneer heard many little anecdotes among the better classes of the Malta people, and all in their favour.

It has been formally announced by the Secretary for War that a few weeks at most will see the Indian Contingent on their homeward route. Two disappointments have been experienced by them, one we cannot regret, the want of an opportunity to show their prowess on behalf of the Queen Empress. According to one correspondent, life is to them as to the Scotch terrier "full of seriousness, for want of fighting." Another, namely, the lack of an opportunity to satisfy their loyal longing to behold the Queen, has found a partial solace in the presence of the Duke of Edinburgh. They have seen his Royal Highness unremittingly busy on the beach, superintending the landing arrangements from early morn to dewy eve, engaged "in exceptionally hard honest work," to quote the telegram of the able correspondent of the Daily News. They have also had an opportunity of seeing him and being honoured by his recognition when occupying a position of distinction proper to his Royal birth and dignity. On Tuesday last, being the Duke's birth-day, when the fleet dressel ships and fired a Royal salute, a parade of the troops at Larnaka, numbering about 3,000, was held in honour of his Royal Highness. The force consisted of a battery of artillery, a regiment of the Bombay Lancers, three white regiments, the native Sappers, the Goorkas, and the 9th Bombay Infantry. General Ross acted as divisional general. The Duke was received with a Royal salute and drooped colours, and the troops marched past. Afterwards the native officers were presented seriatim to his Royal Highness, who touched their swords.

THE announcement in the Athenæum of August 3rd that Mr. C. T. Newton proposes to commence excavations in Cyprus as soon as possible was at least premature. The Times of the same date contained a letter from Mr. Newton, in which he says:—"I think it right to state that I have submitted no such proposal to the Trustees of the British Museum; and, further, that it would not, in my opinion, be expedient to entertain any such scheme of exploration at present." In the meantime, the numerous memorials of his varied history, on which the sun of Cyprus still shines, will soon be faithfully represented to stay-at-home travellers, as Mr. Stephen Thompson, whose well-known photographs of Italian tombs and his series of British Museum photographs have proved him especially fitted for photographing antiquities, will shortly leave England for Cyprus, being especially commissioned by her Majesty the Queen to obtain a series of views of the island for her inspection. Mr. Thompson may extend his travels into Turkey in Asia if the season is favourable for his work.

THE most immediately interesting question as to the salubrity of Cyprus still awaits solution. On the one hand, we hear of fever breaking out, of danger threatening the health of soldiers and sailors alike. On the other, save for certain few, but lamentable, cases of heat-apoplexy, we are assured that the health of the garrison is generally as good as could reasonably be expected. The host of difficulties attendant on the settlement of a numerous garrison, and the transfer of authority, are disappearing before the orderly energy of the High Commissioner. The new department of the Foreign Office, presided over by Mr. Philip Currie, will not find an overwhelming burden of administration laid upon them. As to the details of the government, the six districts into which the island is already divided are to be placed under Civil Commissioners, five of whom have been already named, viz., Brigadier-General Watson, for Larnaka; Brigadier-General Macpherson, Limasol; Captain Swain, Famagousta; Lieutenant Holbech, Kyrenia; Lieutenant Wauchope, Baffa. Under each a subordinate officer will take charge of the police. The instructions issued provide for the maintenance of the existing tribunals, without interference, save when required to repress wrong or enforce right and justice. They will report at as early a date as may be on all the subjects which affect the well being, character, occupations, and creed of the inhabitants. We cannot but think that useful auxiliaries would be found in the Indian Forest Department, as the Commissioners will have quite enough to do to complete the information of which the mouthpieces of the Government have declared themselves to be sadly in want. The restoration of the forests and the drainage of the swamped plains should be at once taken in hand, with a view not only to the ultimate prosperity, but the salubrity of our new possession.

Nascitur non fit expresses a distinct idiosyncrasy. The opinions of poets on matters of fact are not always to be trusted; and it would, no doubt, be hazardous to commission an officer of highly imaginative mind to report on harbour works or barrack accommodation. Thomas Moore informs us that though the initiated is aware, to his cost, that the said Selama is one of two most barren of barren islands, called by our sailors the Great and Little Quoin, and belonging to the group described in the chart as "Sellámeh wa binát-ha." If anything can vie with Sellámeh in dreariness, it is the neighbouring coast representing "the shores of Araby"—the quaint, irregular figure terminated by Cape Masandam—whence, indeed, comes no smell of spice or fragrance or aught whatever worthy of record. And now that the question of Cyprus and its harbours is under consideration, we look for enlightenment to a plain, practical consul rather than to a poet; although the latter may have attained eminence in statesmanship, historiography, and romantic prose literature. Mr. Hamilton Lang's experiences of the newly-acquired island, given in the August number of Macmillan, will attract more attention than the brief notice of Alphonse de Lamartine; not because they are nearly half a century later, but because they are more to the point. At the same time, we should like to put implicit faith in the enthusiastic Frenchman when he writes in his diary of the 30th April, 1839:—"Vu le Mont Olympe, et Paphos, et Amathonte; ravissant aspect des côtes et des Montagnes de Cypre de ce côté; cette île serait la plus belle colonie de l'Asie Mineure; elle n'a plus que trente mille âmes, elle nourrirait et enrichirait des millions d'hommes; par-tout cultivable, par-tout féconde, boisée, arrosée, avec des rades et des ports naturels sur tous ses flancs; placée entre la Syrie, la Caramanie, l'Archipel, l'Égypte et les côtes de l'Europe; ce serait le jardin du monde." The italics are not in the original.

"Fresh smell the shores of Araby,
While breezes from the Indian sea Blow round Selama's sainted cape;"

Odds and Ends.

IN our issue of July 27 an extract from an Indian contemporary described Mr. Cowell as Boden Professor of Sanscrit, Oxford, an accidental usurpation of the style and title of Professor Monier Williams, which we willingly correct at his request.

GAMES in India seem decidedly provocative of quarrels. Witness the Naini Tal polo quarrel. Now we read in the Times of India that at Ooty, the other day, a tournament at lawn-tennis terminated in a tournament at arms. The contending knights are said by the local paper to be well known on the hills. The intervention of a constable, who endeavoured to separate the combatants, resulted in rather rough handling for himself. Both knights bear unmistakable evidence of the contest.

THE SANITARY CONDITION OF BOMBAY.—The following has been communicated to the Times of India for publication:—The Army Sanitary Commission have issued a memorandum on the Report of the Bombay Municipality for 1876. In this they remark that although Bombay obtains its water supply from an excellent and pure source in the Vihar Lake, yet, for want of a proper system of drainage, the water frequently becomes contaminated by the influx of sewage and subsoil water; the institution of "dipping wells" is also considered to be injudicious, on the ground that, however pure the Vihar water may be on its entrance into the well, it becomes exposed to the risk of sewage infiltration, and to filth from unclean dipping vessels, besides atmospheric impurities, and it is considered it would be safer to use hydrants, which are now constructed to avoid waste of water. With regard to conservancy, although the surface of the city is scraped and brushed to a degree probably unknown in any other city in India, and the removal of dry garbage may be said to be complete, at a cost to the ratepayers of about £21,000 per annum, yet there is a great amount of solid and fluid matter which sinks into the subsoil or evaporates into the air. The Commission therefore most strongly urge the provision of a complete system of well-built water-tight sewers and drains for Bombay, in the place of the present rudely constructed drains which are always getting choked and require breaking open for cleaning purposes. Every drain should, at its head or highest point, be connected with a flushing tank, where a body of water can be liberated to dilute and sweep down any accumulated sediment. It is considered that by the formation of such a system upon a proper scale, although the expense at the outset might be considerable yet the annual outlay of some £29,000 spent in breaking up roads, clearing drains, which if properly constructed never would require hand cleansing, and doing by hand labour of halalkhores what ought to be done by the law of gravitation, would be saved, or, at all events, spent to a better purpose. The Secretary of State for India in a letter to the Governor of Bombay points out the need for urgency in this matter, and the great importance that the system of drainage determined upon should be the one best calculated to ensure the removal of the serious elements of disease and death now prevailing in the City of Bombay.

THE RETURN OF THE INDIAN TROOPS.

THE difficulties suggested in the Debates of this week as to the possibility of maintaining a permanent garrison of Indian troops in Cyprus have been quickly solved. We are, however, rather puzzled to reconcile the statements of Colonel Stanley as to the speedy departure of the troops with the information forwarded from Malta and Cyprus as to the defective state of the food supplies on board the transports. The Times' correspondent only ten days ago declared it to be certain that inquiries had been made by head-quarters as to the amount of ships' rations in store, and as to other matters connected with the transportation of a native force to India, that the quantity of available ships' rations was most inconsiderable; that were troops now embarked hence for India they would fall in with the monsoon, which would necessitate the close battenning down of the ships, and would preclude the possibility of horses being carried; and that there was no place nearer than Bombay from which to procure the peculiar food which forms the rations on board ship of Indian regiments, and which has that strange sanctity for the native soldier that he would rather die of starvation than eat any other.

We have heard no contradiction or explanation of these averments made by an unquestionably good authority; on the contrary, besides the official statements, another correspondent telegraphs that one or more regiments would start in a few days. We venture to hope that greater care has been exercised as to the Commissariat arrangements for the voyage to Bombay than was shown in the exquisite combination of carts and tent pegs intended for use in Cyprus. Statements appeared in the Indian papers describing not only inconvenience but absolute privation, cheerfully endured on the voyage out, when hopes of acquiring distinction in the field and eager curiosity kept up the spirits of the sepoys. But if on the return voyage, to the necessary discomforts of rough weather, there be superadded irremediable hardships, arising out of commissaries' blunders, even the pleasure of returning home will hardly cause the bad impression to be effaced. Among the numerous questions asked in the House of Commons no one seems to have thought of an inquiry as to the truth of the alleged mistakes on the outward or want of proper supplies for the homeward voyage. There seems, indeed, to have prevailed on both sides an earnest desire to get the poor sepoys back again with the utmost haste. The voices of the Opposition loudly expressed what the Times and Mr. Punch fully concur in, viz., a sincere hope that no Indian troops may ever show their faces again on ultra-Indian British soil.

The Minister of War hastened to assure the querists of the House of Commons that there was not, nor had ever been, any purpose of maintaining a permanent garrison of Indian troops in Cyprus. There are doubtless great difficulties attendant on such use of any part of our Indian Army. We concur, however, with the views expressed by General Vaughan, who says in his clear and concise pamphlet on the "Military Occupation of Cyprus"—"As regards any possible difficulties which may arise in connection with the call made upon our Indian troops, I have no hesitation in saying that they only require a little forethought to be disposed of in a perfectly satisfactory way; and then that the permanent employment of Indian troops in European waters will be followed by great and solid advantages." Meanwhile, we ask that the most careful forethought be applied to the preparations for the return of the Indian Contingent. They volunteered loyally, they have earned golden opinions by their behaviour; let not the tales they have to tell of the great fleet of England, of the strange countries where her flag flies, which are still so far from the home of the Empress, of England's greatness, and their own pride in sharing in it, have, as a finale, disappointment and neglect. For there may come an occasion for making such a call again; and, irrespective of an extreme emergency arising, is it an abandoned policy, or one which has never been more than a dream, to constitute the outposts of India in the Mediterranean? It is true that at present Cyprus, no more than Malta, can be looked upon as a base for operations in the north of Asia Minor. But we are confident that no long time will pass before the establishment of the needful interior lines of communication in Asia Minor. The critics who have sneered at the utility of Cyprus as a military post seem to make no allowance for the rapid development of railways. Even with regard to the Suez Canal, it has been overlooked that so long ago as 1859 Cyprus was regarded as a desirable acquisition by the late Emperor Louis Napoleon. The elaborate memoir on the geology of Cyprus read before the Geological Society of France in that year by M. Gaudry states that the author had spent three years in the island in obedience to an Imperial commission, directing him to study the agricultural capabilities of the island. The scheme of the Emperor, or of his councillors, whatever it may have been, has left no record, save the valuable work of M. Gaudry. Instead of the Zouaves of Africa, the combined forces of India and Great Britain have superseded the Turkish garrison of Larnaka. But the idea of the importance of the position for the European Power that would dominate the transit from the Mediterranean to the Red Sea, or the shorter access to Mesopotamia, is the same, whether hidden in the Imperial archives, or realised by the foresight of England's Premier.

We have asserted our right and our purpose of controlling the Suez Canal, and have doubled our power of doing so by the occupation of Cyprus. In this the returning Indian contingent have played their part. When the construction of the alternative route, with its superior advantages of expedition, shall have been completed, we dare hazard a prophecy that the warders of the new avenue to Western India will be drawn from the same ranks that furnished the first occupying force of its future outpost. It may well be that some of those very men who had toiled to construct the temporary landing-places, who have been reviewed by the Queen's son, in sight of the mouldering ramparts of Larnaka, will return to Cyprus. They will find, indeed, a new Cyprus, no longer a scene of decay, a country of ruin, where the pestilence lurks in the debris of former greatness, or in the marshes, which once were fertile plains. They will find that the military occupation, which they helped to inaugurate, was proposed to maintain peace and foster the regeneration of the occupied territory, and in this bloodless victory they will rejoice to have had their share; and we hope that they or their successors in the same ranks will, with the same readiness, revisit the scene of its accomplishment, and become the guardians of its new prosperity.

SALT.

TO THE EDITOR OF "ALLEN'S INDIAN MAIL."

SIR,—The telegram from Calcutta to the Times dated the 4th inst. contained information regarding the salt duties involving a principle of the most important character, viz., the equalisation of the salt duties, by the imposition of a general duty of Rs. 2.8.0 per maund.

On no subject has so profound an ignorance been displayed by the soi-disant leaders of Indian opinion as on the subject of these salt duties. We find men like Sir George Balfour and Sir George Campbell in the same boat with Lord Lawrence, denouncing any increase of the salt duties, and declaring that those duties are fraught with tyranny and bring ruin to the peasants of India.

Now what are the facts? I have for a series of years paid on the spot the strictest attention to the Salt question. I have interrogated the peasants in their homesteads all over India, and have examined the details of their expenditure. And what have I found? Simply this, that the salt tax is not felt; that its incidence is so light that were it doubled it would still not be felt. The truth of this conclusion can easily be tested.

In a large European household establishment in Calcutta or Madras the butler usually contracts at the rate of eight annas (one shilling) for the month's supply of salt. Out of this he makes a large profit, and probably supplies himself and his fellow-servants. But, leaving out of consideration his profits, he contracts to supply salt at about the rate of one anna per mensem for each person. This would make the year's charge per head to be twelve annas for a European; the native, for his part, buying salt of a coarser character, and buying it for himself, for his own use, and not for profit, would certainly not spend more than eight annas per head per annum, inclusive of the duty. His month's expenditure per head would be the Indian equivalent of one penny. How is it possible, then, that on a consumption so small he can feel the increased duty? It is impossible. But it will be said, "he has a wife, and four children, and a father and mother to support." Granted. Supposing that the four children equal in their consumption of salt two grown up men, what then? His expenditure for salt mounts at the outside to sixpence a month, including the duty. Probably it is very much less. Whether the duty stands at R. 2 or R. 3 per maund can only affect him infinitesimally. In round numbers a maund is 160 lbs., or 2,560 ounces. At the exchange of two shillings, and at the rate of two rupees eight annas duty per maund, the duty per ounce of salt is '0023 of a penny; the duty per pound '037 of a penny. How is it possible that an incidence so slight can affect the peasantry?

Practically the salt duty is not felt in India, and for purposes of revenue it might be raised with advantage.

I enclose my card, and remain,—Your obedient servant,
London, August 7, 1878. CATO.

TO THE EDITOR OF "ALLEN'S INDIAN MAIL."

SIR,—When the House of Commons, in 1823, passed the abolition of the iniquitous salt-tax in England, at fifteen shillings a bushel, the tax was thirty times the cost of the salt. If an honest inquiry should be made into the prices of salt in the Kuddapah district, Madras Presidency, I think that it will be found that the poor in that district have now to pay thirty times as much for their salt as they used to pay previous to the publication of the Government Order of the 28th of July, 1873. Mr. Gribble, in page 228 of his manual for the district of Kuddapah, 1875, stated that the manufacture of untaxed earth salt was by no means a profitable one, since the salt is sold at a very low price.

In the year 1823 the English finances were not in a very flourishing condition, and the salt-tax produced nearly one and a-half million sterling a year; but such widespread mischief and wickedness was caused by the tax, that Parliament wisely abolished it altogether, instead of reducing it, for fear of any of our statesmen being tempted to raise so wicked a tax at a future time.

Oh, my countrymen, do not allow your idea, that Government knows better than you do, to cause you to be accomplices with those ignorant politicians who declare that if the natives of India do not consume sufficient salt it is their own fault; who declare that the natives ought to work harder to procure the means of buying dear salt for themselves and for their families. Read the opinions of Lord Hobart, late Governor of Madras, who urged that the later additions to the salt-tax had been breaking the poor man's back. Consumption of salt has been falling off terribly; and, full of abuses as the Government Customs Lines are, even for the sake of their abolition, we must not impose burdens which have the effect of spreading loathsome disease among our Indian subjects.

No time should be lost in asking Dr. Lyon Playfair or some other unprejudiced Member of Parliament to demand answers to three questions regarding the effects produced by the increased salt-tax.

1st. Previous to the 28th of July, 1873, what was the average price of duty-free earth salt in the Kuddapah district?

2nd. What is the present price of the cheapest kind of salt in the Kuddapah district?

3rdly. What has been the mortality in the same district during the past eighteen months, caused by diseases owing to want of salt in the blood and bile?—Your obedient servant,

ELEPHANTS AND ELEPHANT CATCHING.*

Among the numerous narratives of sporting adventure which have been written this volume will hold a prominent place, as the author has been able to give us the result of experiences gained in his official capacity at the Government Elephant-Catching Establishment, as well as his adventures as a sportsman. The author is thoroughly master of his subject, and possesses the further advantage of being able to tell his story so amusingly that his book will be read with pleasure not only by the eager sportsman, but also by the general reader.

Mysor abounds in game, and was known to the author as a sportsman before he undertook the duty of catching elephants for the Government. It was, indeed, at his suggestion that the Government instituted an Elephant-Catching Establishment in Mysor.

The Government establishment was at a village called Morlay, which is thus described:—

Such a place as Morlay for sport surely never existed, at least for diversity of game. Within a radius of half a mile of my bungalow elephants, tigers, panthers, bears, pigs, and spotted deer; and a little beyond bison, sambar, two kinds of antelope, and bustard are to be found; whilst good duck, pea-fowl, jungle-fowl, and snipe shooting are at my very door.

The author made good use of his rifle among these animals, and he gives us accounts of his experience in shooting them. This, though perhaps the most interesting part of the book, is not the only subject treated, for besides these accounts of sport, and the more serious descriptions of elephant-catching, he gives us much information respecting the customs of the jungle inhabitants and the condition of the country. The land round Morlay was much more densely inhabited and more cultivated in former times than at present, and the author's bungalow was constructed on the site of a deserted village, which ceased to exist fifty years ago. He tells us: "There are many such, thus deserted, of various degrees of antiquity further in the jungles." The inhabitants of Morlay are described as Oopligas, or salt-makers. They are a quiet, simple, inoffensive race, very superstitious, and apparently very loose in morals; but from their habits of hunting game of all kinds they made excellent assistants at elephant-catching. Elephants, as a rule, are found in herds of thirty to fifty, which are invariably led by a female. The solitary, or rogue, elephant is rarely met with, and then generally turns out to be an old male wandering about by himself on the outskirts of the herd. Like the donkeys in this country, a dead elephant is rarely found in the jungle, so much so that the jungle tribes believe that the elephant never dies.

The methods adopted to catch the elephant are, driving into kheddahs or enclosures; hunting with trained females; pit-falls, and noosing from trained elephants' backs. The kheddah plan is used for capturing whole herds, and was the one adopted at the Government Establishment in Mysor.

The surround is always made as extensive as possible, so as to enclose plenty of cover, fodder, and water inside. As soon as the elephants are thus surrounded, the kheddah or inner circle is constructed of stout uprights about twelve feet high, enclosing a circle of twenty to fifty yards in diameter, with a funnel-shaped entrance about four yards wide at its narrow extremity. The beasts are then driven into this inner snare by the wary hunters, and as soon as they are all impounded, tame elephants are introduced with a mahout and a rope tier on each.

"The duty of the tame elephant is to secure the wild ones by separating them one by one from their companions, when their hind legs are tied together by the men, who slip to the ground for the purpose. A rope is then secured round each captive's neck, and another to one hind-leg, and they are led out and picketed in the forest near until they have been sufficiently subjugated to be removed." Mr. Saunderson gives us a lively description of his experiences in capturing herds in Mysor and Bengal. The beasts are easily tamed, and in a few months, nay, weeks, after their capture they are made use of for riding. They are naturally timid, obedient and patient, but according to Mr. Saunderson their "sagacity is of a very mediocre description." On the other hand, they seem to enjoy good appetites, as 800 pounds of fodder is the least that can be placed before a full-sized elephant per diem. Some laughable anecdotes are recorded, more especially referring to solitary elephants, as, for instance, that which forms the subject of the frontispiece, and represents a stray elephant making a midnight visit to the camp of an elephant catching expedition in the hill tracts of Chittagong. Other anecdotes showing the docility and patience of tame elephants are also recorded. Mr. Saunderson considers the elephant as the king of animals in India, disputing the title either with the lion or tiger. Of course the elephant can lay claim to being the strongest brute in creation, and when he does attack he is quite resistless. Hence the excitement of elephant shooting. There is always the danger of being run over or gored by an infuriated animal, as in the narrow pass of the jungle there is not much chance of escape. But we must leave the reader to enjoy the descriptions of the hair-breadth escapes, dangers and fatigues connected with elephant shooting.

Among other wild beasts the tiger is probably the most dangerous; he certainly is the most destructive animal. It has been estimated that a cattle-killing tiger consumes about seventy horned cattle per annum, which, at £1 each, brings up the meat bill to £70. No wonder, then, that the tiger is hunted and killed by any available means. The cattle-killer is, however, not the most dreaded kind of tiger; there is the man-eater, a beast that stealthily finds its way into a village at night, and steals away with some unhappy sleeper, or waylays the lonely native in the jungle. As Mr. Saunderson says—

The terror inspired by a man-eater throughout the district ranged by him is extreme. The helpless people are defenceless against his attacks. Their occupations of cattle-grazing or wood-cutting take them into the jungles, where they feel that they go with their lives in their hands. A rustling leaf, or a squirrel or bird moving in the undergrowth, sets their hearts beating with a dread sense of danger. The only security they feel is in numbers. Though the bloodthirsty monster is perhaps reposing with the remains of his last victim miles away, the terror he inspires is always present to everyone throughout his domain.

We should like to linger longer among these anecdotes and sporting adventures, but space forbids. We cannot, however, say farewell to the book without our best commendation. It is interesting, amusing, and to the intending sportsman in India most useful. It is well written with the exception of a little repetition, and very prettily illustrated by phototints.

THE NORTH-WEST FRONTIER.*

To any one who desires a succinct and lucid account of the complicated relations of the North-West Frontier of India this book will prove a welcome auxiliary. The "Old Punjaabee" is free from a too common defect of Indian authors, namely, verbosity. While terse as a handbook, his account of the land of the Five Rivers and our conquest and settlement thereof is clear and readable. Our administration of the Punjab is not dealt with, save to remark that whereas a few years ago it was the model province, "it has suffered like all the rest of India, from over-legislation and over-government. There are other pungent criticisms on the present methods of administering the Indian empire, in which aversion to the new order is combined with the shrewdness of an experienced and observant official. The author must have rejoiced in the recent Press legislation, as he declares that "instead of instructing and elevating public opinion the vernacular Press is only concerned with raising disaffection among the people. Going out of British bounds the author will be found an admirable guide amongst the Pathan tribes from Huzarah to the Bilooch border, their habits, politics and powers, and the little wars which have been waged with them being briefly, but clearly, set forth, and illustrated by a sufficient map. Some of our readers may desire to have light thrown upon the chances of Cabulee politics; they will find after carefully reading this little work that the author will have dispelled some at least of the obscurity. Whether they agree or disagree with its comments on our past policy, they will certainly not regret having carefully perused this thoughtful and instructive volume.

A GLIMPSE AT THE WILDS OF WESTERN CHINA.*

Tali-fu is renowned as one of the strongholds of Western Yunnan. From the Western margin of its majestic lake rises a sloping plain of about three miles average breadth, closed in by the huge wall of the Tien-tsang mountains. In the midst of this plain stands the city, the lake at its feet, the snowy summits at its back." Such is the picturesque account given by Mr. Baber in his "Notes on the Road through Western Yunnan from Tali-fu to Teng-yueh or Momein." Tali-fu is better known as the capital of Sultan Suliman, the Mohammedan rebel chief, who despatched a mission to this country in 1871, under the leadership of his son Hassan, with a tribute of precious jade, from the Tali Mountains, as a token of the fealty of a humble native of the "Golden Teeth" country. The only outcome of this mission was to awaken the Chinese Government to the necessity of destroying the Yunnan Emperor. The story of the suppression of the rebellion is told in detail by Mr. Baber—and the terrible effects of the ruthless suppression were visible at the time of his visit in the ruined towns and desolate country. Tali-fu itself, the last stronghold of the Panthays, as the rebels were named, was captured by the Chinese General, who bore the appropriate name of "Hill-Echoing Thunder," with the aid of some guns cast by French workmen in Yunnan-fu. The usual massacre followed. General Thunder pointed out to Mr. Baber the swamps where a crowd of helpless fugitives had perished, and said that he did not think there could have been more than five hundred corpses, "or the water would have stunk more." An inn was also pointed out in which more than one thousand Muhammadans had been butchered in cold blood. It may be well to suppose that even the recuperative energy of Chinese traders has scarcely begun to restore the former prosperity of Tali-fu. However, peace is asserting its powers, and beginning to efface the tracks of war. Mr. Baber gives a lively picture of Tali-fu in full market, by way of contrast to the scene of carnage. The mode of conducting business at Tali-fu is peculiar. There is not a single large shop in the town, but about a mile outside one of the gates of the city a fair is held four times a year. It is largely frequented, and valuable wares are exposed with security. Amongst the motley crowd may be seen Lolos rubbing elbows with people from the Shan districts; Thibetans, the dirtiest race in a land of dirt, chaffering with sleek Cantonese, while Fakirs twirl their praying machines for the salvation of the pious at a price within the reach of all. Nor are the goods less varied than the people who resort to the fair to supply their wants for the coming quarter. The indigenous productions of the country are represented by silversmiths' work and jade work, but the greater part of the wares, as also of the traders, arrive from Canton; Thibet also sends a contribution, while articles of foreign stamp are represented by Manchester goods, Russian broadcloth, and manufactures bearing the commercial motto of Sweden. As in England the lower part of the fair is devoted to refreshment booths, surrounded by stalls supplied with petty household wares.

The streets are wide, and, for China, not unclean, but the houses are wretched and squalid. The market women who come in from the country with fish and provender for cattle are rather comely, but their legs, which are bare, are invariably dreadfully excoriated. The north gate of the town is protected by two bronze howitzers of considerable dimensions; but as they have no touch-holes the means by which they are to be fired must remain an insoluble problem.

Leaving Talifu Mr. Baber and his party followed the banks of the Mi-kong. This imposing, and to this point almost navigable stream, suddenly plunging under a natural bridge of rock, issues forth a rushing torrent, and a few miles farther on, surging over enormous boulders, becomes a sheet of foam. Crossing the bubbling waters at one time by a bamboo bridge, at another by means of a tree, which a freak of nature had made to grow horizontally across the torrent, the route lay through magnificent forests, alternated by glades of walnut trees, glens of glorious beauty, and mountains of inaccessible steepness, whose snowy peaks rise from among flowery or bright-leaved woods; precipices of a height to dim the eye met the gaze at every turn. Dazzled and bewildered with the stupendous glory of the scene, the party proceeded on the journey to the picturesque little town of Yang-pi. After the capture of Talifu about 2,000 Mohammedans took refuge in the mountains, but the approaches to Yang-pi being secured by its garrison, they were unable to descend, and most of them perished of cold or starvation in the upper passes. Passing the night comfortably enough in a hotel constructed of wood, next morning the Mission again plodded amid the "everlasting hills," the gradients oftentimes being of the most exasperating steepness.

The path seldom condescended to zigzag up a slope until it became absolutely impossible to ascend it otherwise; and the limit of possibility was so nearly touched in many places that the ascent had to be charged—taken with a rush—on pain of slipping back. Here and there, in a seemingly purposeless manner, the route descended from a ridge, ran a mile or two along a valley, and then appalled the wayfarer by mounting again up the very same ridge; the reason for this apparently eccentric deviation is that the traffic must pass through the villages, and the villages must be situated near water; the road, therefore, adapted to these exigencies, dipped on occasion to the bottom of the valleys.

The trade of this region, chiefly cotton and opium, is almost monopolised by two merchant princes—Yang, the Generalissimo of Western Yunnan, and his Majesty the King of Burma. The former appears to take the lion's share; and the conductors of his caravans, disbanded braves, notorious for their high-handed conduct, are the dread of the inoffensive villagers, and no one ventures to deprecate their exactions. The Generalissimo himself enjoys a reputation of no common order; but as he was courteous and even hospitable to our travellers, it may be well to give him the benefit of the doubt, and to assume that scandal has exaggerated his failings in crediting him with all the qualities of Barrabas and Bluebeard. He is beyond doubt the richest and most influential man in Yunnan.

STATION TALK.

The Lucknow Correspondent of the Pioneer states that the old residents of this City of Palaces, when they return next cold weather from the Hills, where duty or pleasure has called them, will, on casting their eyes citywards over the gilded domes and cupolas, and the outlines of tombs and mosque, miss an old friend in one of the lofty minarets of the Jumma Musjid. For years one of these minarets, owing to the sinking of its foundation, has been remarkable for the way it leant over, somewhat after the fashion of the leaning Tower of Pisa, apparently defying gravitation's laws. Recently this minaret came down with a run—fortunately, however, without causing any loss to life. About the same time, owing to the same cause as brought down this minaret—namely, the recent rain—a portion of the very topmost cornice of the Chutter Munzil gave way, and fell, making a large hole in the ground just outside the public library, where of an evening many persons congregate to hear the latest news and tell the last good story. Fortunately no damage was done save the breaking up of the surrounding pavement.—Last cold weather, Colonels Tyrwhitt and Dalmahoy visited Lucknow together, to inquire into the expediency of extending to the Oudh and Rohilcund Railway the system at present in force on the East Indian Railway regarding an organised railway police. Although the Oudh and Rohilcund Railway has now been in existence some twelve years or so, and at the present time runs over a line of some five hundred miles in length, it employs for the protection of the travelling public and the goods consigned to its charge merely a private watch and ward with no powers of arrest exceeding those of a private person, except in certain cases against the Railway Act. There can be little doubt that the absence of a regular enrolled police facilitates the commission of crime and the escape of criminals; and just now, at this time of the year, the railway is used in a measure as a vehicle for smuggling opium into Lucknow. If anywhere prompt police action is required, surely it is on lines of railway. Moreover, if the system of a regular organised police is found necessary on the East Indian and other railways, what are the exceptional circumstances that make the absence of such a system advisable in Oudh and those parts of the North-West Provinces through which the Oudh and Rohilcund Railway passes? The Agent and Deputy Agent are so keen in all that concerns the welfare of the railway that they would be the foremost to aid the Inspector-General of Police in his inquiry as to the advisability of placing their line under Colonel Dalmahoy and a duly enrolled police. The matter is one of some importance to the public, and it is to be hoped that something definite may soon be settled.

Miscellaneous.

BREAKING INTO A MAGAZINE.—An attempt was made to break into the Lucknow Volunteer Magazine, within 200 yards of the guard post at Government House, on the night of the 9th ult. The Magazine contains about 40,000 rounds of ammunition.—Pioneer.

PROFESSOR H. BLOCHMANN, Principal of the Calcutta Madrassi, and the translator and editor of Abul Fazl's Ain-i-Akbari, died suddenly at Calcutta on the 13th ult. A correspondent of the Times suggests that his unpublished MSS., especially a Perso-English Dictionary left ready for printing, should be published by the Indian Government.

MANNIPUR RUMOURS.—In Manipur the bazaars have been emptied by dark rumours that the Maharajah had found it necessary to offer up some human sacrifices. This was discovered to be a gross calumny, and the Court passed an order that any one circulating it should have his tongue cut out. Strange to say, the bazaars nevertheless remained more or less deserted.

VOLUNTEERS.—The Supreme Government is considering the amalgamation of the Mussoorie, Roorkee, and Agra Volunteer Corps into one administrative battalion, by which means the services of a paid Adjutant, from the regular army, could be obtained. His Honour the Lieutenant-Governor, we understand, has submitted the name of Captain Crofton, 60th Rifles, for the appointment.

AJMER VOLUNTEERS.—The volunteer enthusiasm has spread to the heart of loyal Rajputana. A meeting was held recently at Ajmer, to consider about raising a company to join the battalion being enrolled at Agra, Jeypore, Gwalior, and other places. Ajmer promises to become before long a large and important station, and there is every reason to hope that the latest idea will be popular and successful.—Pioneer.

FAMINE IN OUDH.—The Lucknow Times has taken some pains to ascertain the exact facts relative to the numbers found dead—not merely during the four weeks ending with February 15—but for the two calendar months of January and February, 1878, and are now in position to state that in all January seventy dead bodies were picked up in the Lucknow streets, and in February twenty-seven. Of these corpses four were burned and ninety-eight buried. Such figures are sufficiently sad, but sink into comparative insignificance when contrasted with the gross exaggerations so industriously promulgated of late.

FAMINE COMMISSION.—Mr. Quinton, Officiating Sessions Judge of Allahabad, has been ordered to Naini Tal to serve on a Commission, appointed to see that as complete and exhaustive replies as possible are sent to the Imperial Famine Commission; Mr. Edwards, the Commissioner of the Rohilkhand Division, will be President; Mr. Buck and Mr. Quinton will be members; Captain Pilcher, from Lucknow, will be Secretary; and Mr. Harrison, Sessions Judge of Mirzapur, will take over charge of the judicial work at Allahabad.

The Lahor correspondent of the Pioneer gives the following account of an attack on a British officer at Edwardesabad:—"Last month Dr. Maloney, of the 3rd Sikhs, was attacked when going home from mess at night by a Kahar, whom he had reduced from a mateship. The Kahar got the doctor's sword and belt from his bearer on the excuse that his master had sent for them. On encountering Dr. Maloney, he made a lunge at him, but luckily struck his watch, the sword glancing off and going through his coat. The watch was dented and stopped, while the sword itself was bent, showing that, but for the watch, the doctor would have received a mortal wound. He immediately closed with the Kahar, threw and captured him."

THE TELEPHONE.—Several experiments with the telephone have lately been made at Lucknow between that station and Sitapur, a distance of about fifty miles. Thanks to the kindness of Mr. Melhuish, the Superintendent of Telegraphs, several ladies and gentlemen were present, and conversed with their friends at Sitapur. The voices of the speakers were distinctly recognisable. In one instance, the doors of the room in Lucknow in which the experiments were being carried on were shut, and the plate placed against the cage of some singing canaries. Every note of the canaries' songs was clearly heard at Sitapur.—Pioneer.

LICENCE TAX.—A Calcutta paper gives some particulars regarding the open-air meeting of shop-keepers, traders, &c., which was held at Kishnagur on the 29th ult. It was attended by upwards of a thousand people, who all sat on the grass. Ram Raton Konndu was unanimously voted to the chair. The Chairman made an able speech, in which he said that at present the extreme suffering of the people unfitted them to bear any more taxation, especially of the nature of the impending licence-tax, against which he moved that the meeting should memorialise the Government. The motion was agreed to. It was also resolved that a petition should be sent to England, and a committee was appointed for the purpose of procuring signatures to the document. Similar meetings have been held at Dacca and Hatkhola.

MOUNT ABU LAWRENCE SCHOOL.—The annual distribution of prizes to the scholars of this school took place as usual on the Founder's day, 28th June. The Agent to the Governor-General for Rajputana (and President of the School Committee), Major Bradford, delivered an admirable address, in the course of which he paid a graceful compliment to the memory of the Founder of the Institution, the brave and pious Sir Henry Lawrence, and congratulated the Headmaster and Mistress, Mr. and Mrs. Eaglesome, on their successful management of the school and the good education of the children under their care. In the way of improvement, he suggested more attention to the vernacular languages and teaching of useful handicrafts, such as carpentry for the boys and cookery for the girls. The distribution of the prizes then took place. Out-door games at the play-ground followed, consisting of foot-ball, running, &c.; and the successful competitors received prizes at the hands of the ladies present. Finally came a substantial feast for the children, provided by Mrs. Bradford.—Pioneer.

ASSAM COOLIES.—The prosperity of the coolies in Assam is described as wonderful by a correspondent of the Indian Daily News, and the facts seem to justify the statement; thus, a labouring man earns five rupees a month; a labouring woman earns four rupees a month, by performing a prescribed quantity of work daily. On many gardens the labourers habitually do much more than the prescribed work, and earn extra pay. Women in the picking season occasionally earned as much as Rs. 30 a month. Such cases, if true, are quite exceptional, but a man and his wife, if fairly industrious, can earn from Rs. 14 to Rs. 18 or Rs. 20 a month. The planters have to supply the coolies with rice at the rate of three rupees the maund. The coolies have land rent-free to grow cucumbers in; they allow their cows and goats, which seem very numerous, to graze on the waste land near the gardens. They get mangoes and other fruits from the jungles. They pay no rent for their houses. Under these circumstances it is only natural that they should save largely, and cases are mentioned of families saving as much as Rs. 800 to Rs. 1,000.

MR. JAMES WHITE, a Bengal indigo-planter, has just been acquitted at the Calcutta criminal sessions of a charge of causing the death of a ryot twelve months since. It does not appear from the published reports of the case why Mr. White was not brought to trial sooner. According to the testimony of the witnesses for the prosecution, Mr. White fined the deceased for allowing his cattle to stray on to his fields. The ryot appealed to Mr. White to remit the penalty, and on this, according to the witnesses, the planter struck and kicked him in such a manner as to cause his death. The case bore such unmistakable signs of being got up, that the jury acquitted Mr. White without hearing the evidence for the defence. The Judge, in directing his discharge, said: "I quite agree with you, gentlemen of the jury. The evidence is utterly unreliable." It is to be hoped that an example will be made of some of the witnesses, as it is monstrous that a charge of this nature can be brought against a European and sustained by such perjured evidence as in Mr. White's case.

IMPUDENT FRAUD.—A novel method of making capital out of the Malta Expedition is mentioned by the Friend of India. Some enterprising persons, under the order of a "Sergeant Sahib," have been busily recruiting in the neighbourhood of Calcutta. Their operation, however, differed in one important particular from those of their English prototype. Instead of giving a shilling, they take twelve annas, thus showing themselves not unfamiliar with the present condition of exchange. Adopting a conveniently low standard of height and of chest dimension, they informed the villagers that all men exceeding these proportions must either fight the Russian or pay the fine. We have not heard that any of the qualified chose the former alternative. Perhaps they are keeping their martial ardour in hand, in the hope that the native volunteer movement may succeed. However this may be, the career of usefulness of the recruiters has been cut short, and they are now in the Alipore Jail. The "Sergeant Sahib" has left the neighbourhood.

THE LATE CHIEF COMMISSIONER OF ASSAM.—A farewell address was presented to the late Chief Commissioner of Assam, Colonel Keatinge, C.B., C.S.I., on his departure from Dhubri, of which the following is the principal paragraph:—"By the extension of roads and telegraphs, introduction of steam ferries and erection of serais and staging-houses all over the province for accommodation of travellers, by opening a new land route, and establishment of a new depot for facilitating emigration, by organisation of a regular steam service, and modification of quarantine rules, your labours in furtherance of public works have immensely contributed to the material development of the province, for which your name will be held in veneration and gratitude, not only by those whom we represent, but by others who have any interest in the province. You have, Sir, by these public acts, brought capital and labour together, and removed the inconvenience of the employer, and given protection to the life of the employed, and by promoting a free recruit system, you have practically solved an economical problem, which engaged the anxious attention of the Government for many years." The testimonial conveyed in these words a copy of an address which was presented to Colonel Keatinge, late Chief Commissioner of Assam, at Dhubri. It comes from the most influential of the native residents of Assam, viz., the zemindars of Goalparah. The Rajah of Bijni, who read the address, is the largest landholder in the province, having a densely populated pergunnah of over 1,200 square miles in extent. The arrangements made at Dhubri for Colonel Keatinge's reception reflected great credit on the zemindars. The town was brilliantly illuminated at night, and Colonel Keatinge took his departure next day, among the general regrets of the people, with whom he seems to have been most popular.—Indian Daily News.

Madras.

MR. WALTER JOYES, Professor of Vernacular Literature, Presidency College, Madras, died at Ootacamund on July 11th from heart disease.

A NATIVE JUDGE FOR THE HIGH COURT.—We understand that it is the intention of the Madras Government, with the approval of the Government of India, and the sanction of the Secretary of State, to raise Mr. T. Muthusami Iyer, the Third Judge of the Small Cause Court, and recently Acting District Judge of Madura, to the bench of the High Court of Madras.—Mail.

LOSS OF THE "JOSHUA."—The Marine Court of Inquiry lately held at Calicut into the circumstances which led to the loss of the bark Joshua, off Bepore, was of opinion that the captain and officers of the ship were not to blame, and discharged them. The wreck of the Joshua was sold the other day for two thousand rupees. A quantity of railway sleepers in the hold of the wreck continues there, and the company have declined to take charge of them.

BANGALOR RELIEF COMMITTEE.—Colonel J. L. Pearse, President of the General Relief Committee, Bangalore, has proposed that a honorarium, to be raised by public subscription, be presented to Mr. J. Lacey, secretary of the committee, for his valuable and gratuitous services during the famine, as was done in the case of Mr. Digby, the secretary to the Madras committee. Mr. Gordon, the Chief Commissioner, has opened a subscription list with Rs. 100, and a good sum of money has already been collected.

THE MAHARANEE OF MYSOR.—The kureetha recently sent from the Viceroy to the Maharanee of Mysor was the expression of a hope and expectation that prosperity would attend the Maharanee and her household in all their undertakings; that happiness would smile on the Maharajah and his consort in their new sphere of life; and an acknowledgment of satisfaction at hearing that the Princess had made progress in her studies. It is stated by a Mysor correspondent that Mrs. Porter is to take the Princess in hand and instruct her on her arrival at Mysor.—Pioneer.

FAMINE GRANT TO RAILWAY EMPLOYEES.—Upon a representation made by the Madras Railway Authorities on behalf of their Employees some time ago, the London Board of Directors have decided upon granting a month's salary to each employee of the Madras Railway Company as a special Famine allowance to all drawing salaries from and below Rs. 50, and have accordingly sanctioned the payment of same pending the orders of the Madras Government. This allowance, it is said, will not extend to those of the subordinates, such as the peons, porters, &c., who are drawing Rs. 1.8 monthly as rice money.—Athenaeum.

REDUCTION IN WEIGHTS AND MEASURES.—Quite a panic was recently excited, say the Madras journals, among many people in Madras by the rumour that the weights and measures in use in the Madras bazars are to be reduced under the authority of the Collector of Madras. It is said that some bazaarmen have already sent in their weights and measures, reduced as above stated, to the Collector's Office to be stamped. The present Madras measure is, it would appear, to be lessened by one o'clock; it will consist of eight o'clocks, as now, but each o'clock will be one-eighth less, and a viss, which is now equal to three pounds two ounces, is to be reduced by two ounces. This is a great reduction, and, as it will tell with much severity on the poor, the change ought not to be hastily sanctioned by the authorities.—Madras Times.

SANITATION OF BANGALOR.—His Excellency the Commander-in-Chief has requested Government to address the Chief Commissioner of Mysor on the subject of the insanitary condition of Bangalore, as affecting the British troops located at that station, caused by the Hindu cemetery being situated contiguous to the Ulsoor Tank, from whence the British troops are supplied with drinking water. The graveyard is, from a sanitary point of view, reported to be a filthy, loathsome spot, and emitting a most offensive and overpowering smell; and its proximity to the source from which the troops get their supply of drinking water is a matter which seriously affects the health of the British troops. Government have accordingly addressed the Mysor Government on the subject, and have suggested the closing of the cemetery and the preservation of the future conservancy of the ground.—Pioneer.

THE MADRAS LICENCE ACT.—It will be remembered that the Madras Chamber of Commerce memorialised the Secretary of State against the Madras Licence Act some four months ago, when the Act was passed by the local legislature. The Secretary of State has replied to the despatch of the Government of India which forwarded this memorial, and makes the following important observations:—"It is obvious that under the extraordinary financial pressure which has arisen from the famine the Government must have recourse to unusual expedients to enable the Exchequer to meet the various demands made on the resources of the State. I have expressed my approval of the principle of the measures adopted to restore the equilibrium between income and expenditure, but the objection of the Madras Chamber of Commerce is especially directed against certain details in the Madras Licence Bill. I do not consider it would be expedient for me to discuss these details. Experience can alone suggest what modifications should be made in the financial legislation of the three Presidencies. When the time comes for reviewing the measures recently passed, the objections of the Madras Chamber of Commerce will, I am confident, receive our fullest consideration.

CHANGES IN THE SALT DEPARTMENT.—The responsibilities of all the Collectors in the Presidency having any thing to do with the Salt Departments ceased from the 1st instant. Mr. H. W. Bliss, the Commissioner of Salt Revenue, has assumed charge of all the Salt Departments in the Presidency, and all papers, such as correspondence, accounts, &c., are sent by the Deputy Collectors in charge of Salt Departments direct to Mr. Bliss. Mr. Bliss has opened a very large establishment of about thirty-five hands (clerks and accountants) near the Madras Club. Mr. Bliss, we believe, will be allowed one or two assistants, who will be some experienced Salt Deputy Collectors. Mr. R. Durma Row Naidu Garu has been selected, whose experience in the Salt department, has often earned him credit in the Ganjam District at Nowpadah, &c. Mr. Durma Row is now on special duty as Deputy Collector at Berhampore. The Salt Revenue Commissioner will shortly leave Madras on tour of inspection to the Northern Districts. A portion of his establishment follows him. The little rain we have just had helps the navigation a great deal in Cachrane's Canal, and the Main Canal salt boats are coming in. Up to date about thirteen to fourteen lakhs of Indian maunds have been received into store at the Madras Cottairs, and it is hoped that all the salt at the Northern pans will soon come to Madras.—Madras Times.

DEMAND FOR SALT.—The authorities of the Salt Department are purchasing, under the orders of the Commissioner of Salt Revenue, some 20,000 to 30,000 gunny bags, which are, we hear, to convey salt from Marcanum, in the South-Arcot District, and Vedarniem, in the Tanjore District, to the Vizagapatam District. These bags, we believe, must be strong enough to stand three voyages by sea. Even on an average if a vessel carried about 10,000 bags of salt this would be equal to 20,000 Indian maunds, the price of which would be about Rs. 54,750, at the rate of 2-11-0 per Indian maund, the present monopoly price. This is for one voyage, and for three the quantity will therefore be 60,000 Indian maunds, valuing about Rs. 164,250. To carry this quantity of salt it will certainly cost a good sum. Could not this be saved by simply increasing the quantity to be manufactured in the Vizagapatam District? On the contrary, a few months before the Commissioner took charge of the Salt Departments in the Presidency the Collector, Mr. Graham, and his Salt Deputy, Mr. Sharkey, of the Vizagapatam District, recommended the close of Kupily Salt Station, near Bimlipatam, Vizagapatam District. Again, the salt manufactured in the Vizagapatam District is sold immediately the manufacturing season is over, save in Nowpadah, Ganjam District. For instance, Konada, a splendid Salt station in the Vizagapatam District, with a fine set of pans yields very superior salt, but the quantity ordered to be manufactured is so little that the new salt is sold as it is scraped from the pans, and one month after the manufacture is over a single grain of salt cannot be had at this station, although the demand is so very great.—Madras Times.

STATION TALK.

At all times of the year Puna is by far the most important military station on the western side of India. For a portion of the year, moreover, it is the seat of Government and the residence of the Commander-in-Chief. Heads of departments assemble here, English regiments, horse, foot, and artillery, and native corps, are brigaded here; and to this pleasant retreat the judges, the barristers, and the merchants of Bombay resort when the sun and the heat, or the wind and the rain, drive them from Bombay. During the monsoon, at all events, it is the capital and the pleasure haunt of our Presidency. Yet if it were a village in the jungle the sanitary condition could not well be worse. A writer who seems to have local knowledge and accurate information has lately made use of the columns of the Deccan Herald to call the attention of the inhabitants of Puna, or rather the visitors, to the unhealthy condition of things around them. His complaints are not made after the hole-in-the-corner fashion. The writer says he is prepared to point out to any one charged with the sanitation of Puna the places which require immediate attention. Here is a distinct accusation against the Cantonment Committee and a challenge to Government itself. The note of warning is ominous—"We could point out that not only in the city and villages about Puna, but also in the bazaar, cholera is present with us." Government is bound at once to sift this matter, for we are told that the epidemic is not yet severe, and so it might be checked if stringent measures were immediately taken. The writer appears to think that the ground of Puna is affected; that the want of cleanliness in the servants who defile the ground with the washing of plates, and the laziness of sweepers who deposit their burdens behind the nearest prickly-pear hedge, are the causes of the unpleasant odours that in the morning or evening walks keep the right hand and the handkerchief as busy as the legs. If this picture of fashionable Puna be true it cannot be long before its community suffer. We cannot afford to run risks in a great camp like Puna where, we barrack a large portion of the fighting strength of this Presidency. Many think that the health of Puna of late years has not improved, and the opinion of the writer in the article we quote from is not very encouraging. He says, "It seems as if with the additional population of Puna we had let sanitary arrangements remain very much what they were." He here alludes to some years ago, when a medical officer made a report upon this station. It is also alleged that Puna was more healthy prior to the sanitary measures taken for its benefit. The Government have taken the alarm, and since the appearance of the article in question a Commission has been appointed to inquire into the efficiency or otherwise of the Cantonment Magistrate's Office Establishment, and into all matters of sanitation affecting the Cantonment. The Commission is composed of Colonel Chitty, the Controller of Military Accounts, Colonel Pottinger, the Assistant Quarter Master General of the Army P. D. A., Mr. Erskine, the Revenue Commissioner N. D., and Major Moore, the Cantonment Magistrate of Ahmednuggur.—Times of India Correspondent.

Miscellaneous.

THE PARSİ ELEVEN.—The Bombay Parsi Eleven, being unable to go to England this year, has decided to visit Calcutta during the Christmas holidays to play a match with the Calcutta Cricket Club.

THE MADRAS TIMES understands that the Local Government have, on the recommendation of the Surgeon-General, Indian Medical Department, sanctioned the grant of rupees 50,000 being paid to the Apothecaries Fund, on the conditions prescribed by the Secretary of State for India.

BELOOCHEES AND TELEGRAPHS.—The Beloochees show a high appreciation of the Telegraph system. So popular is it that even in Beloochistan the wire is much prized by the people. The line has been wilfully cut four times in a fortnight, and each time a quantity of wire ranging from 100 yards to half a mile, has been carried away, besides a few insulators and brackets.

TEMPORARY HOSPITAL.—The suggestion of a majority of the Town Council of Bombay to establish a temporary hospital, at a cost of Rs. 15,000, with the view of reducing the mortality in this city, has been rejected by the Municipal Corporation, only six members voting in favour of the proposal.

THE VOLUNTEERS.—The Bombay Volunteers are organising an athletic meeting to be held during the monsoon. It is noticeable that, in the other presidencies, the Volunteer movement does not utterly collapse in the hot weather, as is the case in Calcutta.—Indian Daily News.

POLICE-THIEVES.—The Berar police are gaining an unfortunate reputation for thieving. Within the last few months several cases of theft of property at railway stations have been brought home to the guards specially employed for their protection, and as the G.I.P.

Railway Company have had to pay compensation to the owners of the goods, it is only fair to expect that the Resident at Hyderabad will reimburse the Company all claims which they may have been compelled to pay.

IRRIGATION.—The report on irrigation in Guzerat and the part of the Deccan in the Bombay Presidency for 1876-77 shows that of twenty-two works fourteen are entirely new. The total capital outlay up to April, 1876 was Rs. 1,08,04,333; the assessments during 1876-77, Rs. 1,36,645, the working expenses Rs. 1,01,894, leaving the surplus of assessments over working expenses at 34,751, and giving a net return of  $\frac{1}{2}$  per cent. on the capital outlay at the commencement of the year. The actual area irrigated is 13,762 acres.—Times Telegram.

SIR CHARLES NAPIER'S MOONSHÉE.—The Poona Observer announces the death, on July 13, of Khan Bahadoor Mirza Ali Ackbar Khan. The deceased gentleman began life as Moonshée of Lieut.-Colonel Outram, when Political Agent in Sind, and subsequently served Sir Charles J. Napier in the same capacity. Both these distinguished men recorded their opinion of his "zealous, able, and honest services." The title of Khan Bahadoor was conferred on him by Lord Ellenborough; and at a public dinner at Bombay, Sir Charles Napier said, "Ali Ackbar did more for the conquest of Sind than a thousand soldiers." In later years he visited England as Agent to conduct the case of the King of Oudh, and other native Princes.

THE TRANSFER OF SIND TO THE PUNJAB.—The present Commissioner in Sind will be taken over by the Punjab Government under the new scheme. Major Sandeman remains at Quetta. We now learn that all the arrangements for the annexation of Sind to the Punjab have been finally completed, and that in all probability we shall have to bid Bombay farewell next month. The fact of Colonel Wallace, Collector of Shikarpoor, having been directed to proceed to Kurrachee and meet Colonels Lambert and Dunsterville, as also Colonel Haig, Settlement Officer in Sind, has led some people to suppose that the officials are to discuss some momentous questions touching our future. This is a mistake. These officers have been ordered to meet simply to settle certain administrative points and a question regarding settlement rules which have nothing whatever to do with our transfer from Bombay to the Punjab.—Civil and Military Gazette (Sindh issue), July 12.

DISTRESS IN THE MELGHAT.—Some accounts having been published of distress in the Melghat, and generally in the hilly tract on the borders of the Central Provinces and Berar, information regarding the measures that have been taken to provide for any distress that may arise will probably be of interest to the public. There are at present in progress in the Melghat the following four sets of relief works:—(1) Felling and clearing along the Pili road, now being constructed by the P. W. Department—(2) Plantation work at Pili—(3) Ditto at Kolkay—(4) Felling at the Gugarnel reserve. These works are calculated to support the whole portions of the population at all likely ever to be distressed; but at the present time there is actually a difficulty in obtaining sufficient labour to carry on the works. The reason for this is believed by the local authorities to be that, though there has been an undoubted failure of the crops in these parts, the hardy hill men are so accustomed by their general habits to a hard and uncertain mode of life, and to obtain their subsistence from other sources than the ordinary agriculture of the country, that they have been comparatively little affected by the scarcity of grain.—Times of India.

THE SURAT RIOTS.—The Bombay High Court has pronounced judgment in regard to the application for the transfer to Bombay of the trial of the Surat native editors and rioters. The matter was argued for two days before the Chief Justice, and a Puisne Judge briefly stated the grounds on which the order nisi was granted were these:—1. That the Sessions Judge was himself the alleged object of the violence which the petitioners are stated to have instigated. 2. That he himself passed through the period of excitement which, within the last three months, has prevailed in Surat. 3. That he was engaged in consultations and conferences with the authorities having in their hands the prosecution of the rioters and their instigators. 4. That the belief in the desire of the authorities to obtain the petitioners' conviction is so widespread at Surat that witnesses are thereby indirectly encouraged to give evidence favourable to the prosecution, and are led to hope for the goodwill and continuance of those in power, whilst witnesses, able and otherwise willing to give evidence for the defence, are deterred from so doing for fear of becoming marked for the disfavour of the police and other authorities. 5. That by the same general impression, as to the views and inclination of the authorities, even vakils and mookhtars are led to keep aloof from the petitioners; and it is rendered likely that the independence and impartiality of assessors would be affected to the prejudice of the petitioners. The Court dismissed the application on the ground that the petitioners had entirely failed to substantiate their allegations as to the impossibility of getting a fair trial in consequence of official bias. The Court held that there had been very reckless swearing on behalf of the petitioners, and this fact was in itself sufficient to cast doubt on the good faith of the applicants. As, however, the house and person of the Surat Judge had been objects of attack by the rioters, it was not desirable that he should try the case. The Government have accepted this view taken by the Court, and appointed a fresh Judge to superintend the trial.

THE NEW RETIREMENT SCHEME.—At last the Warrant for which the twelve new Line regiments have so anxiously waited has been approved by the India Office, and its appearance may be anticipated immediately. The document brings in the five years rule with regard to regimental commands, and offers a step of promotion and the pension of the higher rank to all officers of twenty years and upwards. In the case of a Lieutenant-Colonel who has become entitled to his £365, it offers £485, and to one claiming £485 it gives £600. It is provided that if the Captains do not take the £295—which is £100 a year more than they are entitled to at present—they are to be retired compulsorily at twenty-five years. Now, with respect to this latter provision a question arises—is it desirable to allow officers to hang on in uncertainty as to whether they will accept the terms offered them or not? It certainly would be for the benefit of the Service if some limit of time were imposed within which officers should be required to make known their wishes, so that the War Office might be made aware who elected to take the higher rate of pension and who desired to serve on to complete twenty-five years' service. Unless some provision of some sort be imposed, the success of the scheme will be impaired. It must be allowed that it is conceived in a liberal spirit, and it would be a pity for its effect to be marred by any want of forethought.—Army and Navy Gazette

THE ARMY MEDICAL SCHOOL.

The thirty-fifth session of the Army Medical School, at the Royal Victoria Hospital, Netley, terminated on the 5th inst., when the places for commissions in the Medical Departments of the Army, Royal Navy, and Indian Service were announced.

Lord Cranbrook, Secretary of State for India, was represented by Lieutenant-General Sir Henry Norman, K.C.B., K.C.S.I., member of the Council of India, and Colonel Allan Johnston, C.B., Military Secretary to the Government of India.

A large number of distinguished officers attended, among whom were General J. Barrow, R.A., the Hon. Eliot Yorke, Sir Joseph Fayrer, Physician to the Council of India; Colonel Stewart, Colonel Macdonald, the military and medical staff of the Hospital, and the Professors of the Army Medical School. The list having been read out and the reports of the work of the session addressed to the Secretaries of State for War and India and the Lords of the Admiralty, Sir Henry Norman distributed the prizes. The Herbert Prize and the Martin Memorial Gold Medal were won by Mr. Cretin, who took the highest place both at the London and Netley examinations. The Parkes Memorial Medal for the highest place in military hygiene was won by Dr. Duncan. Both gentlemen belong to her Majesty's Indian Service. The highest distinction in military surgery was gained by Mr. Langdon, the candidate at the head of the list of the British Army.

Sir Henry Norman then addressed the gentlemen who had won their commissions. He congratulated them on the happy termination of their labours, and spoke in terms of high commendation to those who had won honourable distinction at Netley, auguring well of their future career from this circumstance. As an officer of great Indian experience he expressed the high sense he entertained of the services rendered to the State by the medical officers of the three services of the Crown, in peace and in war, on the field of battle, in pestilence-stricken camps, and in districts scourged by famine. He assured them that in India they would find a splendid field for the practical application of the lessons learnt at Netley. He assured those present of the high opinion entertained by the Secretary of State for India and his colleagues of the Council of India of the value of the Army Medical School as a place of training for young medical officers, and concluded by repeating his congratulations, and his best wishes to the young men about to enter on difficult and important work in the service of the State.

The company were afterwards entertained at luncheon by Surg. Gen. Massy, C.B., and the officers of the medical staff and professors of the school.

The following is a list of candidates for commissions as surgeons in her Majesty's British Medical Service who were successful at both the London and Netley Examinations:—

EAST INDIA PUBLIC WORKS COMMITTEE.

The Committee met for the last time in the present session on the 1st inst.; Lord G. Hamilton occupied the chair.

Mr. Juland Danvers, of the India Office, was examined on the railway system of India. He said he was in the Railway Department of the India Office, acting as Director of Guaranteed Railways. He put in papers containing particulars and results of the working of the guaranteed lines in 1872 and subsequently. Previous to 1872 the Government's anticipations of profits from the railways had not been realised; but since that time there had been a gradual increase of traffic, and now with each succeeding year better returns than hitherto might be expected. Up to 1877 the amount expended on State railways was £17,661,600. The net receipts for the year were £141,306. A large proportion of this total was expended on lines not yet in working order. He (witness) believed that the past tardiness in making the State railways had come to an end, and that the works would be accelerated by means of the application of additional funds. Assuming that the Government carried out its purpose of applying between three and four millions sterling to the construction of more light railways, he certainly thought the returns from the lines of railway in India already in operation would so increase as to fully repay expenditure ultimately.

The witness having explained the kind of control exercised by the Government over the guaranteed railways of India, the Committee adjourned sine die.

INDIAN AND COLONIAL RELIEFS, 1878-79.

The arrangements for the season of 1878-9, although not completed, are so far advanced that they may be indicated generally. The movements of regiments as between home and the colonies are still somewhat dependent upon the restoration of quiet in South Africa, as well as upon the military steps which may be rendered necessary by the occupation of Cyprus. We have now seven battalions of Infantry at the Cape and the Mauritius, the normal establishment for these colonies being four, and the probabilities are that even should the state of affairs pending the organisation of local forces not admit of the reduction to the usual number, at least two of the seven battalions may be brought home. In this case the 1st battalions of the 13th and 24th Regiments will soon arrive in England, leaving the 2nd Battalions of the 3rd Buffs and 24th, and the 80th, 88th, and 90th Regiments in South Africa, the Mauritius, and St. Helena. It seems somewhat uncertain what reinforcements will be needed for the Mediterranean consequent upon our acquisition of Cyprus. Three battalions from Malta are already in the island, leaving four in Malta. These four being on the larger establishment make the Infantry force at Malta about the same strength as before the Eastern complications, when the garrison consisted of five battalions of 600 rank and file each. In the event of fresh troops being sent to the Mediterranean, the 2nd Battalion, 10th, at Dover, which is provisionally under orders, the 93rd Highlanders at the Curragh, and the 3rd Battalion of the 60th Rifles at Aldershot are the first for the service. The Indian reliefs are definitely settled for the season. The 2nd Battalion of the 6th leaves Portsmouth in Her Majesty's ship Junna on the 26th of September, the 2nd Battalion of the 14th will embark at Queenstown in Her Majesty's ship Crocodile about the 6th of October, the 2nd Battalion of the 5th Fusiliers in the Serapis from Portsmouth on the 30th of January, and the 30th Regiment in the Euphrates on the 6th of March. Each of these battalions will arrive at Bombay just a month after embarkation, and will proceed—the 30th to Mhow and the others to Sealkote, Lucknow, and Puna respectively. The outgoing Cavalry regiment, the 8th Hussars, will embark in the Junna on the 17th of December, arrive at Bombay on the 16th of January, and proceed to Muttra, taking the place of the 4th Hussars, which latter regiment will embark at Bombay on the 22nd of November and arrive home about Christmas Day, taking over the quarters and horses of the 8th Hussars at Shorncliffe. The batteries of artillery for India will go out on the 15th of October and the 13th of December, while the greater part of those coming home will leave Bombay on the 30th of October in the first returning troopship of the season. Altogether twelve voyages between Portsmouth and Bombay will have been made this season, being two in excess of the usual number. As we stated several months ago the battalions of Infantry to come home from India are the 2nd Battalion of the 1st Royal Scots at Jubbulpore, the 1st Battalion of the 2nd Queen's at Puna, the 1st Battalion of the 3rd Buffs from Cawnpore, and the 1st Battalion of the 8th Regiment at Aden. In place of the 8th, the 1st Battalion of the 14th Regiment, now at the Hill Station of Raneeekhet, will move to Aden, and, together with the 1st Battalion of the 5th and the 73rd and 83rd Regiments, may expect to be brought home to England in the season 1879-80. Regarding the Cavalry changes in Bengal, the 15th Hussars, after a six years' stay at Meerut, will move thence to Lucknow, remaining there until their return home in the winter of 1880-1. The 13th Hussars leave Lucknow for Sealkote in the room of the 9th Lancers, who relieve the 15th Hussars at Meerut. It is not probable that any European Cavalry regiment in India will be moved during the season 1879-80 except the 3rd Hussars, coming home, whose place at Mhow will doubtless be taken by the 17th Lancers from England. The Infantry moves of the coming season in Bengal will include those of the 1st Battalion 6th Regiment from Roorkee and Delhi to Cawnpore; the 2nd Battalion 9th, Peshawur to Nowshera; 1st Battalion 17th, Muree Hills to Roorkee and Delhi; 1st Battalion 25th, Fyzabad to Peshawur; 40th Regiment, Dum Dum to Raneekhet; 59th, Dugshai to Jubbulpore; 63rd, Meerut to Fyzabad; 68th Nussereabad to Meerut; 72nd, Sealkote to Dugshai; 85th, Lucknow to Dum Dum; and 4th Battalion Rifle Brigade, Nowshera to Muree Hills. In the Bombay Presidency the 2nd Battalion of the 7th Fusiliers will move from Belgaum to Colaba (Bombay) and Sattara, the 2nd Battalion 11th, Puna to Kurrachee; 2nd Battalion 17th, Mhow to Nussereabad; 66th, Colaba to Puna, and the 83rd, Kurrachee to Belgaum.

India in Parliament.

HOUSE OF LORDS, MONDAY, Aug. 5.—THE TAXATION OF INDIA.—The Earl of NORTHBROOK presented a petition from the inhabitants of Calcutta and its vicinity on the subject of the recent increase of taxation and of the military and public works expenditure in India. The petition was signed by 2,000 persons, among whom were some of the highest natives in the province of Bengal, including Maharajah Joteendro Mohun Tagore, one of the members of the Legislative Council of India; Maharajah Narendra Krishna, lately a member of the Legislative Council of India; Kristodas Pal, one of the members of the Legislative Council of Bengal; and the editor of the Hindoo Patriot. The petition was dated so far back as March; but the delay in presentation had been creditable to the loyalty of the petitioners, who had not wished to have the petition presented while there was any probability of war. The first head of expenditure to which the petitioners drew attention was the military. With reference to this, the petitioners stated that the expense for the Queen's forces in India had considerably increased, and expressing satisfaction that the whole of the charges connected with the transport of the Indian troops to Malta had been defrayed out of the Imperial revenue. Lord Northbrook proceeded to say that it must now be recognised that the Indian troops of her Majesty were available for general purposes in cases of emergency; and he thought that the time had now arrived when some charges for troops serving in India should be revised on a more liberal footing towards India. The petitioners complained of the expenditure on public works, alleging a want of carefulness and economy on the part of Government, and complaining of a redundancy of the engineering staff. In connection with this subject he asked whether there was any intention on the part of the Government to give any guarantee for railways across Asia Minor, and quoted an adverse minute of the Government of India, dated June 8, 1871. He suggested the formation of the Provincial Council, composed of eminent natives. He called attention to the concluding terms of the petition, which complained of the imposition of new taxation, instead of obtaining funds by retrenchment. He then criticised the imposition of the new taxes—the License Tax, and the increased landcess, as hasty and unnecessary, as was proved by the recent reduction of the Salt Tax, which was the least oppressive, and created the least discontent of all taxes, whereas the new taxes were most unpopular and burdensome. He trusted the Government would take the finances of India into their serious consideration, and would do what they could to enable the Government of India to seize the first opportunity to take off the taxes which had been imposed. The noble lord concluded by moving for papers.—Lord CRANBROOK considered that the changes made would lay the foundation of a better fiscal system in India, and would lead to the redress of grievances. He was far from undervaluing the petition presented by the British Indian Association, but was not prepared to admit that it was anything like an accurate statement of the facts of the case, as it contained some most extraordinary mistakes, especially with respect to the non-effective charges. With reference to the question of military expenditure, he was anxious to arrive at a settlement between the War Office and India Office, and he never had taken any partisan view of the matter. It was not the desire of the Treasury or the War Office to impose any undue burdens on India, but when the petitioners complained that under the present system they paid differently from what they paid under the old Indian system they forgot that instead of sending out recruits India now received the manufactured article. The home charges were charges which solely affected India. Though they had troops in England which might be used for any great emergency, at the same time they were there prepared for the Indian market, and therefore India could not complain if that charge was put upon it. As to what had been arranged, there was every prospect of things being put on a sound footing. A disputed claim between the two offices, going on for many years, had been settled by the Imperial Government charging itself with the amount. This brought it to a conclusion, and after March next the matter would be settled. With respect to public works too great caution could not be exercised. The common notion that too much could not be spent on public works in India was a great delusion. Works might exceed in cost any compensating advantage to be derived from them; and such works there were already. But irrigation works and railways ought to be undertaken wherever it was reasonably probable that the benefits would be proportionate to the outlay. Railways were especially valuable if so planned as to furnish the means of supplying the needs of the people; and in the case of the late famine railways had contributed more than anything else to the saving of human life, because they rendered it possible to transport enormous masses of food, which could not otherwise have been conveyed to the people requiring it. As to engineers, Sir Andrew Clarke's recommendation was that we should not send too many incompletely educated engineers from the Cooper's-hill College, for fear there should not be full employment for those of subordinate attainments; and that recommendation had been attended to by his noble predecessor, who, while unable to prevent students from going out in accordance with the terms of their engagement, had persuaded one-half of those who might have done so to remain in this country and to study engineering works practically. No application had been made to him with respect to guarantees for railways in Asia Minor; but he should certainly consult the Government at home and the Government of India before in any way pledging himself, and the Government and the public would have full time to consider the question. In the general administration of India it was very desirable on many grounds, and means ought to be taken to provide for the employment of natives not only in the lower places open to competition, but also obtainable by the higher special fitness. As to the taxation complained of the chief object had been to equalise the Salt duties, to abolish the barbarous system of Customs lines, to reduce the transit duties, and to enter into engagements with the Governments of States producing salt in order that we might practically obtain control of the salt made in India. The abolition of the income-tax had made it needful to resort to new taxes to provide against the constantly-recurring famines. Already, by what had been done, the price, exclusive of duty, had been reduced from three rupees to less than one rupee per maund. It was desirable there should be a uniform salt-tax throughout India; and it would now be two rupees eight annas, or about three farthings a pound, which could not press hardly upon the natives. The depreciation of silver must exercise an injurious influence on the finance of India, but discussion seemed to show that it was beyond control, and that it must be left to the operation of those causes which regulated the price of every article. With regard to the licence and cess taxes it was on the agriculturists and small traders that the great weight of the famines fell, and they should pay to the fund which was to provide against future famines. The licence tax fell on the trader, but it was small; the cess tax fell on the agriculturist, and was levied, not on rent, but on the proprietor who received the rent, and it was so small in amount that it was perfectly certain not to fall on the occupier. He agreed with his noble friend that new taxes, whether at home or in India, were very undesirable things; but the first object in India should be to reduce taxation and expenditure and to do everything possible to make the two ends meet. But when famines or droughts had to be met over whole districts year after year, it became necessary to look about for some resource that might be permanently available; and with that view General Strachey had endeavoured to obtain £2,000,000 over expenditure—£500,000 in the shape of a surplus and £1,500,000 to be invested in reproductive works, so as to enable him, when famine came, to borrow money on the interest arising from the investment so made.—Lord NAPIER OF MAGDALA was understood to discountenance reductions in the army by way of diminishing expenditure. Then, with regard to public works, he thought no new works should be undertaken until greater progress was made with railways in India. It would be beneficial to give councils to Lieutenant-Governors of which natives of character and ability might be members, the expense to be met by reductions in the Civil Service.—The motion was then agreed to.

HOUSE OF COMMONS, MONDAY, Aug. 5.—In reply to Mr. HATYER, Colonel STANLEY said the amount taken in the Supplementary Estimates on account of the occupation of Cyprus was £10,000 for Staff, £25,000 for works, and £40,000 for stores.

In reply to Mr. C. B. DENISON, Mr. BOURKE said that the British Ambassador at St. Petersburg has been instructed to make inquiries of the Russian Government as to the purpose of the expedition to Balkh.

INDIAN EXCHANGES.—Sir G. CAMPBELL called attention to the excessive loss in the Indian exchanges, and made various suggestions for curing the evil. Among other things he asked the Government to consider whether it would be possible to establish equivalent silver coinages in the great silver-using countries, and also whether the disturbance might not be remedied by putting more silver into the rupee. He suggested, too, that a representative should be sent to the Conference proposed by the United States.—Mr. CAVE, who replied on behalf of the Government, doubted whether either of these expedients would be successful. To put more silver into the rupee would still further debase it, and, though it might be necessary at some time to face an alteration of the standard in India, he hoped a double standard would not be set up. The Government, he said, had appointed a delegate to attend the Conference.

HOUSE OF COMMONS, THURSDAY, Aug. 8.—TROOPS IN CYPRUS.—In Committee of Supply on the First Supplementary Vote of the Army, Mr. HAYTER moved to reduce the vote by £25,000, the charge for providing huts for the troops in Cyprus, and the Marquis of HARTINGTON took the opportunity of asking for some explanation of the reasons why the Indian troops had been sent to Cyprus. Colonel STANLEY, in his reply, corrected the impression that it was intended permanently to garrison the island with Indian troops, but said that as these troops happened to be available, and as they would have to return to India, it was thought advisable to make use of them for the first occupation, especially as they would be better posted at Cyprus than at Malta; he doubted that regiment for regiment they cost more than British troops. At present all his information was derived from private letters, but he believed the health of the troops was very good, and there was an ample supply of water. The Government had been asked how long they intended to keep the Indian troops in the Mediterranean. With regard to the question, they hoped that the emergency had subsided, and there was no sufficient reason for keeping them in the Mediterranean longer than necessary; and, accordingly, when the weather admitted, they would proceed on their homeward voyage and would return to India. A few horses might be left behind, but with that exception the bulk of the troops would be on their way home in the course of a month or five weeks. Much would depend on the weather, but that would be about the time of their return; and in the matter of horses it was particularly uncertain when they would be able to be moved through the Red Sea. As to the permanent garrison, Cyprus was not intended for a fortress like Malta or Gibraltar, and probably two battalions of European troops with a force of artillery would be sufficient.—Mr. T. CAVE, from personal experience in similar regions, bore testimony to the wisdom of lodging the troops in huts.—Mr. ONSLOW urged the Government not to withdraw the Indian troops until more light had been thrown on the designs of Russia on Afghanistan.—Mr. W. E. FORSTER complained of the meagre information furnished by the Secretary of State.—Sir W. BARTELOT, Mr. RYLANDS, Mr. E. JENKINS, Mr. RITCHIE, and Sir H. HAVELOCK spoke; and in reply to further questions from Mr. CHILDERS, the CHANCELLOR of the EXCHEQUER said that at present the island would be under the Foreign Office, but all matters as to finance, administration, &c., were in an undecided state, waiting for further information from the High Commissioner and the other officials.—Mr. CHILDERS and Mr. LOWE joined in recommending that the Colonial Office should have charge of the island, and Mr. HUBBARD was in favour of buying it out and out. The vote was then agreed to.

HOUSE OF COMMONS, FRIDAY, Aug. 9.—Mr. E. STANHOPE, replying to Mr. LEITH, said it was true that the Government of India, had, as an act of grace, ceded to the Maharajah Holkar of Indore territory to the extent of upwards of three hundred square miles, with the view of rectifying his frontier line. The territory was a tract of uncultivated and unhealthy country, and had been a perpetual sort of grievance, but the Maharajah attached great importance to it, and the cession had given him great satisfaction.

THE INDIAN BUDGET.—On Tuesday next, on the motion that Mr. Speaker leaves the chair to consider the Indian Financial Statement, Mr. Fawcett will move that this House regards with apprehension the present position of Indian finance, and in view of the power claimed by the Crown to employ any number of Indian troops in all parts of her Majesty's dominions except the United Kingdom, is of opinion that there is no sufficient security against the military expenditure of India being unduly increased.

Miscellaneous.

THE GREAT INDIAN PENINSULA RAILWAY COMPANY have made a call of £2 on the shares with £16 paid, payable on the 30th September.

EXPORT OF SPECIE.—For the East the Deccan has sailed with £54,830, £11,000 being in bar silver for Bombay, £30,000 in dollars for Penang, and £13,830 also in dollars for Shanghai.

BILLS ON INDIA.—Tenders were received at the Bank of England on Wednesday for £300,000 in bills on India. The amounts allotted were—to Calcutta, £219,637; to Bombay, £59,700; and to Madras, £20,662. Tenders on all Presidencies at 1s. 8d. will receive about 17 per cent.; above that price in full.

INDIAN TEA DISTRICT ASSOCIATION.—As an outcome of the recent deputation to the Secretary of State for India to present a memorial relative to Assam, a meeting was held on Thursday of the Assam Committee and some other gentlemen. It was resolved to take preliminary steps for the formation of an Indian Tea Districts Association, whose headquarters should be in London, and to invite the co-operation of all interested in the various Tea-growing districts of India.

BOOKS ON CYPRUS.—Cypriote literature is rapidly increasing, and people are getting beyond the stage when somebody remembered that St. Paul once preached in the island, and announced his discovery in the papers. Messrs. Macmillan and Co. have in preparation, and will publish in September, a volume on the history and present condition of Cyprus, by Mr. R. Hamilton Lang, late H.B.M. Consul in the island. Mr. Lang has contributed a paper on the subject of Cyprus to the August number of Macmillan. We may add that under the title of "New Greece," Messrs. Cassell, Petter and Galpin will shortly issue a volume by Mr. Lewis Sargeant, which will comprise a survey of the actual condition of the country at the present day and its history during the past few years. The work will be illustrated by two specially prepared maps.—Athenæum.

THE INDIAN TELEGRAPHS.—The Indo-European Telegraph Company (Limited) give notice that an extraordinary general meeting of the company will be held at their Offices, 16, Telegraph-street, Moorgate-street, on Friday, the 23rd day of August, "for the purpose of considering, and, if so determined, approving or adopting, and authorising the carrying out of a co-operative working agreement between the Indo-European Telegraph Department of her Majesty's Indian Government, the Eastern Telegraph Company, Limited, and the Indo-European Telegraph Company (Limited), relative to the division between the three administrations of the revenue derived from the transmission of Indian and Trans-Indian messages, and of passing such resolution or resolutions in regard thereto as may be approved."—Pall Mall Gazette.

SUPPOSED SHIPWRECK.—All hope has been given up of the safety of the clipper ship St. Enoch, of Dundee, which sailed from that port on 24th March with a cargo of coal for Bombay, and has not since been heard of. Others vessels which left at the same time have arrived out and home again. The St. Enoch was a vessel, of 1,854 tons, was built in Dundee in 1874, and was considered one of the finest clipper ships afloat. She was commanded by Captain Browne, and carried a crew of thirty-five hands. The captain's wife was also on board. When the St. Enoch sailed terrible weather prevailed in the Channel, and it is feared that she then foundered or sank after collision. The owners have received a communication from the British Consul at Havre stating that a bundle of papers marked as belonging to Peter Macpherson, one of the crew of the St. Enoch, had been picked up on the French coast. An agent was at once despatched from Dundee to make the necessary inquiries. Nearly all the crew belonged to Dundee. The value of the ship and cargo is estimated at £35,000.

THE INDIAN VERNACULAR PRESS ACT.—On behalf of the Bombay branch of the East India Association, Mr. J. Farley Leith, M.P., has just presented to the House of Commons a petition condemnatory of the new Indian Vernacular Press Act. The petitioners contend that the measure is one of an entirely retrograde character, quite out of harmony with the principles on which the British administration of India has been hitherto conducted, and that it is calculated in its actual working to aggravate the very mischief it is designed to prevent. The strongest objections are expressed to the investment of new powers in the hands of the executive officers, and it is pointed out that the measure is one of several recent Acts, excluding the ordinary courts of law from jurisdiction. Representing the strong and unanimous public feeling in Bombay, the petitioners submit that no case whatever has been made out for exceptional and extraordinary legislation like that in the new Act, instituting as it does a policy which arrests the political and intellectual progress of the country, and deprives the people of India of a vital portion of those public rights which they had long thought perfectly secure to them under the joint protection of Crown and Parliament.

INDIAN TROOPSHIPS.—The programme of the movements of her Majesty's Indian troopships for the season 1878-9 has just been issued. The following are the outward departures:—The Euphrates leaves Portsmouth on Sept. 17, arriving at Bombay about Oct. 22; on December 13, arriving at Bombay on Jan. 12; and on March 6, arriving at Bombay on April 5. The Junna leaves on Sept. 26, arriving on Oct. 26; on Dec. 17, arriving on Jan. 16; and on March 9, arriving on April 8. The Crocodile leaves on Oct. 1, arriving on Nov. 8; and on Jan. 16, arriving on Feb. 18. The Serapis leaves on Oct. 15, arriving on Nov. 22; and on Jan. 30, arriving on March 4. The Malabar leaves on Oct. 29 and Feb. 13, arriving at Bombay on Dec. 6 and March 18. The homeward arrangements are as follows:—The Euphrates leaves Bombay on Oct. 30, arriving at Portsmouth on Nov. 29; on Jan. 21, arriving on Feb. 20; and on April 13, arriving on May 15. The Junna leaves on Nov. 3, arriving on Dec. 3; on Jan. 24, arriving on Feb. 23; and on April 16, arriving on March 18. The Crocodile leaves on Nov. 22, arriving on Dec. 25 and on March 5, arriving on April 7. The Serapis leaves on Dec. 6, arriving on Jan. 8; and on March 19, arriving on April 21. The Malabar leaves on Dec. 20, arriving on Jan. 22; and on April 2, arriving on May 5. Each ship will call at Malta for coal on the outward and homeward voyages; and on one of the homeward voyages a regiment will be disembarked at Aden, and another regiment will be brought to Portsmouth. The numbers to be accommodated on board the troopships are fifty-seven officers, thirty members of officers' families, six female servants, twelve staff ser-

NOTES ON MUHAMMADANISM.

REV. T. P. HUGHES, M.R.A.S.,
C. M. S., Missionary to the Afghans, Peshawar.

Opinions of the Press on the First Edition.
"Altogether an admirable little book. It combines two excellent qualities, abundance of facts and lack of theories. . . . On every one of the numerous heads (over fifty) into which the book is divided Mr. Hughes furnishes a large amount of very valuable information, which it would be exceedingly difficult to collect from even a large library of works on the subject. The book might well be called a 'Dictionary of Muhammadan Theology,' for we know of no English work which combines a methodical arrangement (and consequently facility of reference), with fulness of information in so high a degree as the little volume before us."—The Academy.

"It contains multum in parvo, and is about the best outline of the tenets of the Muslim faith which we have seen. It has, moreover, the rare merit of being accurate; and although it contains a few passages which we would gladly see expunged, it cannot fail to be useful to all Government employes who have to deal with Muhammadans, whilst to Missionaries it will be invaluable."—The Times of India.

"This small book is the most luminous, most convenient, and, we think, the most accurate, outline of the tenets and practices of Islamism that we have met with.
It seems exactly the sort of comprehensive and trustworthy book in small compass, on this subject, that we
and many more have often looked for in vain. . . .
The author has evidently studied his subject in a faithful, laborious, and scholarly manner, and has not only studied but mastered it. The work is of great value for general students, and for men whose work lies among the Mussulman population, such as Civil Servants and Missionaries, it seems to be the very work that is wanted."—The Friend of India.

"In brief compass it contains a large amount of reliable information. Instead of theories and fancies, facts are placed before us. Muhammadanism is represented as it really is, not as it is supposed that it might possibly be. Instead of retailing the speculations current in literary society at home, Mr. Hughes furnishes us with brief but incisive statements, which, so far as they go, leave nothing to be desired."—The Church Missionary Intelligence.

"Its value as a means of correcting the common impressions about Islam will reveal itself to the most casual reader, while the author's evident scholarship and intimate knowledge of his subject bespeak for him
a patient hearing on points the most open to controversy."—Allen's Indian Mail.

THE ORIGINAL AND ONLY GENUINE.

CHLORODYNE is admitted by the Profession to be the most wonderful and valuable remedy ever discovered. CHLORODYNE is the best remedy known for Coughs, Consumption, Bronchitis, Asthma. CHLORODYNE effectually checks and arrests those too often fatal diseases—Diphtheria, Fever, Croup, Ague. CHLORODYNE acts like a charm in Diarrhoea, and is the only specific in Cholera and Dysentery. CHLORODYNE effectually cuts short all attacks of Epilepsy, Hysteria, Palpitation, and Spasms. CHLORODYNE is the only palliative in Neuralgia, Rheumatism, Gout, Cancer, Toothache, Meningitis, &c.
Earl Russell communicated to the College of Physicians that he had received a despatch from her Majesty's Consul at Manila, to the effect that Cholera has been raging fearfully, and that the ONLY remedy of any service was CHLORODYNE.—See Lancet, 1st Dec., 1861.

CAUTION.—BEWARE OF PIRACY AND IMITATIONS.

CAUTION.—Vice-Chancellor Sir W. PAGE WOOD stated that Dr. J. COLLIS BROWNE was, undoubtedly, the Inventor of CHLORODYNE: that the story of the Defendant, Freeman, was deliberately untrue, which, he regretted to say, had been sworn to.—See Times, 13th July, 1861.

PROSPECTUS.

1.—The extraordinary success and popularity which have attended the working of well-regulated Co-operative Societies in England have induced the Committee of The Indian Co-operative Agency, Limited, to establish this Association for the purpose of supplying the Officers and Men of Her Imperial Majesty's Forces, Members of the Civil and Unconquered Services, Railway Officials, Contractors, Planters and all others, in India, British Burmah, and Ceylon, with every article in domestic and general use, at the lowest possible price.

2.—This Agency does not propose to establish Store Rooms or Warehouses; it thereby avoids the large outlay which other societies have incurred. It will simply have Offices in London, and a Sample Room, where orders will be received and the general business of the Association conducted.

3.—The high prices of English goods in India are caused by the oft-recurring and various charges between the place of manufacture, or original purchase, and the place of delivery.

The manufacturer, wholesale dealer, retailer, broker, shipping agent, inland carrier, and, finally, the tradesman in India, have each their own profit to make, besides the duties and additional charges imposed to make good loss by deterioration of stock, breakage, bad debts and long credit.

It is not too much to say that the cost of most articles of general consumption in India is at least doubled before the goods reach the consumer. Under the principle adopted by The Indian Co-operative Agency, the goods will be supplied to the consumer direct from the manufacturer or wholesale dealer.

The saving effected by the purchase of goods from this agency, for cash, is thus very considerable. It has been estimated that in England, the benefits to a family, under the co-operative system, amount to an average economy of 25 per cent., and this saving is effected in dealings with societies which have expended vast sums in the purchase and storage of stock, much of it of a perishable character, rent of warehouses and other premises, establishments, &c., &c. It may be fairly estimated that, under the principle adopted by this Association, the saving to a family will amount—according to the class of goods supplied—to from 40 to 50 per cent.; taking, therefore, a monthly expenditure of 100 rupees, there is a monthly saving of 40 to 50 rupees.

4.—In proportion to the support it receives from India, this Association proposes to develop itself into a general Agency on co-operative principles, in which entirely new features will be introduced; and, as business extends, each department will be under the superintendence of an Official of experience, specially qualified for the duties assigned to him.

Besides the comprehensive branches of business embraced under clause 1 of this prospectus, the Indian Co-operative Agency proposes to open out, as early as possible, the following departments, viz.:

EDUCATIONAL DEPARTMENT.

In this department, arrangements will be made for receiving the Children of Parents absent in India on landing in England; placing them at selected Establishments; auditing and discharging School bills; corresponding with Parents; providing accommodation for native Students, &c., &c.

LITERARY DEPARTMENT.

Will answer references on every subject; supply, and, if required, select books, serials, &c., to Station and Regimental Libraries, Messes and Schools, at very reduced rates. In connection with this department, arrangements will be made for the establishment of Reading Rooms, supplied with the Indian and London papers.

SERVICE DEPARTMENT.

In this department it is proposed to register applications for employment by persons of all classes of Her Imperial Majesty's subjects in India without fee or charge, and to assist them in obtaining the same. Assistance will be given to Soldiers of the Indian Army, or who have served in India, to become Commissionaires, Messengers, &c., &c.

LEGAL DEPARTMENT.

The Solicitor of the Agency and others will, at minimum cost to Members, instruct counsel in all cases referred: will obtain opinions of leading Members of the legal profession on difficult points, and will carry cases from India through the superior Courts in England.

GENERAL DEPARTMENT.

Native Gentlemen and others visiting England will be received, and suitable accommodation secured for them. Native Secretaries and Translators will be employed to communicate with the Ministers of Native Independent and Tributary States, and native Gentlemen of rank, and every facility will be afforded for acquaintance of the languages of India.

5.—The management of the affairs of The Indian Co-operative Agency is vested in a Committee of Gentlemen who have been long connected with India, and are intimately acquainted with the wants and requirements of the Indian public, or who command a large commercial acquaintance and influence in the City of London.

6.—The Committee, all of whom are Shareholders, and interested in the success of the undertaking, are not to receive any remuneration for their services until a dividend of 5 per cent. has been declared to the Shareholders.

7.—The first principle of the Association is that of Cash Payment, without which orders will remain unexecuted. Orders accompanied by a Deposit Receipt from the Agency's Bankers in India will be dealt with as cash payments. Currency Notes will be received in payment at the exchange of the day.

8.—For the present it is only intended to issue 10,000 Shares, 5,000 of which are reserved for India, and to call up, in respect of them, five shillings per share.

9.—The liability of Shareholders, it will be distinctly understood, is limited to the amount of shares held by them. Life Members (non-shareholders) will be admitted upon payment of 10 Rupees in India, or £1 in England. Such Members will not be entitled to participate in the profits, except such as may be given as a "bonus," but will share in all the other advantages of the Association.

10.—An Agreement bearing date the First day of April, 1874, and made between William Drew of the one part, and Thomas Woollams Holland, Lambart Cowan, and Frederick Montague Raynsford, for and on behalf of the said Indian Co-operative Agency, Limited, of the other part, has been entered into, which can be seen at the Office of the Solicitor of the Company.

11.—All Cheques and Post Office Orders to be made payable to the Manager, Delhi and London Bank, Limited, London. All letters to be addressed to The Indian Co-operative Agency, Limited, 26, Holborn Viaduct, London.

Summary and Review.

OUR latest advices by the Overland Mail are, from Bombay, July 26; Allahabad and Madras, July 24; Calcutta, July 23.

The promise of abundant rainfall all over India, which our Bombay contemporary notes up to date, has continued to be fulfilled, with slight exceptions. The most recent weather summary received by the mail is rendered out of date by the telegram of the Times, which gives what we may presume to be the summary up to the beginning of last week. A good deal of rain has fallen throughout the west coast district, the north-east coast, in the ceded districts of Madras, and in Kurnool. In the south-east coast district the fall has been slight. General prospects are reported good. The total number on the works is 124,000, and those gratuitously fed 75,746, the figures being less by 2,963 and more by 777 respectively than last week. A general rain is reported throughout Mysor. Prices have slightly fallen, and prospects are favourable. On the works the number is 31,064, and those gratuitously fed 12,643, being less by 2,064 and 773 respectively than last week. There has been a heavy rain in all parts of the Bombay Presidency, including Sindh. The damage from floods in Sindh and in Guzerat is excessive. The rain is causing injury to crops, though the prospects are generally excellent. There has been a good rain in the Central Provinces, and in Central India a fair fall, and throughout Malwa. The state of Bundelkund gives cause for anxiety, the distress increasing. In Rajpootana prospects are good; in Northern Bengal there is some damage from floods, but more rain is required in certain districts; in Assam the floods in the valley districts are subsiding; in the North-West Provinces prospects are favourable. From Kashmir reports are very gloomy. The Durbar is said to be thoroughly aroused to the appalling state of affairs. The last recorded famine in Kashmir was more than 100 years ago. The authorities are buying grain in large quantities, and everywhere their efforts are being seconded by the Government. Relief works are being started in all directions, and a mixed committee of Hindus and Mussulmans are working together to relieve distress. At Srinuggur the case is as bad as it can be. Telegraphic reports from Jacobabad state that the Indus flood has passed through the Nurwah at several points between Jacobabad and Sirhee. Part of the Jacobabad Talook is under water, the town is surrounded, and much damage has been done to the crops and canals. By this and the floods from the Mula, Bolan, Lahri, and Shalhpore rivers, which came down repeatedly in flood, the Kustore Bund is hopelessly breached.

AN application was recently submitted to the Governor of Madras, by Mr. A. de Closets, for sanction to a scheme of constructing a light railway on the metre gauge. The line proposed is to start from the Palar river, where it is crossed by the South Indian Railway, to Cuddalore, and run in a south-eastern direction for forty-eight miles through the salt-producing localities of Seyour, Chinampett, Mercanum, &c., with a terminus in the French settlement of Pondicherry. The project is supported by the Zemindar and salt manufacturers, and he intends to revive the salt manufactures of the districts traversed, and by connecting with the Madras Railway at Arconum, through Chingleput and Conjeveram, as well as with Madras by the South Indian Railway, to supply the Western districts. The projector's petition for sanction and for the grant of waste lands and the necessary powers of acquisition of property has been granted, subject to the conditions that the waste lands if not used for the railway shall revert to Government, and that proof shall be given of the rights of proprietors having been fully satisfied, and the works be subjected to Government inspection. This is the first railway projected as a private enterprise in India, and the estimated cost will amount to twelve lakhs.

IT will be in the remembrance of some of our readers that last August a party of police stationed at the Kachkol bridge, near Edwardesabad, were attacked, and three of them murdered by some hill robbers. The assailants were discovered to have taken shelter in Daur, and as surrender of the criminals was refused, the whole of Daru was placed under blockade. The tribe having recently, in lieu of surrendering, which they declared to be impossible, consented to pay a fine of Rs. 3,500, the blockade has now been raised.

BRITISH BURMAH has been suffering from a severe visitation of cholera. In Rangoon processions of pious Mohammedans perambulate the streets chanting hymns to Allah for the suppression of the plague. Moulmein, Prome, and Akyab have all suffered severely, and the disease has found its way by the main water routes all over the interior, committing sad havoc in the village. In Moulmein an excessive mortality prevailed amongst the convicts, which was only arrested by the removal of two hundred prisoners to an unoccupied barrack. Moulmein appears to be peculiarly exposed to epidemics; fever, cholera, and small-pox hold festival there in turn, mainly, it would appear, on account of the defective sanitation which is tolerated by the municipality.

THE Times correspondent telegraphs that a despatch relating to the Jowaki campaign was published in the last Gazette. The Viceroy thanks the generals and soldiers for their services. The secretary of the Punjab Government draws attention to the remarkable change effected in border warfare by breech-loaders. The result of the campaign proves conclusively that the coercion of any hill tribes is now a matter of comparative

THE St. Petersburg journals have endeavoured to show that the Russian movements in Turkestan belonged to the period of doubt before the certainty of peace was established. Rumours have been current also of disasters having befallen certain portions of the Russian columns. But there exists no doubt as to the fact that the Indian Government has received information from Kabul announcing that a Russian mission, consisting of three European officers, and escorted by Cossacks and Usbeks, arrived there on the 22nd of July, and were received by the Amir of Afghanistan at a durbar, when the chief of the mission delivered to the Amir a letter from the Emperor of Russia, and the Governor of the Russian province of Samarcand one from the Governor-General of Turkestan. Subsequently, on August 2, a grand review was held in honour of the Russians, to which troops and representatives had been summoned from all parts of Afghanistan. The replies of the Amir were sent by special messenger to Tashkend. The Government of India, according to a Bombay telegram of the 12th inst., decided, in order to counteract the Russian influence, to send a special mission under General Sir Neville Chamberlain, and comprising Majors Cavagnari and St. John, whose opinions on Kabul we quote elsewhere, Captain Hammick, and a medical officer. The Times correspondent considers that the Government have acted most judiciously in the selection of Sir N. Chamberlain as chief envoy. He is a distinguished officer, a tried campaigner, and is believed to be better acquainted with the frontier tribes than any living officer. He is a good linguist, a shrewd tactician, and withal a courteous gentleman. His name and powers are well known in Kabul, and he is likely to be seen by many who will by no means look upon him now for the first time. Major Cavagnari is a most dashing soldier, and has won for himself numberless laurels for his many gallant exploits in border warfare. He will doubtless prove a worthy lieutenant to his distinguished chief. By the telegram dated Calcutta, Aug. 18, we learn that General Sir Neville Chamberlain is expected to arrive at Simla on Friday next, and will there await the Amir's reply to the proposal to receive an English Mission at Kabul. The escort of the Mission will consist of 300 sabres. Colonel Jenkins will command the Guides Cavalry and Major Prinsep the Bengal Cavalry. The attitude of sulky hostility which the Amir has so long maintained towards the Indian Government renders the despatch of this Mission very critical. It may perhaps be intended to somewhat assist the decision of the Amir, that after numerous contradictory statements it is now definitely announced that a winter camp of exercise shall be formed at Hassan Abdal, in the Punjab.

FROM a Reuter's telegram, dated St. Petersburg, August 17, we learn that it is officially announced that Lieut.-Colonel Maeff, who was despatched on a mission by the Governor-General of Russian Turkestan, returned to Tashkend on June 16 last, after an absence of eighteen days, during which he surveyed the roads in the Amu-Daria district. Colonel Maeff proceeded to Karschi for the purpose of obtaining an audience of the Emir of Bokhara to explain to him the object of his mission. He travelled from Dschama to Tschiraktschi, and visited Karabat and Gusar. The latter place, being a considerable trading station, was selected as the starting point of the expedition. After leaving Gusar, Colonel Maeff surveyed the road leading to Derbent and Shirabad, and the Amu-Daria, Karakamar, and the Keliff passes. The mountain road leading from Kelif in the straight direction to Gusar was also visited. Lieutenant-Colonel Maeff is the first European by whom those roads have been visited. The map of the Zissar district has been completed by the important information gained by the expedition concerning the mountain ranges and other geographical features of the country.

THE strategic importance of Persia, as regarded any Russian movement down the valley of the Tigris, formed the subject of a recent discussion at the United Service Institution, Simla. Major St. John, at the request of the Commander-in-Chief, stated his opinion that the hope of invading India through Affghanistan certainly prevails in the Russian army. But it is encouraged by the Government of Russia only in order to mask their projects in the Tigris valley, and force India into letting Turkey shift for herself. The line of advance even from Turkestan would require enormous preparations. Two years are requisite to relieve the garrisons there, numbering 80,000, and an advance to Merv, 140 miles from the Oxus, and 400 from the Caspian, would be immensely difficult. It would be possible, by long delay, to restore to cultivation the desolate districts between Merv and Herat, and so support an army en route. But the main object of Russia in trying to obtain Merv is a commercial and military road to the Oxus from the Caspian, which would save the two years' delay of transport to Samarkand. Thus the Russians would be able to exercise a disturbing influence, and create disorder in India. They would gladly see Herat in Persian hands, and desire that we should occupy Afghanistan, so as to divert our attention from their real object, viz., to obtain possession of the valley of the Tigris, down to the Gulf, so as to cut off the land communication between Europe and India. It is a fixed Russian idea that any railway between Europe and India ought to pass through Russian territory. The Russians consider that Afghanistan would give us quite enough to do, but in Major St. John's opinion, the difficulties of occupation of that country have been much overrated.

THE Indian Press animadverted on the recent discussion in England of the Euphrates Valley Railway, and the Pioneer seems to doubt that anything new can be said, especially as to the line from Tripoli to Kowait, and thence "skirting" through the Persian Gulf and the Mekran to Kurachi. The Pioneer only comprehends the advocacy of this line, from its remembrance that the author, in 1874, "broached the possibility of a Russian army marching across Persia and Beloochistan to the Indus." This is a novel exercise of memory, and though doubtless unintentional, a very strange perversion of the real statement, which, in justice to Sir F. Goldsmid, we give in full:—"We cannot contemplate the successful passage of an army, according to the European acceptance of the word, through even a third of the distance (between Euzeli and Gwadar), unless, indeed, the whole resources of Persia and Baluchistan were combined for its provision, and the inhabitants determined to make its way smooth." We do not recollect that the substitution of the Coast Railway for the sea-transit to Karachi was advocated by the proposer of the Tripoli and Kowait line. It is, however, evident, that the hypothetical march of an invading army was not treated as a "possibility."

THE Times correspondent recently telegraphed that stern necessity demanding everywhere the most strenuous economy, the Government of India has been induced to appoint a committee to report upon the best mode of revising certain secretarial and other Government establishments. The resolution states that no general review of the secretarial and other establishments has been made for a long time, and that special circumstances have rendered it expedient to reconsider the strength of these offices and other Imperial departments, to examine them thoroughly with regard to their mutual relation, and so arrive at a decision as to whether changes suggested by the experience of one office may not be advantageously adopted in another, in promotion of the general cause of economy and good management.

THE same authority states that the accounts of trade and navigation for the first quarter of the current financial year show that as compared with the corresponding period of last year the gross amount of import duty collected, including salt duty, was 9,923,644, against 10,784,574 rupees; and of export duty, 1,532,081 as against 1,802,778 rupees.

IN few, if any, countries have railways succeeded better than in Ceylon, so that it is not to be wondered at if the colonists are constantly urging on Government their extension. From the last report on the main line from Colombo to Kandy we see that in May last the Crown Agents for the Colonies paid £250,000 to the debenture-holders out of the sinking fund created to pay off the railway debt. This will leave only a balance of £350,000 still due, viz., £250,000 due 15th May, 1882, £100,000 due 15th November, 1883. To meet this debt the fund has above £150,000 at present in hand, and by the time the instalments become due it will have accumulated to £400,000, when further contributions from the revenue will become unnecessary. Sixteen years, therefore, after the railway was opened fully for traffic, the railway will pass over to the colony free, a valuable property yielding over 10 per cent. per annum, clear, on the capital expenditure. A payment out of revenue of Rs. 5,80,000 per annum has sufficed to pay interest and form a sinking fund, and all this time the railway has been contributing in increasing proportion to the revenue.

THE City article of the Times of Tuesday last, in commenting on the new Transfer Loan, an advertisement of which appears in our columns, characterised the scheme for giving a fixed rate of interest to holders of rupee paper as ingenious but not satisfactory. The reason given was that the holders who should convert their bonds for the notes of the second form would incur an annual loss of interest. This, however, is not the view entertained by that great authority, the Right Hon. J. G. Hubbard. In the course of his speech on the Indian Budget the Member for the City of London described the Transfer Loan of 1879 as offered in two forms. The first form is for a  $4\frac{1}{2}$  per cent. Rupee Loan, the capital lent, the interest paid, and the reimbursement being all in coined silver. The second form, designated "Transfer Loan, 1879," Seven Shillings per Cent. Portion, fixes for Rs. 1,000 a sterling value (at 1s. 9d. per rupee) of £87. 10s., of which the interest at 7s. per Rs. 100 is £3. 10s., or "an effective interest" on the investment of 4 per cent. In this portion of the Loan, the capital lent, the half-yearly interest and the reimbursement at or after 1893 are all sterling, as between the two Portions the First is a Rupee Loan at  $4\frac{1}{2}$  per cent., the second a sterling loan at 4 per cent. As to the relative rates, Mr. Hubbard thought it would be very interesting to learn the grounds of the estimate of future exchanges which has led the Government of India to offer the large difference of  $\frac{1}{2}$  per cent. per annum for a loan in Silver above the rate offered for the Gold Loan.

THE thieves who were concerned in cutting down the telegraph wires near Quettah have been arrested by their tribesmen, and handed over to the British Political officer for punishment.

WHO can be the heroes of the strange, but, according to the belief of the Pioneer, a true story, illustrative of the credulity of some London tradesmen? An enterprising firm of stamp vendors remitted £15 in favour of the Postmasters of Herat and Candahar for local postage stamps of like value. The money seems to have been duly acknowledged by the Amir's Postmaster at Peshawar, but the firm have now sought the assistance of Government to obtain them some more substantial return for their money. Can it be that our London friends conceive that civilisation to the extent of post-offices has extended to the heart of Central Asia?

WE mentioned recently the projected Roman-Urdu journal which has now been started in Lahor as the organ of those who desire to substitute Roman for vernacular characters. The first issue, according to a correspondent of the Pioneer, quotes, in support of the change as regards the Persian characters, a case which occurred in the Chief Court a short time ago. In a heavy charge of robbery with violence the first police report stated that the police had gone to the house of the accused, and, finding him absent, waited for him; but that immediately on his return home a jama talashi or clothes' search took place, and the stolen property was found. The evidence recorded at the trial was unanimous on this point; that the property was on the man's person in his clothes. Now, at the preliminary hearing, the word in the vernacular was read glibly as khana talashi (house search), the first letters being identical in each case without the diacritical points, and the third very nearly so. The learned judge having at once noted the discrepancy, admitted the appeal, and the man's conviction was in great danger of being upset, when it was discovered in Court that the word was not khana but jama. The appeal was of course dismissed, but justice was very near being undone owing to that awkward character. Such mistakes as these would hardly be possible if the proposed change was made from the Oriental to the Roman characters.

AMONG the illustrations of the "extreme poverty" of the natives of India, and of the numerous petitions against oppressive taxation, one is quoted by the Indian Daily News which should interest Sir W. Lawson. The Parsee liquor shopkeepers of Bombay have petitioned the local Government against the large fees charged for licenses. The strongest argument which the liquor shopkeepers advance in favour of their petition is as follows:—"This our liquor is mostly consumed by poor classes of people, by hamals, labourers, coolies, &c., who earn monthly from five rupees to ten rupees. To them it is one of the daily necessities of life, and owing to the increased rate they are unable to buy it in a quantity sufficient to give them rest."

SUFFERERS from prickly-heat will be glad to know that a simple cure has been discovered for this distressing ailment. In an article in the Indian Medical Gazette, Surgeon-Major French states that painting the parts affected with a solution of sulphate of copper—ten grains to an ounce of water—is an almost certain cure, and that all his old patients use it regularly. He advises its application immediately after a bath, when the pores are open, and that it should be freely applied with a brush or sponge, and allowed to dry on the part. If the disease is very severe, it should be applied twice a day; but if not, once a day, for about four days, effects a cure. He does not believe in the old idea that driving in or checking prickly-heat does any harm, and points out that the use of alcoholic drinks and high living always induce attacks in those liable to it. Flannel next to the skin makes it worse by keeping the perspiration in contact with the body, and he advises cotton, or linen, to be worn.

AT the Prorogation of Parliament, which took place on Friday, reference to our responsibility as guarantors of Asiatic Turkey and the occupation of Cyprus was made in the following passages of her Majesty's Message, which also contained a most gracious eulogium on the loyalty and conduct of the Indian Contingent, as well as on the proffers of service made by the Native Princes:—

I have concluded a Defensive Convention with the Sultan, which has been laid before you. It gives, as regards his Asiatic Empire, a more distinct expression to the engagements which in principle I, together with other Powers, accepted in 1856, but of which the form has not been found practically effectual. The Sultan has, on the other hand, bound himself to adopt and carry into effect the measures necessary for securing the good government of those provinces. In order to promote the objects of this Agreement, I have undertaken the occupation and administration of the Island of Cyprus.

In aiding to bring about the settlement which has taken place, I have been assisted by the discipline and high spirit of my forces by sea and by land, by the alacrity with which my Reserves responded to my call, by the patriotic offers of military aid by my people in the Colonies, and by the proud desire of my Indian Army to be reckoned among the defenders of the British Empire, a desire justified by the soldierly qualities of the force recently quartered at Malta.

The spontaneous offers of troops made by many of the Native Governments in India were very gratifying to me, and I recognise in them a fresh manifestation of that feeling towards my Crown and person which has been displayed in many previous instances.

RECENT telegrams from Larnaca inform us that the Malda, the Madura, and the Cunara have sailed for Bombay with the 25th Infantry, and that preparations are being made to despatch all the transports on similar service during the present month. The Tamar is intended to sail on the 21st with a portion of the contingent, and a battery of Artillery. The health of the remaining garrison is improving, or rather the worst is over of the sickness, which has been a species of sun fever of a light kind, sometimes turning into ague, but scarcely in any case dangerous. As the heat even in the hospital marque reached 100 degs., the result is hardly to be wondered at that the men in the bell tents suffer from sickness.

THE Special Correspondent of the Standard at Larnaca sends the following summary of the result of investigations which have been instituted in regard to the present geographical, topographical, and social condition of the Island of Cyprus:—

[There are 220,000 people in Cyprus, three-fourths of whom are Christians. In Nicosia the Moslems are in the majority, and are fanatical, but the Christians are in a great majority everywhere else. The inhabitants generally are peacefully disposed, lazy, tolerant to strangers, fond of pleasure, and somewhat addicted to intemperance, but robbery and murder are unknown among them. Midsummer is the worst season of the year for health. The rural districts are, however, nearly free from fever. The Turkish soldiers in Cyprus number 500; besides which there are also 275 zaptiehs, or Turkish policemen. Nicosia is protected by ramparts, which are armed with forty ancient cannon, capable of no very great defensive operations. Famagusta is surrounded by walls of some strength, but they stand in need of a proper armament. Baffo and Larnaca are weakly protected from the sea. Kyussia can be made a formidable stronghold. Limasol and Famagusta are the only ports where the landing of troops can be easily accomplished. At Larnaca there is no rainfall during ten months of the year, but when the rains set in they are more like torrents sweeping down from the far-away mountains than what Western Europeans are accustomed to. These torrent beds are perfectly dry during the two summer months. There are three aqueducts, which usually contain good water. About one-fourth of the land has been cultivated. The land in the north is mostly held by peasant proprietors, but a few of the estates reach to as great an extent as 3,000 acres. The ordinary crop-bearing ground fetches £3 an acre, and the cotton-producing ground £10. The exports exceed the imports by considerably over £200,000. A large trade is done in wool and locust beans, which are extensively exported to Austria and Russia. The cotton grown in Cyprus is from American seed, and is excellent, and the trade in cotton is being gradually developed. Some trade is also done in tobacco and in madder, but the cultivation of these articles wants encouragement. Copper and splendid asbestos are to be found near Baffo, and amber and coppers near Larnaca. There are salt lakes in the island of great extent, and very lucrative; they are Government property. Turkey drew over £200,000 yearly profit out of the island, but the sources from which this sum came can be easily so managed as to produce half a million sterling, and the island be benefited in the process. The revenue of the island is derived principally from agricultural tithes, duties on wine and stamps, a sheep tax, and a salt monopoly. The administration of the several local councils and law courts has been exercised by Moslems and Christians, all of whom have been elected by the people. The administrators who were found existing have been allowed to continue their functions under the control of a British Court of Appeal. At Nicosia the Christians are in the enjoyment of civil and religious freedom. One archbishop and three bishops of the Greek Church were elected by the people, and their position and dignity were respected by the Turkish Government.

Odds and Ends.

COLONEL GODFREY CLERK, the popular Military Secretary to the Commander-in-Chief, will shortly leave India, in consequence of his recall home on promotion to a pueca Lieutenant-Colonelship in the second Battalion of the Royal Brigade, Prince Consort's Own. The Madras Times, while congratulating Colonel Clerk on his promotion, says:—"We are but uttering the sentiments of every officer in the Presidency when we express our regret at this command losing the services of so valuable a Military Secretary, whose affability, tact and sterling honesty have commended him to each and all."

The Bombay Gazette quotes a statement that the eminent townsman of Calcutta, Raja Saurendra Nath Tagor, has been created by the King of Saxony a Commander of the First Class of the Order of Albrecht, in recognition of his efforts in the cause of Sanskrit scholarship, and more especially in promoting the knowledge and cultivation of Indian music.

AFTER a service in the corps of twenty-one years, the Honourable J. G. Coleman has resigned his commission as Lieutenant-Colonel of the Madras Volunteer Guards.

MR. J. C. BATCHELOR, traffic manager of the East Indian Railway, died suddenly, of heart disease, at Calcutta, on Monday 22nd July.

THE prohibition on furlough to Europe, and general leave of absence in India, to European Officers, and also to soldiers of the Native Army, has been removed.

THE recent issue of improved weapons to the British Cavalry is to be followed up by a similar measure in this country. Breech-loaders, in place of muzzle-loaders, are to be given to all the Native Cavalry immediately.

A TELEGRAM had been received by the Indian Daily News from Colonel Wyndham, stating that he was illegally imprisoned at Mandalay, and that his Majesty of the Golden Foot had threatened to put him in irons.

THE latest accounts of the health of Bishop Caldwell describe him as having somewhat recovered from the sudden attack of illness which occurred on the 23rd ult. at Edeyengoody.

THE prize of Rs. 200, offered by the Chief Commissioner of British Burma for the best translation into Burmese of a portion of Mr. Buck's note on tobacco cultivation and curing, has been awarded to Mr. W. Savage, of Akyab.

THE Madras Government has passed an order prohibiting the sale of lands known to possess quartz, or alluvium containing gold.

A STRANGE kind of destructive insect, totally distinct from the locust, is, the local papers say, ravaging Travancore.

NINE seamen have been sentenced to long terms of imprisonment in Bombay for disobedience and refusal to do duty, and a large number of captains have publicly expressed their satisfaction at the fact, because they contend that the lengths to which sailors in Bombay harbour were going, in consequence of being leniently dealt with, were becoming a serious commercial danger.

THE Syndicate of the Bombay University have selected as the Wilson Philological Lecturer, for the season of 1878-79, Mr. Edward Rehatsek, M.C.E. Probably the subject will be Arabic and the Semitic tongues cognate therewith, as the lecturer is skilled in that domain. He is also a good Persian scholar and a European linguist. The name seems to betoken Hungarian origin, but Mr. Rehatsek has been settled in Bombay many years.

STEPS, we hear, are about to be at once set on foot by the Mohammedan community with a view to getting up some suitable memorial of the late Professor Blochmann.

THE revenue from four sales of Bengal opium and three months' duty on opium exported from Bombay amounts to Rs. 2,95,01,150, which is Rs. 43,47,150 better than the estimated revenue. Of this latter amount Bengal opium has realised Rs. 17,93,600 and Bombay Rs. 25,53,550.

THE Gorain who committed the horrible murder of a boy at Neriah has been sentenced to imprisonment for life by the Native District Sessions Judge, Mr. Tagore, on the ground that the crime was unpremeditated.

THE SIMLA FINE ARTS EXHIBITION.—A prospectus has been issued of the Eleventh Annual Exhibition of the Simla Fine Arts Society, of which the Viceroy is the Patron and President, and Colonel F. C. Maisey is Honorary Secretary. It is to be opened at Simla on the 20th September next. Ten prizes have been offered—three by the Society, two by his Excellency the Commander-in-Chief, and one each by the following donors:—The Viceroy, for the best original water-colour picture, Indian subject; the Hon. R. E. Egerton, for the best original picture, either in oils or water-colours, by an amateur who has not won another prize; the Hon. Sir A. Clarke, for a series of not less than four original water-colour sketches from nature; General Lumsden for the best production in either oils or water-colours, open to lady amateurs only; Surgeon-General Innes, for the best original composition by amateurs. The only rule differing from former rules, materially, is one which lays down that all packages or parcels sent must be prepaid, and will be returned, bearing postage.

NILGHIRI ANTIQUITIES.—The Government has, we learn, at last resolved upon utilising the extensive collection of cinerary urns, stone celts, pottery, weapons, arms, ornaments, dresses, &c., made by the late Mr. Brecks, in the early part of 1872. For six years these valuable relics of the pre-historic inhabitants of the country have been allowed to lie mouldering in the Record-room of the Commissioner's Office. Photographs of some of these antiquities appear in the valuable works of Mr. Brecks on the Primitive Tribes, but the bulk of these has yet to be arranged and made accessible to the student of antiquities. Three or four years ago a German savant over-hauled the collection, having obtained the permission of Government to do so, but we are not aware that any part of it was removed by this foreign gentleman for any Continental Museum. The specimens will be arranged in sets, one intended for the Madras Museum, one for the Calcutta, and one to be sent home to Mrs. Brecks. Mr. Grigg is charged with the arrangement, and Dr. Bidie, will receive the specimens intended for Madras and Calcutta.—South of India Observer.

THE INDIAN BUDGET.

THE Debate on the Indian Budget, if the name can be applied to the desultory discussion of last Tuesday night, had been robbed of much of its interest by the duello between the ex-Governor-General and the Secretary of State a week before. The attack which Lord Northbrook, taking as his text the Calcutta Petition against increased expenditure and taxation, made on the present Finance policy of India, presented intelligible grounds of opposition. He denounced as unnecessary, and, therefore, as unwise, and even perilous, any increase in Indian taxation, even though applied to the carrying out of a great fiscal reform which would afford an easement to the poorest classes.

By anticipation, Lord Northbrook attacked, and Lord Cranbrook defended, the principles of finance which have been still further carried out in the Budget so ably and lucidly expounded by Mr. Stanhope. Lord Cranbrook justly maintained that it was a wise stroke to seize the opportunity of removing vexatious and demoralising barriers to trade, and by equalising the salt-tax to lessen its costliness and oppressiveness. It is instructive to note that this tax, which seems to some so indefensible in theory, and so burdensome to the poor, was described by Lord Northbrook as "weighing with the least oppression, and creating least discontent of all taxes." As seems to be the fate of all topics relating to India, the most widely diverse opinions on this subject are held and expressed, as appears from letters in our own columns. He preferred to attack the Licence-tax and increased Land-cess as unpopular and disturbing. Lord Cranbrook vindicated both, as not excessive and as fairly distributed, and as such, affording what was most needful—a provision for an insurance fund against the almost inevitable famines. The petitioners, whose prayer Lord Northbrook rose to support, must have felt very much like the disappointed King of Moab, when their noble patron fully admitted that the reduction of expenditure, on which they placed their hopes, was not to be expected, and that he did not think it likely that the cost of the Government of India could be very considerably diminished. He urged economy and relief of the Indian exchequer in the matter of Home charges, and received for reply that the Government had already taken successful steps in the right direction.

The relative positions of the Secretary of State for India and of his noble opponent in the House of Lords, were reversed in the House of Commons, where the Under Secretary had to set forth the facts and figures, and expound the reasons for the Indian Budget of 1878-79, and then receive and repulse the attacks of all comers. The statement of the revenue and expenditure proved more encouraging than might have been anticipated, and it is needless to say that the weekly reports which have arrived from India, of the favourable prospects of this year's crops, bear out the hopeful prognostications of the Government. As to the past, the loss of life by famine in Southern India is estimated at 1,350,000 lives. Appalling as this is, it falls far short of the five or six millions, which vague conjecture had bruited about, as having fallen victims to famine. That these millions had not perished, is due to the expenditure on relief, which amounts to nine and a-half millions of pounds. Sir J. Strachey has estimated that in every decade of years Famine Expenditure demands no less a sum than fifteen millions. That is the outdoor relief requirement for India, and the facts of the last few years seem to justify the calculation. Therefore, the Under Secretary, while clearly showing that according to fair estimates of revenue, and an expenditure in which some important reductions were pointed out, there would be a sufficient working surplus, justified the maintenance of the new taxes in order to provide the yearly premium for the new Famine Insurance Fund. We cannot now discuss the multifarious questions that arise out of this most momentous subject. How far successive administrations have failed to carry out improvements which might have prevented or mitigated these terrible scarcities, which are now declared to be, the, so to speak, recurring decimals of our Indian problem; what mistakes have been made in meeting the danger, when actually upon the people; how best to avert, and if not preventible, how best to deal with famine, form parts of the problem which must be solved, so far as collective experience and wisdom can deal with it. The Famine Commission will, we doubt not, sedulously collect all data, and digest the results into a code; as things are now nothing certain is known; all is obscure. We are told that but for railways, millions would have starved. Yet thoughtful men who have studied India say that the easy transit of grain to distant markets has caused scarcity in districts where formerly the surplus of good years was stored to meet the exigencies of bad. This is but an illustration of the contradictions and difficulties that surround the question. While waiting for their solution preparations must be made; money will save lives if famine come; let the money be saved year by year, instead of a crushing loan raised all at once at any price. This, in a word, is the disputable portion of the Budget. To do this involves, according to the Government, new taxation, which shall not be grievous. That any fresh taxation, especially to provide against a contingent danger which would only affect the poorest, should be borne without complaint by the Indian traders is not to be expected; a cry of over-taxation is one that is sure to be listened to in England; but it behoves the patrons who advocate the cause, and repeat the complaints of the seemingly distressed tax-payers, to ascertain accurately whether the outcry arises from a really overburdened class, or people, or from those who object to pay for their own improvement, or that of their fellow citizens. The Calcutta Petitioners found in Lord Northbrook a patron, who would not concur in their opinion, that reduction in Government expenditure could be made. The chief assailant of the finance policy of the Indian Government in the House of Commons went much further. The delighted faces of those in the gallery, to whom Mr. Fawcett addressed his invitation to see how indifferent the Government, how attentive he and his score of staunch followers were, to Indian interests, showed their thorough approval of his onslaught. He attacked the form of the balance-sheets, he doubted the truth of the calculation; he objected to everything the Government of India had done, to everything they proposed to do; he uttered vaticinations of terrible dangers, consequent on an imaginary course of profligate expenditure, and he quoted admirable warnings against over-taxation. But he failed to do more than talk of vague economies, just as his motion sought for undefined safeguards against conjectural dangers. His continued reference to India as the poorest country in the world must seem somewhat strange, unqualified as it was by any proofs, or explanation. Surely a country is not to be treated as pauperised merely because, according to his own most excellent maxim, a penny saved in India is equal to a pound saved in England. His comment on the tax that was incident upon the income of £10 per annum, as contrasted with our own Income-tax, was, we must with deference submit, fallacious. Without venturing on more detailed criticism, the outcome of all that so eloquent and able an economist could urge was a general commendation of reduced expenditure, in preference to any increase of taxation. We venture to think that whatever gradual reduction of expenditure may be found expedient, whatever precautionary measures prove possible, that statesman would be universally condemned, who failed to provide a certain fund, as insurance against a calamity which involved terrible loss of life, or a sudden overwhelming expenditure, because he had waited to see what he could save. The light additional impost is more bearable than the wasteful prodigality of famine, and the unsparing taxation of death.

"THE NEEDS OF ASSAM," &c.

TO THE EDITOR OF "ALLEN'S INDIAN MAIL."

SIR,—I saw an article in Allen's Indian Mail, August 2nd, bearing the above title; and I was courteously sent a copy of the memorial presented to Lord Cranbrook on 31st July; a few remarks, therefore, on this subject from one who has resided in Assam, Upper and Lower, for some years may be of use.

That Assam has been the most neglected province that has ever been under British government is a known fact. It is also a fact that Assam has been made what it is (in spite of the most severe Coolie Protection Laws, so-called, and in spite of the utmost difficulty in obtaining land) by tea-planters, and by planters alone. I have known men driven to Australia because they were wearied out trying to get land to open a "Tea Garden." The land laws there are just, and can be understood; but who can understand the law in Assam? When you have got the land, every coolie to Upper Assam will cost you Rs. 100 to 120 (£10 to £12). You must give him a house and rice at a certain rate, doctor him, and so on. Quite right; no sane planter will neglect his valuable workman. But can you get a proper work out of him if he is lazy and won't? There is no law for you but shake your fist at him, or pull his ear; better not, I advise you. All this has to be encountered, and yet planters have made Assam produce this year about 21,000,000 lbs. of tea; and what has Government done up to this? Echo answers, what? But now there seems to be something like a dawn breaking for poor Assam. I wish those gentlemen every success, with all my heart.

Mr. Holiday says eight days from Goalundo, the starting point mentioned in Government notification, is Dhubri, about 250 miles higher up; and why not do it in five days up to Dibrugarh? The journey is but 350 or 380 miles; Goalundo will be abandoned if a line is made from Rungpoor to Dhubri—and no loss; for it is sure to be swept away ere long. Steamers should be not over two or two and a half feet draught, and capable of carrying plenty of cargo. That it can and ought to be done in five days is quite certain; but no doubt twelve miles an hour would serve all present needs; travelling by night is necessary, and no reason why light draught steamers should not do so; but floating landing stages must be provided at almost every station, or needless delay, and danger also, will result at certain seasons.—Yours, &c.,

TO THE EDITOR OF "ALLEN'S INDIAN MAIL."

SIR,—When Lord Cranbrook said that the salt tax is now "about three-farthings a pound, which could not press hardly upon the natives," I think that the Right Honourable the Secretary of State for India has made three miscalculations.

First. The wages of unskilled labour in India are seldom so much as one-tenth of the wages of unskilled labour in England. In some parts of India a common labourer receives only three-halfpence a day, in other parts two-pence farthing, but three-pence a day is considered a high rate except for ploughmen, who may be called skilled.

Secondly. The necessity of prepaying a tax, ten times the cost of the salt, deters small men from entering into the trade, and justifies the great merchants in adding a heavy charge for interest of money advanced. Salt is a perishable article, especially during the heavy rains, and therefore the price of good salt is much dearer than the theorists would wish us to believe. The cheap stuff sold under the name of salt is adulterated with all sorts of things. I may write with confidence that throughout the greater part of India it is impossible to buy a pound of genuine salt for less than one anna, or three-halfpence.

Thirdly. The consumption of salt in India, if health is to be preserved, is much greater than in England. The tropical heat and distance from the sea necessitate a large consumption if health is to be preserved, and if the cows and plough-bullocks are to be kept in decent condition.

I cannot estimate the sufficient consumption by a poor man and his family and two bullocks at less than one maun or 82 lbs. a-year, costing Rs. 5, or ten shillings; this sum represents more than six weeks' wages, or say 12 per cent. on income. Anybody who knows anything of the poor in India will admit that 12 per cent. on their incomes presses very hardly upon them; so hardly, in fact, that they prefer to smuggle and to eat other salts in preference to paying the salt-tax.

"Cato" calculates the duty on salt per pound at 0.37, or less than 1.25th part of a penny; Lord Cranbrook, the Secretary of State for India, calculates it at three farthings a pound. Who is right? Arithmetic is an exact science; decimals are not to be trifled with.

"Cato" calculates a maun of salt in round numbers at 160 lbs. Now the weight of the maun varies very much in different parts of India, but the official salt maun is an unvarying quantity, and does not weigh 160 lbs.

"Cato" informs us that he has "interrogated the peasants in their homesteads all over India, and has examined the details of their expenditure." Was he able to ascertain whether they were consuming duty salt or smuggled salt? Did he analyse the quality of the salt they were consuming? If so, what percentage of genuine chloride of sodium did he find?

"Cato's" benevolent wish that the people of India should eat plenty of monopoly salt appears to be as visionary as the French princesses proposal that the starving Parisians who could not obtain bread should eat buns.

I will conclude in the words of Mr. Brougham in the Debate of the 22nd of February, 1822:—

"Indeed, not a word had fallen from any member, in which the reprehension of the principle of that odious tax had only been exceeded by the abhorrence which all pronounced at the machinery."—Your obedient servant,

Aug. 13.

A GLIMPSE AT THE WILDS OF WESTERN CHINA.*

At Ch'u-tung by the path side were kneeling in a row some thirty women with hands clasped in supplication, a pitiful indication of the misery which Tartar misrule and Muhammadan rebellion have brought upon the country. Their greeting—"A respectful welcome, great sirs"—was no more than the usual formula. On inquiry it turned out that they were seeking to be protected from the approach of beggary, and not to be relieved from its actuality. They were the women-folk of well-to-do Muhammadans slain during the outbreak, or missing; they still retained the ancient title-deeds of their lands and houses, but had been deprived of civil rights. "Mistaking us for Muhammadans," says Mr. Baber, "a very frequent error, and hearing that we were officials on an important mission, they awaited our arrival to implore, in their ignorance, an intercession which, coming from us, would certainly have injured their cause." These women were furnished with money by their refugee

LADY DOCTORS FOR ZENANA PRACTICE.

We are not among those who would prevent the employment of women in any capacity for which they may be fitted, and we have watched with interest the conquering fight the ladies have waged at home, terminating with the storming of the portals of the medical profession. We confess that there are many women whom we can scarcely imagine seated at the dissecting table or amputating a smashed limb, and we trust this will always be the case, otherwise "the sweetest things that ever grew beside a cottage door" will become memories of the past, and a fair girl will never again be "a sight to make an old man young." Bachelordom need not, however, fear that the medical profession will absorb all the nicest girls of the period. Not even every man, and much less every woman, is equal to the stress and strain entailed by the medical profession. The profession requires a sterner stuff, and therefore the more credit to those ladies who have come forward to fill the acknowledged want of female medical practitioners. Every kind of argument, of ridicule, of sarcasm, of odium have been brought forward, principally, it must be owned, by members of the medical profession, to prevent the entrance of females into its ranks. The indelicacy of young women going through the medical lectures and walking the hospitals, particularly in company with young men, was of course made a great point of, and when the women surmounted these objections by instituting a school of their own, there was a difficulty as regarded teachers, and it was stated the education in the female school could be but partial. The capability of women was attacked, and it was hinted that although they might have good natural talents, their talents when applied to such subjects as medicine, surgery, and anatomy, would be as little under command as a set of carpenter's tools rolling about the hold of a ship in a storm. But notwithstanding all opposition, the ladies triumphed, and we believe there are even married female medical practitioners in London who perhaps do more than their husbands towards the suitable setting of the household "Lares and Penates." If female doctors are a desideratum in England, they are a real necessity in India, and we are glad to see that Madras has set the example in supplying the want. At the annual distribution of prizes at the Madras Medical College the other day, it was announced that four ladies had passed their examinations, and even taken prizes. Judging from the names, these ladies are Europeans, and it is not too much to expect that they may hereafter exercise a great moral and social influence over the populations of India, among whom they may practise their profession. There is the guarantee of the Madras College that these ladies are well-educated and well-informed in their profession, and their sex will procure them admission into native society, where men are never permitted to penetrate. We may ask why Bombay is behind in this matter. If there is room for female medical practitioners in Madras, there is doubtless scope for them in Bombay, and we should imagine the question has but to be prominently brought forward to secure a commencement being made. We understand the credit of the admittance of females into the Madras Medical School is due to the retired Surgeon-General Balfour, who appears in this respect to have been above the narrow-mindedness so frequently displayed by members of the medical profession. We do not know what may be the feeling of the heads of the medical profession in Bombay with respect to lady medical students and to lady medical practitioners, but whatever it is, the want is none the less a want, and one which must ere long be supplied. We must, however, protest against any semi-education, such as subordinates in the Government medical service who desire to write "Hospital Assistant" after their names are provided with. If a female practitioner is to prove of any real utility, she must be equal to much more than writing and reading Sulp. Mag. or even Oleum ric. cras mane. Even the "exhibition" of the æther and ammonia by which the fashionable physician regulates the throbbing of foolish or hysterical hearts will not suffice for the stern needs of suffering humanity such as will present to female practitioners within the precincts of native dwellings, even as they now do to male practitioners without such limits. Again, the female doctor must possess not only medical and surgical skill, but should be a sanitarian in the highest sense of the word. For her profession will lead her not only where, "for want of timely help, thousands have died of medicable wounds," but also where, "in breathless dungeons over steaming sewers," the interior economy of native life and society is conducted—where pardah-nisheen females pass their shortened lives, surrounded by every sanitary abomination which it is possible to collect in or near a human habitation. Moreover, the Indian female practitioner must, in common with the usual honourable custom of medical men, at times cheerfully make great sacrifices of time, and of time worth money, and the fee must not always be the first thing thought of. These conditions fulfilled, a great untrodden field is open to female medical practitioners in India, which will, if properly cultivated, return fruit a hundred-fold. It is not only in the Presidency towns, but throughout the whole of India, that female relations, who kept up communication with them from regions inaccessible to the authorities. It is plain that Muhammadan influence is far from extinct in Yunnan, and, any moment Imperial tyranny and fatuity may provoke an outbreak, and with so many wrongs to revenge and rights to recover, it may be imagined if the late masters of the country are likely to seize the occasion.

Proceeding along a continuous steep ascent amongst rocks and knolls, through thick woods and dense jungles, Mr. Baber overtook a caravan conducted by a few Ku'tung men, concerning whom his enquirer failed to give him any information. He was struck by the beauty of a large pair of sapphire ear-rings, but the owner, a fine youth of seventeen, mistook the gesture of inquiry, for a felonious approach, and Mr. Baber ran a great risk of being stabbed by the ready dagger. His coolness in sitting down and pretending a curiosity to look at the blade saved him. Mr. Baber next interviewed the chief of the caravan, and established amicable relations. The interchange of ideas is well told in his own words:—

The breech-loading and extracting apparatus of a Snider rifle inspired him with so lively an interest that in return for our allowing him, to the imminent danger of the public, to discharge ten rounds of ball cartridge in various directions, mostly vertical, he insisted upon fetching his own match-lock, and exhibiting his and its powers of shooting. He returned with a fine old crusted weapon of the Chinese order, provided with a forked rest, and selected a white stone about seven inches in diameter, which he placed at a distance of thirty yards. Lying down on his stomach and adjusting his rest he took a prolonged aim and then pulled the match, previously lighted, slowly and carefully down upon the touch-hole. Nothing of importance resulting he pricked up the powder and recommenced; still nothing worthy of note ensued, but not at all disconcerted he rose with the remark that his gun had not gone off, that the match was probably damp, and he would fetch another. Thus reinforced he contrived to hit the stone, and we warmly congratulated him on the achievement. His match-lock was furnished with a ring sight near the lock, but had no fore sight. The bullets were cylindrical. As we were now on the best of terms, I inquired why his young compatriot had drawn upon me. He explained, much to the delight of my companions, that he was anxious about his ear-rings; but he was kind enough to exonerate me from any propensity to brigandage, and subsequently rebuked the young fellow roundly. The latter was told to hand me his dagger for inspection, which he did with a good grace, but I remarked that with pardonable circumspection he had divested himself of his ear-rings.

The spring rains now commenced, and heralded their appearance with a complete deluge for forty-two minutes. One of the party, profiting by his experience of rain storms in Formosa, took off all his upper garments, rolled them up as tightly as possible, and pressing them under his arm made all haste onwards. The narrow and confined track soon became a running stream nearly a foot deep, and boots and socks had to be dispensed with. One hapless individual effected a rush up a slope of red clay, with a view to outflank the torrent, but after a successful ascent of forty yards, he found it impossible to proceed or return, or even to retain a standing position. The sudden "glissade" which he was compelled to execute, plunging with great accuracy and splash into the deepest part of the flood, was inspected with minute curiosity by his companions. After a mile-and-a-half of similar scrapes the village of Tien-ching, which boasts half a hut and a floating population of three, was reached. The fragment of a hovel, which was little better than a lean-to, composed of two walls and a crazy reed roof appearing in sight, the whole party huddled into it and proceeded to wring out their clothes. Those who had taken the precaution of rolling them up found the inmost convolutions almost dry; but the rest had to endure chills and cramps for the space of a couple of hours. During the spring rains, which begin in May and fall more or less continuously for about two months, the traffic of Western Yunnan almost ceases. Even on the level road progression is rarely possible; what it must be on the steep slopes and zigzags is better imagined than experienced.

Passing a large plain, with its teeming villages and numerous rice-fields, a strange contrast to its habitations, which are little better than heaps of crumbling and deserted ruins, the town of Yung-ch'ang peeped forth. The most Western prefectural city of China, it supports a flourishing population of peasants, and has an air of prosperity which is materially increased by a cluster of temples and pagodas, giving the place an imposing appearance. Somewhat curiously the language to the far West of Yunnan is purer than that spoken nearer the capital. The reason of this is that the natives of Yunnan were forced to learn the language of the north on pain of death. Wu San-kuei, the Chinese General who sided with the Tartars at the rise of the present dynasty, and subsequently reduced Yunnan, became its king, and imposed a despotic and grammatical rule upon his subjects. Selecting those of his veterans who spoke the purest Chinese, he set them to instruct the vanquished, who were of necessity compelled to accept the language of their conquerors.

MESSRS. W. H. ALLEN AND Co. will publish shortly a biography of the late Yakob Beg, ruler of Kashgar. It will include a history of Kashgar from the earliest times to the present day, when it has become once more incorporated with the Chinese Empire.

practitioners of medicine and surgery would be admitted most willingly, even eagerly, into the innermost recesses of native dwellings. At the present time there are castles and palaces of chiefs, nobles, and native gentlemen, within which no European is ever permitted to step, and within which frightful diseases proceed unchecked; the remedies adopted being simply charms and witchcraft. The men of the family, if similarly affected, would probably seek the advice of some European, or at least of some native practitioner of repute. But the zenana system forbids that women shall be seen by strange men, and the salvation of life is not esteemed any sufficient reason why the zenana rule should be broken. At the same time, the men, the husbands, fathers, brothers, and sons, of the suffering native females would, as a rule, only be too glad to avail themselves of the services of a female medical practitioner on behalf of their women. It is true that there are some Hindus so bigoted as to object to the entrance of even an European female into the zenana. But these people are in a great minority, and their scruples would not endure long under the influences which the women themselves would bring to bear in favour of the admission of female medical assistance. We certainly expect that the next few years will produce a considerable addition to the ranks of female practitioners, the nucleus of which is now to be found in Madras; and it cannot be doubted that with the admission of educated ladies into the zenanas of the East, much of what is best of our more advanced civilisation, will be conveyed to and adopted by the women of the East.—Times of India.

STATION TALK.

SIMLA, July 11.—The rains are at last upon us, and the weather reports generally speaking favourable all over Northern India. But the bunnias are not convinced; they never are, in fact. Food for man and beast, in the form of flour and gram, accordingly remains at the usual famine rate at ten seers per rupee. Supplies, they say, cannot come up in the rains; hence they are justified in stretching their stock in hand as far as possible, by imposing a prohibitive rate. Verily, if any man do, the bunni shall have his reward in the next world. That next world is, according to most recent authority, not so remote a contingency as many would wish. Certain followers of the Prophet at Patna have put it down for July 11, on grounds more or less reliable. The prediction is supposed to have no political significance whatever. It is merely an exhortation to prayer and to a better livelihood. The Prophet is said to have appeared at Medina to a faithful follower, and explained that the recent famines have been brought about purely and simply by the corruption of the ruling classes. But it is clear as mud that India in particular is not here referred to; rather the other portions of Islam, where public virtue is the exception, not the rule. Yet, much as we may attempt to ignore it, our relations with the Mohammedan community are not now so cordial as in the days preceding the late war in Europe.—The Famine Commission appears to be taking a well-merited rest after elaborating the exhaustive series of questions published a short time back. The answers will begin to pour in towards the end of August, and then the committee will have their work cut out for them, to the end of this season, at all events. A committee is sitting on the important question of organising a special corps for working State railways. The idea is that all drivers, guards, platelayers, clerks, and station-masters should be specially enlisted and trained under military discipline. They would be bound to serve for a fixed period, and during service would be more readily subject to punishment, and therefore more manageable all round, than the class of men now employed on Government railways, who can throw up their appointments at short notice. Such a corps, if properly organised and liberally treated as regards pay, promotion, and pension, will be an immense power in the hands of the State securing us, amongst other advantages, from the inconvenience of a strike on any particular guaranteed line, as there would be always a reserve of trained hands to fall back upon. The taking over and working of the whole of the railways in India by Government is, of course, merely a matter of time and money. But I trust when that time arrives the controlling officials may be induced to put on a little more speed than the State trains now travel at. In this matter, at all events, the Government lines are at present far behind the very slowest and worst-managed guaranteed railways in India. The opening of the broad gauge between Lahor and Jhelum appears to be as far off a prospect as ever. Want of rolling-stock is said to be the hitch, but it is a hitch that might have been foreseen and provided for a year ago, with the least exercise of forethought.—The local Volunteer corps is in a most flourishing state, and increases in numbers every month, thanks to the exertions of the gallant commandant, Major Paterson. As an example of the encouragement the movement now and then receives from men who have not time to devote themselves personally to its interests, I may mention that Mr. Lepel Griffin has most generously offered an annual prize of five hundred rupees to the best shot and most efficient soldier, amongst members, who are employed in any of the Government offices in Simla.—There is a good deal of agitation in military circles, although, so far as I know, it has not yet been much noticed in the Press, on the subject of an increased scale of pensions for officers of the Indian Army. It may readily be imagined that with prices more than doubled men are not happy to retire on allowances which were fixed in the time of their great grandfathers. The scandal is not the less glaring now that officers in the Home service are accorded larger pensions, although recruited from the same class of society as their less fortunate brethren under the Indian Government. Yet the former may pass their whole service in a genial clime and with every advantage as to leave and quick promotion, whereas the unhappy Indian officer is bound down within limits and restrictions, most of which are as detrimental in the long run to the interests of Government as they are harassing to the individual they appear specially designed to annoy. I am putting the case rather strongly, perhaps; and, it must be admitted that the Military Department in India is generally ready to do battle loyally on behalf of the officers whenever a good cause can be established in their favour. Thus, at the present moment, I believe a scheme is being elaborated for earlier promotion in the Staff Corps, as well as for a more liberal scale of retiring allowances, whilst there is some sap yet left in the tree. But the idea is in its infancy so far as regards Government action, and I mention it merely with the object of reminding the more energetic of your military readers that any particular pet schemes of their own are likely, at the present time, to receive due consideration if submitted through the proper channel. What is the highest pension which the State can afford to bestow on an officer who compounds his rights to "off-reckonings" and retires, say, after twenty or six-and-twenty years' service? This appears to be the question which requires solution—one which an actuary might solve in a few hours.—Bombay Times Correspondent.

Miscellaneous.

NORTHERN BENGAL RAILWAY.—The Indian Daily News of 23rd ult. states that an interruption had again occurred on the line of the Northern Bengal State Railway between Julpigoree and Silligoree, in consequence of an unprecedented rise of the rivers Teesta and Mahanuddee.

THE "PIONEER."—It is reported that the proprietorship of the Pioneer has passed into the hands of a Lahor barrister and a party of military men intimately connected with the Civil and Military Gazette. A change will, it is said, be made in the editorship, the Rev. Julian Robinson possibly returning to India to resume the reins.

BURMESE FOREST STAFF.—The forest staff of Burmah is, it is said, to be augmented. There are at present twenty officers on the list, five of whom are absent on leave, &c., one applied for a transfer to India, and two or three others have applied for leave, thus reducing the staff to nominally about twelve officers to work two large divisions.

ALTERATION IN THE BENGAL RELIEFS.—The Government of India has, we learn, sanctioned the following alterations in the Relief of native troops published in G.O.C.C., dated 27th May:—The 7th Regiment from Peshawar to Agra. The 12th Regiment from Jullundur to Fort William. The 15th from Sialkot to Alipore. The 17th from Morar to Barrackpore. The 18th from Buxar to Lucknow. The 26th from Meer Meer to Delhi. The 34th from Allahabad to Cachar.

BURMESE RAILWAYS.—The Rangoon Times hears that Mr. Stacey and Mr. Anderson, of Promé, have proceeded to Mandalay to arrange with the King for the construction of an experimental railway about eight miles in length from that city towards Blamó. The Italian project for the laying down of a railway in Upper Burma appears to have fallen to the ground.

DARJEELING TRAMWAY.—In order to wed Calcutta more closely to the splendid hill sanitarium of Darjeeling, and at the same time afford facilities for opening out the tea industry, it is proposed by the Bengal Government to construct a steam tramway from Tilligoree, on the Northern Bengal State Line, to Darjeeling, a distance of fifty miles, of which forty are in the hills. The cost will be about £300 per mile, and the greater portion, if not all the capital, fifteen lacs, will be subscribed locally.—Times Telegram.

CHATTISGURH RAILWAY.—The Indian Daily News hears from the Central Provinces that the construction of the Chattisguruh Railway from Nagpore to Donaghur, or Kallianpore, has been sanctioned as a State line, but that the question of the execution of the railway beyond Kallianpore on a direct line through Chota Nagpore to Calcutta cannot be entertained, except under the intervention of private enterprise.

NIMACH STATE RAILWAY.—A section of the Nimach State Railway, viz., from Fatehabad to Rutlam, a distance of about fifty miles, was opened on the 10th ult. The country opened up is extremely fertile, and it is expected that the grain and opium traffic will be very profitable. The line was inspected by Col. Hancock, R.E., who complimented Mr. Cheyne, the Chief Engineer, on the excellence of the works.—Bombay Gazette.

SUKET.—The Rajah of the Trans-Sutlej State of Suket was deposed some months ago for being so incompetent to govern his domains as to arouse the wrath of his subjects and incite them to rebel. The British Government took temporary charge of the country by sending a detachment of infantry and a civilian or two to look after affairs; but now it has been decided to appoint a Regent, in the person of the late Rajah's younger brother, till the son and heir, now eight years old, comes to man's estate, and is old enough to take over the reins of Government.

THE MADRISSA.—The Englishman understands that Mr. Gough, who was recently transferred from the North-West to the Bengal Educational Department, is likely to be appointed Principal of the Calcutta Madrisa, in place of the late Mr. Blochmann. The Education Department of this province is fortunate in possessing at this juncture an officer whose attainments so eminently fit him for this post. Mr. Gough's abilities as an Oriental scholar are well known, and there is every reason to believe that this appointment will be popular with the Mohammedan community of Bengal.

FLOODS IN BAREILLY.—According to the Indian Daily News, of the heavy rainfall which some stations in Northern India have been favoured with, Bareilly seems to have had the largest share. The roads were completely flooded, and people had to wade through water above their waists. Several bungalows and out-offices have been greatly injured, and some completely destroyed, especially the Christian village attached to the American Mission Home, which is a heap of ruins. The Orphanage has also suffered considerable damage. The whole place presents a scene of havoc and devastation.

NORTH-WESTERN FRONTIER.—Submission would appear to be the order of the day on the North-Western frontier just now, according to the Civil and Military Gazette. The Mahsud Wazirs on the Derajat frontier, who have been giving much trouble to the officers of the Tank settlement, have tendered their submission to Government. A party of them came into British territory last month bringing with them a Hindu child they had carried off in August last. The Douris of the Bannu border, who have been blockaded for a considerable time past, have also come in and submitted to the terms of the local officers.

LEGISLATIVE COUNCIL OF INDIA.—At the last meeting of the Legislative Council of India Mr. Whitley Stokes presented the report of the select committee on the Bill to assimilate certain powers of the local governments in the North-Western Provinces and Oudh. The governments of the two provinces are now united under the administration of a single officer, the object being to assimilate the powers of the Lieutenant-Governors of the North-West Provinces and of the Chief Commissioner of Oudh under certain Acts relating to rent, land, revenue, and other matters of primary administrative importance. A report was also presented on the Consolidated Railway Bill. It is not proposed to consider the Bill further until the meeting of the Council in Calcutta.—Times Telegram.

MONKEY MARAUDERS.—The Friend of India has been entreated to take up the cause of the people of Angurparah, a little village on the Barrackpore-road, about three miles north of Cossipore. A colony of two or three hundred baboons took up their quarters in the village some six or eight months ago, and have made it almost uninhabitable. They are great brutes, we are told, four feet high, and as savage as wild beasts. They attack children and even full-grown women without fear, and have set up a reign of terror over the people, going in and out of their houses as they please, and "vittling free" upon the plantains, guavas, mangoes, and other fruit grown in their gardens. The people are afraid to shoot them, as the whole colony would attack them instantly. The police will not interfere, and the village is not merely ridden to death by these Apes, but is in a state of insecurity from budmashes.

FREEMASONRY.—The present District Grand Master of Freemasonry in Bengal is earning golden opinions amongst the brotherhood over which he rules, by the conspicuous energy and tact with which he administers the highest office in the craft. We understand that the Hon. Mr. Prinsep, in addition to personally inspecting all our Calcutta Lodges, and other Masonic bodies, has found time, in his brief moments of release from official work, to make long railway journeys in the hottest season of the year to Allahabad, Dinapore, and Benares; and we now see from a notice in the local paper that he is in Lucknow on a similar errand. We feel sure that Masons throughout India will be glad to learn that one result of these energetic proceedings has been entirely to set at rest those agitations which at one time threatened the disruption of the province; and we hope to see the popular District Grand Master's efforts yet further rewarded by a substantial accession of strength and prosperity to the order.—Daily News.

KASHMIR FAMINE.—The Times correspondent states that orders are to be issued to close the Bhimbars Pass, the only pass still open for tourists to Kashmir. The Resident is also to receive orders to require all travellers found in Kashmir to return at once to British territory. This is in consequence of the terrible distress which is admitted by the Durbar to be prevalent. At the same time most energetic measures are being taken by the Maharajah to alleviate the misery and suffering of the people, who are stated in some districts to be living entirely on herbs, weeds, and unripe fruits. In some parts half the population is missing. Grain to the extent of Rs. 400,000 has been purchased by the Maharajah for distribution, and a notification has been published to the effect that all traders importing grain into Kashmir shall be entitled to receive from the State a bounty equal to five per cent. of the value of the grain imported, no Customs duty to be levied, and no interference made in free sales. The State will, moreover, re-purchase, by paying 3½ per cent. on actual purchases, all such imported grain as shall not have been disposed of. Poor-houses have been opened and subscriptions raised, headed by the Maharajah.

THE LATE RAJA DAKHINARANJAN MUKERJEE.—The Hindu Patriot sketches the career of Raja Dakhinranjan Mukerjee, the Oudh Taluqdar and the founder and Honorary Secretary of the Oudh Taluqdars' Association, who died at Lucknow on the 11th ult. He was one of the first fruits of the late Hindu College, and gave early promise of future excellence. He was one of the early educated Bengalis, who first recognised the power of the Press, and conjointly with the late Babu Russick Krishna Mullick, and Babu Peary Chand Mitter, started the Bengal Spectator, an Anglo-Bengali periodical. Later in life he established the Samachar Hindoosthani, and purchased the Lucknow Times in the interest of the Oudh Taluqdars. At Calcutta he co-operated with the Honourable Mr. Bethune in founding the Bethune Female School. He was a prominent member of the British Indian Association, at which in 1859 he made a remarkable speech on Lord Canning's Oudh policy, which brought him to his Lordship's notice, and ultimately placed him in the exalted position of interpreter between the Government and the aristocracy and people of Oudh and vice versa. He renovated Oudh and stamped his mind upon its administration and social and political life. What an educated Bengali can do in the way of ameliorating the condition of his countrymen is best illustrated in the person of the late Raja Dakhinranjan Mukerjee.—Englishman.

STATION TALK.

It is surprising so few Madras folk ever think of paying a visit to the Sydapett Farm, or the "Government Model Farm," as it is more correctly styled. It would be, indeed, a couple of hours well spent, of a fine morning, to walk over the grounds of the farm and inspect the various processes of cultivation, and the improved appliances at work under the able direction of Mr. Robertson and his assistants. The College and Lecture-room are also worth a visit, containing as they do a museum on a small scale, a choice library of scientific works, and a collection of fossils and various kinds of earth with coloured maps and engravings, serving to illustrate the subjects of botany, chemistry, and animal and vegetable physiology, which, together with practical agriculture, are the chief subjects taught in the College. The lectures are delivered by different professors, engaged for the purpose, in regular routine, and the frequent examinations instituted by the Principal must, of necessity, keep students well up in their studies. If there is any deficiency at all it can only be in the departments of practical agriculture, to which, perhaps, not so much time has been devoted as some of the students might wish, but which is to employ a larger share of attention at the opening of the next session under the able teaching of Mr. K. Shillmayer, Professor of Agricultural Chemistry. The College, as it stands, is quite a multum in parvo, containing much in a small compass, but sufficient to meet the wants of the students, and adequate to the requirements of the farm as at present constituted. The new house for the Principal, which was completed last April, is a handsome building of red brick, standing to the west of the College, and presenting an attractive appearance as seen from the main road. Its front entrance faces the river, of which it commands a full view, as well as of the Marmalong bridge, St. Thomas's Mount, and the more distant Palaveram hills. There is another building under construction nearer the road, which is intended as a laboratory for the College, the chemical and other apparatus for which have already been ordered out from England. The site has also been marked out for the erection of a new College as soon as the funds are sanctioned, which college is to be a pukka building of ample dimension, and the plan of which may be seen hanging on the walls of the building now in use. The College is now enjoying a recess, and most of the Parsee students have gone to Bombay to see their friends. The Principal has proceeded to Ootacamund, where, no doubt, he will perfect the plans he intends to lay before Government for establishing model farms in other parts of the Presidency, especially in the Coimbatore District, which has long been talked of. The favour that such a proposition will meet with in the eyes of the Indian Government must depend, of course, entirely on the proved success of the experiment already initiated at Sydapett, and this, as far as we can judge, certainly does not belie expectation.—Madras Times Correspondent.

Miscellaneous.

THE COST OF PUNKAH PULLING FOR THE ARMY.—Not less than Rs. 60,000, the Madras Times understands, have been estimated as the probable cost of the punkah pulling establishment for the army in this Presidency for the year 1878-79, and the sanction of the Government of India has been asked to this outlay.

MADRAS FINE ARTS SOCIETY.—The Madras Fine Arts Society hope to open a Fine Arts Exhibition in December next. Thirty prizes are offered, two by his Grace the Governor (for natives only), one by Lady Mary Grenville, one by the Ladies Grenville (to amateurs only), two by the Commander-in-Chief (one for officers, the other for non-commissioned officers and soldiers), and twenty-four by the Society itself.

LOCUSTS.—Complaints were still being made regarding the ravages of locusts, but the Collector of Salem notes as a curious fact that the insects now doing so much harm to the crops in the Presidency do not attack dry crops raised under wells, and not an insect is to be seen in any of the fine crops of cholam and cumboo in part of the Namokal and Haripurn Division of Salem Taluq.—Madras Times.

MADRAS RAILWAY CO-OPERATIVE STORES.—It is stated that, in accordance with a representation made by the employés of the Madras Railway Company, Mr. A. M. Saunders, the new Agent and Manager, directed the re-opening of the Madras Railway Co-operative Stores, which were closed some years back by order of the Traffic Manager, owing to some disagreement among the shareholders.—Madras Times.

THE FORTIFICATIONS.—All the 12-ton guns, about which so much has been lately said, have safely arrived in Madras. The Madras Times understands that, under the orders of Government, the batteries on the beach are to be only half completed, as the exigency which existed for their erection has now passed. The foundations laid for a powder magazine, shell room, and a platform for muzzle-loading the 12-ton gun are to remain as they are, but the masonry work on the west of the sand mound is to be completed.

COVELONG SALT.—The Covelong Correspondent of the Madras Times writes (July 17):—The cry for rain still continues. The salt-manufacturing season is coming to a close, but that seven to eight lakhs of Indian maunds have been taken into store, valuing about seventeen lakhs of Rupees. Besides, there are some 800,000 of maunds of salt taken into store at Home's Garden Depot, the outlying of Vadasmenjary and Calampakam stations in the Covelong Division, and still there is a large quantity out in the pans.

WEIGHTS AND MEASURES.—The action of the Collector in reducing the standard weights and measures, which created such consternation in the minds of the public, has been brought to an end, presumably under orders from Government. It is reported that the collector has ordered the restoration of all the measures that have been already curtailed. The introduction of the Bombay system of scales into the Salt Department, it is said, led the Revenue Department to alter the Madras standard weights and measures accordingly.—Madras Times.

CRIME IN NORTH ARCOT.—In the district of North Arcot no less than thirty-six cases came on for trial at the last gaol delivery, in a considerable proportion of which the prisoners were charged with dacoity and other crimes more or less directly traceable to the Famine; such, for instance, as frauds committed by maistries and others entrusted with the payment of coolies on the Famine Relief Works. In only two of this large number of cases were the prisoners charged with having committed murder, having been found guilty of which they were sentenced to suffer the extreme penalty of the law. In the remaining cases the prisoners were charged with causing grievous hurt, theft, and other offences.—Madras Times.

LIEUT.-GENERAL SIR NEVILLE CHAMBERLAIN, G.C.B., G.C.S.I., the officer appointed by the Indian Government to proceed to Cabul, although belonging to the Bengal army by right of service, is the commander-in-chief at Madras, and during the last forty years has taken part in most of the stirring events that have occurred in the Punjab. He was through the two Afghan campaigns with Christie's Irregular Horse, at Maharajpore in 1842, and Chillianwallah and Goojerat in 1849. Since the annexation of the Punjab he has led several expeditions, with uniform success, against the border clans, and is considered one of the first authorities on all matters connected with Afghan affairs.

TRANSPORT OF SALT.—The demand for gunnies seems to be great in the Salt Department, Madras Cottaar. Ninety-five bales of gunnies were shipped recently to Negapatam, and to be conveyed thence to Vedarniem, a salt station in the Tanjor district, for the purpose of bringing salt from Vedarniem to Negapatam, and thence by vessel to Vizagapatam. The Madras Times asks what necessity there is for this when plenty of salt is now available at the Madras and Covelong Depots, whence it can be more easily shipped, and at a less cost to Government, since the salt will be sold in the Vizagapatam district for the same monopoly price as it is sold here, viz., Rs. 2-11 per Indian maund. The Salt Deputy Collector of South Arcot District is also ready with another large supply of salt, to be brought to Madras by train, and then shipped to Vizagapatam.

THE RED HILLS TANK WATER.—In communicating to Government a letter from Mr. Jones, the Executive Engineer of the Madras Municipality, reporting on the present level and rate of fall of water in the Red Hills tank, the President of the Municipal Commission observed that under present conditions the tank will cease to supply the Municipality with water in about two months; and therefore requested Government to take such steps as to prevent the anticipated drying up of the tank. He suggested that the immediate closing of the irrigation sluices may be ordered. Government remarked that the supply of water in the Red Hills Tank being uncertain, great care in its use was absolutely necessary; and requested the Municipality to economise the supply drained off for the town, and not to use it for watering roads and such like purposes. With regard to the suggestion to close the irrigation sluices, Government have requested the Collector of Chingleput, in company with the district engineer, to personally examine the matter and report what water is now being drawn off for irrigation purposes, and the effect of stopping the supply for cultivation.—Madras Times.

STATION TALK.

DHULIA.—H.E. the Governor of Bombay, accompanied by his Military Secretary and an aide-de-camp, left Chalisgaon at six A.M. on the 13th inst., escorted by Major Probyn. The Collector, Mr. Probert, with other officers of the station, met his Excellency near Gurtad, four miles from Dhulia, and brought him in. Three expanded arches were erected, which were most tastefully decorated with evergreens and palm leaves. At the first arch his Excellency was received by the Deputy Collector and Municipal Commissioners; when the Parsees present exhibited their loyalty by cheering him heartily several times. At the second arch flowers were strewn by school girls, and at the third his Excellency was saluted by a company of the Bheel Corps. The roads and spaces were kept open, and Mr. Edwardes Coke exerted and maintained admirable order. All the arrangements were carried out under the orders of the Collector, and everything went off with great clat, H.E. appearing well pleased with the hearty reception he met with on all sides. A levee was held in the High School, when all the members of the City Municipality, the officers of the various Government departments, leading merchants, and legal functionaries, were introduced to H.E. by the Collector. Mr. Kesavelal, Chairman of the Municipality, presented a well-prepared address, to which H.E. responded in an impressive speech. His Excellency began by first of all referring to the backward state of the Collectorate, allusion to parts of which was made in the address. Regarding this point his Excellency stated that though he had never been to Dhulia before, still he had a number of years' experience in the Central Provinces, which was next door to Khandeish, and he was in a position to state that Khandeish had improved more under British rule during the last half century than many other parts of the Presidency. Education had greatly advanced, and as a sign he drew attention to the excellent English in which the address was couched. He particularly advised the people that while acquiring a knowledge of English they should not neglect their own vernacular, nor Sanscrit, which was the origin of their own tongue. On the subject of railroads, he stated that two rival projects were before Government, one for a line from Chalisgaon to Dhulia, and the other from some point on the line near Bhosawul, to Surat, along the north bank of the Taptee. In the way of extension of irrigation, success, of course, depended upon the water supply of the Panjra and the Girna, the two principal rivers of the district, and to this end attention must be paid to the forests and vegetation at the sources of these rivers. When these rivers could afford to give an increased supply of water, then irrigation could be largely extended. The Commissioners were probably aware that Government were doing their best to increase the irrigation of Khandeish. Irrigation was an old institution in the province, and was quite capable of extension under the modern scientific system. With this view, Government had stationed skilled engineers in the Collectorate. Regarding Municipalities, he wished to assure them that he was always glad to receive suggestions from persons of wealth and position, such as members of Municipalities in general were. He was glad to observe that the members of the Dhulia Municipality were aware of the numerous advantages which the district had derived from the British rule. Lastly, he complimented the Dhulia Municipality on the success they had attained in the improvement of their town. His Excellency was after this speech presented with pan-supari and rose-water, &c., and the levee broke up. After this the Governor adjourned to the School Gymnasium, where a number of trained boys went very creditably though some gymnastic exercises and were much applauded by his Excellency. The students' English address was then read, followed by an address in Sanscrit, and was succeeded by a Mara-this song, especially composed for the occasion in honour of the Governor. His Excellency advised the boys not to forget to study the Sanscrit and their own vernacular in addition to English, also to study up for the new entrance examination for matriculation students, as preference would be given to such students when seeking Government employ.—Times of India Correspondent.

Miscellaneous.

SHOOTING AT OFFICERS.—Another Beloochee soldier at Hyderabad has attempted to shoot his officers. He fired several shots, but was captured before he had injured anyone.

THE LICENSE ACT.—Great efforts are being made to excite agitation against the License Act. Addresses with this object are being circulated in Bombay, written in the English, Guzerati, and Marathi languages.

THE KHOJAH MURDERER.—Khilloo Khutoo, the fanatic who murdered in the open street the head of the Khojah community, was executed on the 20th ult. He desired to be considered a martyr, and endeavoured to get his friends to send his body to Kerbela. He went to the gallows half-singing and half-praying to Allah. An immense concourse of Mussulmans gathered to see the execution, but no disturbance took place.—Bombay Gazette.

MR. MACKINTOSH BALFOUR.—Sir Richard Temple has done himself credit by the appointment just made to the Bombay Legislative Council, that of Mr. Mackintosh Balfour. The selection is somewhat out of the ordinary run, and we doubt not that the breach of custom will be amply vindicated. Mr. Balfour, who has been manager of the (new) Bank of Bombay since its establishment in 1868, had previously been many years known in Calcutta as head of the old Agra Bank. He has thus had a long and valuable experience in Indian affairs. He is a man whose habit of shrewd observation and energetic mind must have well fitted him to assist in the work of practical legislation.—Englishman.

PRICE OF OPIUM.—The following notification in the Bombay Revenue Department has been published:—"Bombay Castle, 19th July 1878. Under Rule 46 of the Rules under the Opium Act, 1878, published at pages 237-249 of the Bombay Government Gazette Extraordinary, dated 30th March, 1878, it is hereby notified, for general information, by order of the Governor in Council, that on and after the 1st August next and until further intimation, opium will be issued from all Government depôts in the Presidency of Bombay, including Sindh, at the fixed rate of Rs. 925 per half chest of 70 lbs. avoirdupois, and Rs. 13-3-6 per lb. avoirdupois, for fractional parts of half chests.

ST. FRANCIS XAVIER.—We learn from the Indian Catholica that a preliminary examination of the body of St. Francis Xavier was held on the 18th ult., in the presence of the Archbishop, the members of the Government Council, the capitular body, the medical board, and the committee entrusted with the sanitation of the old city of Goa; a small number of spectators were also present. The coffin was removed to one of the side altars, and after the usual prayers the lid was removed. The body is reported to be in the same state of preservation as at the last exposition, twenty years ago. Some ribbons and rozaries, &c., by being placed in contact with the body by the Archbishop became possessed of a holy and charmed influence (so it is believed); and after kissing the feet of the saint by those present the lid was again fastened down, and the coffin removed to its original place.—Bombay Gazette.

MUNICIPAL.—At a recent meeting of the Bombay Municipal Corporation a letter was read from the Hon. Sorabjee S. Bengalee, notifying his presentation of a banner prepared under the directions of the late Municipal Commissioner, Mr. Pedder, and just received from England. The banner, which occupied a conspicuous place in the room, was much admired by the members, who cordially passed a resolution, thanking Mr. Sorabjee Shapoorjee for his really handsome and valuable gift. The banner is embroidered with the newly-granted arms of the city, and is of rich silk. The colour of the field is red, bordered with yellow. The staff, which is about seventeen feet in length and of mahogany, is surmounted by an imperial crown most richly worked and gilded, and from the ends of the cross-staff heavy cords and tassels of bullion are appended.

BARODA DURBAR.—There was a grand durbar held at Baroda on the 6th ult., at the Nuggur Baugh Palace, in honour of Rane Jumnabha's investiture. There were present all the British officers, and some of the troops. A royal salute was fired by the Royal Artillery, and the wing of the 20th Regiment N.I. presented arms on the signal being given. The State troops had to fall out in full-dress uniform, and line the public road facing the palace. A salute of one hundred and one guns was fired by the 2nd Light Field Battery commanded by Captain Wilcox. The infantry fired a feu de joie, after which the troops presented arms, and the whole tumasha broke up. Late in the evening there was a grand dinner given by H.H. at Moteebaugh to all the European officers and ladies in camp. A number of speeches were made at the table, and afterwards all the ladies and gentlemen retired to a summer-house to witness the fireworks.

India in Parliament.

HOUSE OF COMMONS, TUESDAY, Aug. 13.—THE INDIAN BUDGET.—

On moving the House into Committee on the East India Accounts, Mr. E. STANHOPE made the annual statement of the finances of India. Premising that the proposals of the present year formed a new point of departure in Indian finance, he proceeded to group his figures, as usual, under three heads—first, the actual expenditure of 1876-7; next, the probable expenditure of 1877-8; and, finally, the Budget Estimate of 1878-9. With regard to the first, the Revenue was £55,995,785, and the Expenditure £58,178,563, the deficit being entirely due to famine expenditure. The figures for 1877-8 show an Expenditure of £62,018,853, and a Revenue of £58,635,472, being a deficit of £3,383,381. On the Revenue side there was an increase in the Guaranteed Railways of £1,693,000; the Revenue from Salt exceeded the estimate £223,000; and under the Mint charges an increase of £274,000 had resulted from coinage caused by the influx of silver. There was also an item of £50,000 for the sale of the Chinchona plant, and the only important decrease was in the Land Revenue, amounting to £837,000, due entirely to the famine. The expenditure on the famine had considerably exceeded the estimate; but if the whole cost of that calamity had been eliminated from the account it would have been at least a million and a quarter better than it seemed. The whole famine expenditure was £9,750,000, of which £6,250,000 was expended in the last year; and in contradiction of a statement of the Times correspondent, that 6,000,000 persons had perished in the famine, he quoted the Government returns, which made out that in Bombay 260,000 lives had been lost, in Madras 690,000, and in Mysor 400,000—in all, 1,350,000 lives. The Government looked for most useful results from the Famine Commission, but already the famine had not been without its lessons; and the Government of India, in acknowledging the periodicity of these calamities, admitted that in every ten years a sum of £15,000,000 or £1,500,000 a year ought to be raised in order to meet the certain famine charges without incurring debt. This famine insurance fund could not be provided by reduction of expenditure, and additional taxation became necessary. Some £400,000 had been produced by the decentralisation schemes of Lord Mayo, and for the remainder a licence-tax and additional taxation on land had been imposed. From the Land-tax were exempted Bombay and Madras wholly, and the North-Western Provinces partially; and the Licence-tax was not incident on any persons whose net annual income was under Rs. 100, or who could show it exceeded 2 per cent. of their income. Other changes also had been made; and in touching on these Mr. Stanhope described the measures which have been taken for the abolition of the local Customs line, the equalisation of the salt duties, the abolition of the transit duties on sugar, and the reduction of the tariff. With regard to the first, he said it was removed on the 1st of this month, and a uniform salt duty of Rs. 2-8 has been established, except in Bengal, where it is Rs. 2-14, the gross product to the revenue being almost the same. The Government believed that our control of the salt supplies would prove advantageous to the people in the native States, and our own people of the Northern provinces would be much benefited by the abolition of the Transit duties on sugar. There have been removed from the Tariff 27 articles out of 62, among which materials for railways, and fruit and vegetables, are the chief, and the coarser fabrics have been removed from the cotton import duties. Passing then to the figures of the coming year, 1878-79, he estimated the Revenue at £63,195,000 and the Expenditure at £61,039,000, showing a surplus of £2,156,000, or, taking into account the loss on the Salt Duties, in round numbers £2,000,000. This is exclusive of other expenditure on Reproductive Public Works of £4,533,000, and the revenue arising therefrom. The result is an improvement of 5½ millions on last year, and, excluding from the account all the items relating to the Famine, the increase in the Revenue was 4½ millions, and in the Expenditure 3½ millions. Enlarging on the details of the changes effected, he showed that the new Licence-tax would produce £675,000, and the new Land-tax £450,000, and the increased Salt Duty is taken at £95,000. On the other hand, there is a remission in the sugar duties of £155,000, and the reforms in the Tariff stand for £77,000. The excess in the Land Revenues is £1,968,000; the Excise shows an increase of £248,000. The Opium Revenue has fallen by £480,000, and the Mint Revenues by £269,000, and the net receipts from the guaranteed railways were very prudently taken at a decrease of £809,000. With reference to the proposed conversion of the 5½ per cent. loan the two forms were due to the opinion that holders might be afraid of a rupee loan, but would invest in a gold loan. As to Accounts, he hoped that in future there might be presented a Productive Public Works Budget; but as yet no definite information could be furnished as to irrigation. As to the Railways, the earnings of the guaranteed lines had increased 70 per cent. in five years. The State Railways also showed an increasing balance of income over expenditure. The railways were needful for military purposes, and had proved invaluable auxiliaries in saving life during the famine. Mr. Stanhope then gave some interesting statistics as to the trade of India, which he said had more than doubled within the last twenty years, and the increase he expected would become permanent by reason of the opening of the Suez Canal and the reforms in the tariff. During the last year the wheat exports had increased 13 per cent. in amount and 46 per cent. in value. The absolute value was £2,857,000, of which four-fifths had come to this country; and, taking a general survey of the circumstances of India, he held that the prospect for the future was of the most satisfactory character.—Mr. FAWCETT, after the customary complaint of the lateness of the period at which the Budget was brought on, proceeded to contend that Mr. Stanhope's statistics were fallacious. So far from the general picture which he drew being correct, he maintained at great length that the Revenue was continually falling off and the Expenditure increasing; that the people of India were so poor that it was impossible to obtain an increased revenue without resorting to taxes which would produce so much discontent as gravely to imperil our position in India; and that circumstances had happened recently which must lead to a large increase of expenditure. Under this last head, Mr. Fawcett referred to the movement of troops from India to Malta, and concluded by moving a resolution, which was seconded by Mr. DILLWYN, declaring that, in view of the power claimed by the Crown to employ any number of Indian troops in all parts of Her Majesty's dominions, there is no sufficient security against the military expenditure of India being unduly increased.—In the desultory discussion which followed, Mr. HUBBARD criticised the form of the Indian accounts, and made some observations on the new loan.—Sir G. BALFOUR also commented on the change in the mode of presenting the Indian accounts, and complained of the Licence-tax.—Mr. MUNTZ insisted on the necessity of a reduction of expenditure; and Mr. MACIVER and Mr. WHITWELL also spoke.—The CHANCELLOR of the EXCHEQUER, in reply to some complaints of the state of the House, which was attributed to the Budget being fixed upon the same day as the Naval Review, interposed to protest against the suggestion that a thin attendance on these occasions meant a lack of interest in Indian affairs or diminished the usefulness of the discussion.—Mr. JACOB BRIGHT next insisted on the possibility of a reduction of taxation.—Mr. HAYTER attacked the large military expenditure.—Mr. CHARLEY and Sir G. BOWYER also made some remarks, and Sir G. CAMPBELL discussed the various points of the Budget at length. He complimented the Under Secretary for the clearness and fairness of his statement. He admitted that additional taxation was unavoidable, and that a reduction of expenditure was impossible except by abandoning some of our most civilising departments, and governing despotically, or in a rough and ready way. He was not satisfied with the measure for inquiring into the causes and prevention of famines, and doubted the figures of mortality given. As to the Army, no reduction could be made—and he thought we should look to the North of India as a recruiting ground in prospect of the increasing difficulty of filling the ranks of our European army. After some remarks on the possible disturbances on the North-West frontier, he reverted to Indian taxation. He believed that the people of India were lightly taxed, and that the new taxes were needful, and advised the Government, instead of inviting tenders for loans, to appeal to the people at large, as in France.—Mr. E. STANHOPE, in reply, thanked the House for their reception of his statement, and Sir George Campbell in particular for his valuable support of some portions of it. Mr. Fawcett's statements had surprised him, as he seemed to make no account of the avowed surplus of £2,000,000, and complained that the form of Indian accounts had been made to approximate to the English form. As to the increase of the debt in 1857, the amount was £52,000,000; in the next few years the increase arising out of the Mutiny was £26,000,000, and from that time to the present the increase was only £36,000,000, of which £24,000,000 had been spent on reproductive public works. As to the military expenditure, the annual nett charge for the army was fifteen-and-a-half millions, and in the present year it was reduced by £630,000. The movement of Indian troops had not occasioned any increase of forces in India. In the future any employment of native troops would occasion an inquiry as to contribution from the Imperial exchequer. He wished to ask what safeguards were meant by the resolution. As to the re-arrangement of the salt-tax, as affecting the native States, telegrams just received confirmed the statement that it was a just and fair one. As to the famine mortality, he adhered to the figures already mentioned.—On a division

Mr. Fawcett's resolution was negatived by 59 to 20. The House then went into Committee on the Indian Accounts, and the usual resolutions were agreed to.

CABUL.—In Committee on the Appropriation Bill, Sir C. DILKE asked for explanations of the rumoured advance of the Russians towards Afghanistan, and the mission of General Chamberlain to Cabul.—Mr. BOURKE replied that the Government had not heard of the Russians having crossed the Oxus, and did not believe they had; but he was not in a position to say where their forces were. They had also heard that a Russian Minister had reached Cabul, but they had no official information about his mission there. General Chamberlain had been sent to Cabul on a mission, of which he could say no more than it was of the kind which seemed to be called for by the circumstances, and for which the Government was ready to take the responsibility. Any interference by Russia with Afghanistan would be objected to now just as much as when the question of a neutral zone was discussed between the two Governments; and, considering that Russia had then pledged her word that Afghanistan was outside her sphere, the House would understand that the Government could not look with indifference on the acts which had recently been done in Central Asia.—Sir W. HARCOURT read an extract from a speech of Mr. Disraeli in 1872, to show that he had no fear of the "Central Asian scare;" and with regard to Greece, he maintained that nothing could be got out of the Porte except by the sword.—Mr. H. B. SAMUELSON made some remarks, and Mr. C. B. DENISON replied to Sir W. Harcourt that Mr. Disraeli's speech had nothing whatever to do with an advance towards the Oxus. The Russian movements might originally have been intended to find occupation for England in case of war; but their object no doubt was Merv, which was the first stage to Herat, and meant trouble for our Indian Possessions. He hoped, therefore, the Government would leave Russia in no doubt as to its intention.—The CHANCELLOR of the EXCHEQUER, while deprecating a discussion on hypothetical information, remarked that when the Indian Government heard of the establishment of a Russian Mission at Cabul the most obvious step was to send a Mission of corresponding weight and dignity. Undoubtedly it was the duty of English and Indian statesmen to watch all that was going on in those quarters, and the Government was fully alive to its responsibility in the matter.—Sir G. CAMPBELL hoped that there would be no attempt to force a Mission on an unwilling Ameer; while Sir G. BALFOUR strongly urged the Government to put the question to Russia whether she intended to disturb our frontier.

DECCAN RIOTS COMMISSION.—In answer to Mr. GRANT DUFF, Mr. E. STANHOPE said: The report of the Deccan Riots Commission, will, I hope, be distributed in a fortnight. The report relates only to the districts of Poona and Ahmednuggur, containing an area of 12,000,000 square miles, and a population of 1,680,000. It would be a mistake to assume from this report that a similar state of things has been shown to exist in other parts of India.

HOUSE OF COMMONS, WEDNESDAY, Aug. 14.—CYPRUS.—In answer to a question from Mr. MONK as to whether there was any truth in statements which had been published of serious sickness being prevalent among the troops at Cyprus, Colonel STANLEY said that the last official information on the subject had been received by telegram from Sir Garnet Wolseley two days ago, when he reported that there was no serious illness among the troops in Cyprus. He had also received a private letter from that officer to-day, in which it was stated that the health of the troops continued excellent. The medical report, which he had also received to-day, was to the same effect; therefore, there was no cause for anxiety on this head.

HOUSE OF COMMONS, THURSDAY, Aug. 15.—CABUL.—In answer to Mr. FAWCETT, the CHANCELLOR of the EXCHEQUER said that the Mission to Cabul had not been submitted to the Council of India, inasmuch as it was one of the matters which in the days of the East India Company would have been passed through the Secret Committee, and therefore, under the Act of 1859, it was decided, not by the Secretary of State in Council, but by the Secretary of State personally.—In answer to Sir H. HAVELOCK, the CHANCELLOR of the EXCHEQUER said he was not aware at present whether the Ameer had been asked to receive the Mission; but he had not invited it. A communication would certainly be made to him proposing the Mission. The cessation of friendly communications formerly existing occurred by the act of the Ameer himself, which had never been fully explained.

INDIAN FINANCE.—The following members (22, including tellers) voted for Mr. Fawcett's resolution—"That this House regards with apprehension the present position of Indian finance, and in view of the power claimed by the Crown to employ any number of Indian troops in all parts of her Majesty's dominions, except the United Kingdom, is of opinion that there is no sufficient security against the military expenditure of India being unduly increased:"—Sir George Balfour, Mr. Blake, Mr. Jacob Bright (Manchester), Mr. Burt, Mr. Courtney, Mr. Joseph Cowen, Mr. Delahunty, Sir Charles Dilke, Mr. Dunbar, Mr. Earp, Mr. Fawcett, Mr. D. J. Jenkins, Mr. A. M'Arthur, Mr. Monk, Mr. Muntz, Major Nolan,

Mr. H. Samuelson, Sir J. G. Tollemache Sinclair, Mr. Waddy, Mr. Whitwell. Tellers, Mr. Dillwyn and Mr. Hayter.

Miscellaneous.

EXPORT OF SPECIE.—The Peninsular and Oriental steamer Gwalior has left with £45,000 in bar silver for Bombay.

THE LEGATION AT YEDDO.—The Gazette announces the appointment of Mr. John Gordon Kennedy to be secretary to her Majesty's Legation at Yeddo, vice Mr. A. H. Mounsey.

MAJOR-GENERAL JOHN ROSS, C.B., commanding the Indian contingent, has left Cyprus on forty days' special leave of absence to England.

It is rumoured that Major-General S. Roberts, V.C., C.B., R.A., Quartermaster-General in India, is about to be appointed Chief Commissioner of the Indian frontier, under the new separation scheme.

THE KING OF SIAM is about to be invested with the Grand Cross of the Order of St. Michael and St. George; and the insignia has been despatched from England, with directions to Sir William Robinson, Governor of the Straits Settlements, to visit Bangkok and make the investiture.

THE ORIENTAL BANK CORPORATION notify that the coupons, due on the 1st of September, and the bonds drawn on the 13th ult. of the Chilean Government Five per Cent. Loan of 1873, and also the coupons due on the 1st of September, and the bonds drawn on the 13th ult., of the Chilean Government Five per Cent. Loan of 1875, will be paid by them on and after the 2nd prox.

BILLS ON INDIA.—Tenders were received on Wednesday at the Bank of England for £300,000 in bills on India. The amounts allotted were, to Calcutta £270,000, and to Bombay £30,000. Tenders on Calcutta at 1s. 7 1/2d. will receive about 94 per cent., above in full; on Bombay at 1s. 7 3/4d. in full. These rates show a reduction of more than 3-16 per rupee as compared with last week.

DEPARTURE OF TROOPS.—It has been arranged that the 8th Hussars shall sail from Portsmouth for India in her Majesty's ship Junna on December 16; the 2nd Battalion 5th Foot sailing from Portsmouth on January 30 in her Majesty's ship Serapis; the 2nd Battalion 6th Foot from Portsmouth on September 26 in her Majesty's ship Junna; the 2nd Battalion 14th Foot from Queenstown on October 6 in her Majesty's ship Crocodile; and the 30th Regiment from Portsmouth on March 6 in her Majesty's ship Euphrates.

LIEUT.-COL. R. CHALMERS, LATE BENGAL STAFF CORPS.—This officer died at Notting-hill on August 11, aged forty-seven. The gallant deceased served throughout the Indian Mutiny campaigns of 1857-59, and afterwards joined the Volunteer Cavalry, and served with Havelock's force from its first taking the field in July, 1857, to the end of the Mutiny. He also served with the force under Outram, occupying the Alumbagh, and was present at the capture of Lucknow and action of Ruttunpore.

LIEUT.-COL. W. G. WARD, MADRAS, S.C.—This Indian officer died at Hastings on Aug. 10, at the age of forty-eight. He received his first commission in 1851, served with the Madras Rifles during the suppression of the mutiny in Bengal from September, 1857, to November, 1859, and received the Mutiny medal with clasp for Central India. He was afterwards appointed Assistant-General Superintendent for the Suppression of Thuggee and Dacoity at Hyderabad.

CONGRESS OF ORIENTALISTS.—At the International Congress of Orientalists which will meet at Florence on the 12th of September and sit till the 18th, besides those already named, there will probably be present Mr. Edward Eastwick, Mr. E. L. Brandreth, Dr. Rost, of the India Office, Mr. Rogers, of Cairo, Lieut.-Col. Pearce, and the Rev. J. Long. The following public bodies and societies will be represented by delegates, viz., the India Office, the Universities of Oxford and Cambridge, the British Museum, the Royal Asiatic Society, the Philological Society, the Society of Biblical Archaeology, and the Anthropological Society. Tickets for the Congress may be obtained by applying to the delegates appointed by the Congress. Holders of tickets are entitled to a reduction of 30 per cent. on their railway fares in Italy, both going and returning.—Athenæum.

CYPRUS.—From the list of new companies registered, the particulars of which are given weekly in the Investors' Guardian newspaper, it appears that within the past fortnight six companies, with an aggregate capital of four millions one hundred and forty-five thousand pounds, have been registered for the purpose of carrying out operations in connection with our recently acquired possession of Cyprus. The companies are as follows:—Cyprus and Asiatic Turkey Investment and Land Mortgage—Capital £2,000,000, in £10 shares. Island of Cyprus Land and Trading—Capital, £100,000, in £5 shares. Bank of Cyprus and Trading Agency—Capital £25,000, in £20 shares. Cyprus Hotel and Club—Capital £20,000, in £5 shares. Cyprus Investment and Improvement—Capital £1,000,000, in £10 shares. Land Mortgage Investment and Trust Company of Cyprus—Capital £1,000,000, in £10 shares.

THE MAIL SERVICE TO THE EAST.—Referring to the subject of the new Mail contracts, the Daily Telegraph states that one of the most remarkable "round robins" perhaps ever witnessed in the City, signed by every firm and bank of eminence connected with the East, beginning with Messrs. Rothschild, and bearing such names as Sassoon, Hambro, Matheson, Ralli, and Dent, has been presented to the Postmaster-General on the subject of the new contract. The memorialists point out how smoothly the service hitherto in use has worked, how admirably it suits banking and exchange operations, and how gravely injurious any division of the service among different contractors might prove. They bear testimony to the "remarkable punctuality" with which the Peninsular and Oriental Company have carried the mails hitherto, and allege that "the efficiency of their service has been of the utmost value to the trade of the East." It is obvious from their language that the memorialists are strongly desirous the new contract should be given, other things being equal, to the Company, and in this they undoubtedly express the general opinion.

THE SECRETARY OF STATE FOR INDIA IN COUNCIL HEREBY GIVES NOTICE that the Government of India have informed him that it is their intention to issue the following NOTIFICATION in India on this date:—

SIMLA, Aug. 12, 1878.

Notification by the Government of India, Financial Department.

Whereas, by the terms of the Notification No. 28, dated April 20, 1859, and by the conditions of the Promissory Notes, dated May 31, 1859, bearing interest at 4½ per centum per annum, issued in accordance with that Notification, the said Promissory Notes may be paid off and discharged on or after May 1, 1879, on the expiration of a previous notice of three months, which notice may be first given on Feb. 1, 1879; and whereas it is the present intention of the Governor-General in Council to give the said notice, and to pay off the said notes on or about the dates aforesaid, his Excellency the Right Honourable the Governor-General in Council has resolved to raise a LOAN of TEN CRORES of RUPEES for this purpose, in the following manner:—

First.—This Loan shall be entitled "The Transfer Loan, 1879."

Second.—Promissory Notes will be issued for the said sum of Ten Crores of Rupees, in the two alternative forms annexed to this Notification.

Third.—The notes in the first form will bear interest at the rate of 4½ per centum per annum, and the principal repayable will be the amount stated in each note. The portion of the Loan for which these notes are issued will be entitled "The Transfer Loan, 1879, Four-and-a-Half per Cent. Portion."

Fourth.—The notes in the second form will be issued only in exchange for notes of the said Five-and-a-Half per Cent. Loan surrendered under the sixth and seventh clauses of this Notification. The portion of the Loan for which these notes are issued will be entitled "The Transfer Loan, 1879, Seven Shillings per Cent. Portion."

These notes in the second form will be discharged in Calcutta, when repayable, by the payment of the equivalent in rupees of £3 10s. sterling for each Rs. 100 of their amount; the said equivalent being calculated at the rate of exchange fixed by the Secretary of State for India in Council, with the concurrence of the Lords Commissioners of the Imperial Treasury, for the adjustment of transactions between the Indian and Imperial Governments, at the date of the expiry of the notice of the discharge of the notes.

Interest will be paid on these notes at the rate of the equivalent in Rupees of £3 10s. sterling per annum for each Rs. 1,000, the said equivalent being calculated at the rate of exchange fixed by the Secretary of State for India in Council, with the concurrence of the Lords Commissioners of the Imperial Treasury, for the adjustment of transactions between the Indian and Imperial Governments, at the time when each successive instalment of interest becomes due.

Fifth.—The promissory notes issued under this notification, whether in the first or second form,

Will be subject to the usual conditions and privileges as to renewal, consolidation, division, enforcement for the payment of interest at the Bank of England by drafts upon India, or at any Government treasury in India, and the like;

And will not be discharged before Sept. 15, 1893, or until after the expiry of a notice of not less than three months, which notice will not be issued before June 15, 1893.

Interest upon them will accrue from March 15, 1879, and will be paid in Calcutta half-yearly, upon and after Sept. 15 and March 15.

No note will be issued for less than 100 Rupees, or for any amount not being a multiple of 100 Rupees.

Sixth.—Until noon on Monday, Sept. 16, 1878, duly receipted Promissory Notes of the said Five and a Half per Cent. Loan of 1859-60 will be received at the Banks of Bengal, Madras, or Bombay, or any of their branches, or at any Government treasury in India, to be exchanged, without charge, for Promissory Notes of the Transfer Loan hereby advertised, enforced for the payment of interest in the same manner as the surrendered notes, either in the first or second form, at the option of the owners expressed in the receipt given for the contents of the surrendered notes. Accrued interest on such surrendered notes, and, further, interest thereon in advance to April 30, 1878, at the rate of 4½ per cent. per annum, will be promptly paid to the person entitled thereto.

If the owner does not specify the form (whether first or second) in which he wishes the notes of the Transfer Loan, 1879, to be issued to him, these notes will, in such case, be issued to him in the first, or Four-and-a-Half per Cent. form.

Seventh.—Or, until noon on Monday, Sept. 16, 1878, Promissory Notes of the said Five-and-a-Half per Cent. Loan will be received by the Bank of England in London, to be exchanged as aforesaid, and accrued and anticipation interest as aforesaid, paid to the person entitled, by a draft payable on demand, in Calcutta, Madras, or Bombay.

Eighth.—If, by reason of the duly certified absence from India or England, as the case may be, of the owner, or of one of the owners, of a note thus surrendered, a legal receipt for the contents thereof cannot be given by noon on Sept. 16, 1878, then, in such case, the surrender will be accepted if the note be left in the custody of the bank, branch bank, or Treasury in India, or of the Bank of England in London, as the case may be, and a legal receipt given before noon on Monday, Oct. 14 next.

Ninth.—Notes issued in exchange for notes of the Five-and-a-Half per Cent. Loan surrendered under the sixth and seventh clauses of this notification will form part of the total Transfer Loan of Ten Crores of Rupees hereby advertised, and interest thereon will accrue from March 15, 1879. The aggregate amount of the notes to be thus issued will be notified in the Gazette of India, and by the Secretary of State in London, as accurately and as soon as possible after Sept. 16, 1878, and tenders will be received for the whole or part of any amount remaining to complete the said sum of Ten Crores of Rupees in the following manner.

Tenth.—Promissory Notes for such remaining amount will be issued only in the first form annexed to this Notification.

Eleventh.—Tenders for the said remaining amount will be received by the Comptroller-General from this date to noon of Monday, October 21 next. In exercise of the powers conferred by the General Stamp Act, 1869, the Governor-General in Council is pleased to remit the duties chargeable under the said Act upon these tenders.

Twelfth.—Each tender must be addressed, in the form annexed to this Notification, to the Comptroller-General, Treasury-buildings, Calcutta, and enclosed in a sealed cover superscribed "Tender for Transfer Loan, 1879, Four-and-a-Half per Cent. Portion." If the tenderer is not resident in India, he must name an agent resident in India, to whom a letter of allotment may be issued, if any part of the Loan is allotted to such tenderer.

Thirteenth.—Each tender must be accompanied by a receipt from one of the Banks of Bengal, Madras, or Bombay, or one of their branches, or from an officer in charge of some Government Treasury, or by a cheque on a banker in Calcutta, Madras, or Bombay, or by Government Promissory Notes made payable to the Comptroller-General, for not less than one-hundredth, or, if the tender be for less than five lacs of rupees, then for not less than one-fiftieth part of the tender; this deposit of one or two per centum will be treated as in part payment of the last instalment, and will be forfeited if the allotment is not fully taken up; a cash deposit may, after acceptance of the tender in support of which it is made, be replaced by a Government promissory note.

Fourteenth.—The rate at which each tender is made must be specified in rupees, or rupees and annas; a tender in which no rate is thus specified, but a subscription is offered at the recorded minimum, or at some specified percentage in addition to the recorded minimum, will be rejected as null and void.

Fifteenth.—The rate at which a tender is made must not contain a fraction of an anna; if a rate containing a fraction of an anna is inserted in any tender, such fraction will be struck out, and the tender treated as if the rate did not contain such fraction of an anna.

Sixteenth.—The minimum rate at which tenders will be accepted will be recorded under the signature of the Comptroller-General, and, when the tenders are opened, placed upon the table, in a sealed envelope, but will not be declared unless some tender is rejected, only because it is below the recorded minimum.

Seventeenth.—Tenders will be opened publicly, at the office of the Comptroller-General in Calcutta, at noon on Monday, Oct. 21 next; but the contents of the tenders will not be disclosed otherwise than as provided in the 19th clause.

Eighteenth.—Tenders at the recorded minimum rate, and at rates above the recorded minimum rate, will be accepted in the order of the rates tendered, beginning with the highest rate; the amount allotted at the lowest rate at which tenders are accepted will be divided amongst those who have tendered at this rate, in proportion, as nearly as may be found convenient, to the amounts of their tenders.

Nineteenth.—As soon as possible after the said October 21 next, Letters of Allotment will be issued to those persons whose tenders are accepted in whole or in part, or to their agents; and the names of those to whom such Letters of Allotment are issued will be posted, for general information, at the head offices of the Banks of Bengal, Madras, and Bombay.

Twentieth.—Payment of any accepted tender may be made to the account of the Government in the head office of one of the Banks of Bengal, Madras, or Bombay, or in any branch of any of these banks, or into any Government treasury or treasuries in India which may be named in the tender.

One-third on or before Monday, Nov. 18, 1878.

One-third on or before Thursday, Dec. 19, 1878.

One-third on or before Monday, Jan. 20, 1879.

But the whole or any part of any accepted tender may be paid at any time after receipt of the letter of allotment.

Twenty-second.—Duly receipted promissory notes of the Government of India of the said Five and a Half per Cent. Loan of 1859-60 will be received in payment of accepted tenders, and accrued interest thereon, together with interest thereon in advance to April 30, 1879, promptly paid.

Twenty-third.—Interest upon each payment made in cash (not in promissory notes under the Twenty-second Clause) will be promptly paid in advance, at the rate of 4½ per centum per annum, from the date of such payment to March 14 next.

Twenty-fourth.—Scrip receipts for instalments paid or Promissory Notes of the Five and a Half per Cent. Loan of 1859-60 surrendered will be given by the Banks of Bengal, Madras, and Bombay, or their branches, or by the officers in charge of the Government treasuries at which payment or surrender is made, or, in the case of Promissory Notes of the Five and a Half per Cent. Loan of 1859-60 surrendered in London under the Seventh Clause of this notification by the Bank of England. These receipts will, as soon as possible, be exchanged for promissory notes, in one or other of the annexed forms, as provided in this Notification.

FIRST FORM OF PROMISSORY NOTE.

FOUR WILLIAM, March 15, 1879.

Transfer Loan, 1879, Four-and-a-Half per Cent. Portion. Promissory Note for Government Rupees (X), bearing interest, payable half-yearly, at the rate of 4½ rupees per centum per annum.

The Governor-General of India in Council does hereby acknowledge to have received from (A. B.) the sum of Government rupees (X), as a Loan to the Secretary of State in Council for India;

And does hereby promise, for and on behalf of the said Secretary of State in Council, on demand, three months after notice of repayment published by order of the Governor-General of India in Council in the Gazette of India, to repay the said loan of rupees (X) to the said (A. B.) his (or "her" or "their") executors, administrators, or assigns, or his (or "her" or "their") order in Calcutta, with interest to the date appointed for discharge, at the rate of 4½ per centum per annum; And such notice as aforesaid shall be equivalent to a tender of repayment at the period therein appointed for the discharge of this note.

And the Governor-General in Council hereby promises, on and after each succeeding 15th day of the months of September and March, until the expiration of three months after notice of repayment as aforesaid (when all further interest will cease), on demand, to pay to the said (A. B.), his (or "her" or "their") executors, administrators, or assigns, or his (or "her" or "their") order in Calcutta, interest on the said sum of Government rupees (X), for half a year, at the rate of 4½ per centum per annum.

The Governor-General in Council hereby further engages that notice of repayment as aforesaid shall not be given before June 15, 1893, and that this note shall not be discharged before Sept. 15, 1893.

SECOND FORM OF PROMISSORY NOTE.

(See Fourth Clause.)

FOUR WILLIAM, March 15, 1879.

Transfer Loan, 1879, 7s. per cent. portion. Promissory Note for Government rupees (X), bearing interest per Rs. 1,000 per annum, payable half-yearly at the rate of the equivalent in rupees, calculated at the adjusting rate of exchange of £3 10s. sterling.

The Governor-General of India in Council does hereby acknowledge to have received from (A. B.) the sum of Government rupees (X) as a loan to the Secretary of State in Council for India;

And does hereby promise, for and on behalf of the said Secretary of State in Council, on demand, three months after notice of repayment published by order of the Governor-General of India in Council in the Gazette of India, to repay the said loan of rupees (X) to the said (A. B.), his (or "her" or "their") executors, administrators, or assigns, or his (or "her" or "their") order in Calcutta, by paying to him (or "her" or "them"), or his (or "her" or "their") executors, administrators, or assigns, or his (or "her" or "their") order, for every hundred rupees, the equivalent in rupees of £3 10s. sterling, calculated at the rate of exchange fixed by the Secretary of State for India in Council, with the concurrence of the Lords Commissioners of the Imperial Treasury, for the adjustment of financial transactions between the Imperial and Indian Governments on the date when the aforesaid notice of repayment expires; together with interest to the date appointed for discharge at the rate hereinafter promised;

And such notice of repayment as aforesaid shall be equivalent to a tender of repayment at the period therein appointed for the discharge of this note.

And the Governor-General in Council hereby promises, on and after each succeeding 15th day of the months of September and March, until three months after notice of repayment as aforesaid (when all further interest will cease), on demand, to pay to the said (A. B.), his (or "her" or "their") executors, administrators, or assigns, or his (or "her" or "their") order in Calcutta, interest on the said sum of Government Rupees (X) for half a year at the rate per hundred Rupees per annum of the equivalent in Rupees of 7s. sterling, calculated at the rate of exchange fixed by the Secretary of State for India in Council, with the concurrence of the Lords Commissioners of the Imperial Treasury for the adjustment of transactions between the Imperial and Indian Governments on the day when each half-yearly payment of interest first becomes payable.

The Governor-General in Council hereby further engages that notice of repayment as aforesaid shall not be given before June 15, 1893, and that this note shall not be discharged before Sept. 15, 1893.

FORM OF TENDER.

I, A. B., hereby tender for rupees (X) of the Transfer Loan, 1879, Four-and-a-Half per Cent. Portion, advertised in the Notification published in the Gazette of India Extraordinary, dated Aug. 12, 1878, and agree to pay for the same, subject to the conditions notified, at the rate of rupees (x) annas (y)* for every hundred rupees allotted to me.

I enclose a deposit receipt† for rupees (X), and engage, if my offer be accepted, to pay to the account of the Government at the Bank of Branch of the Bank of ; or into the Government Treasury as the case may be) the first instalment on or before Monday, Nov. 18 next, and the several later instalments on or before the dates fixed by the Notification, as follows:—

One-third on or before Monday, Nov. 18, 1878,

One-third on or before Thursday, Dec. 19, 1878,

One-third on or before Monday, Jan. 20, 1879.

Any allotment made to me may be communicated to C. D., at‡

NOTE.—(1) A separate tender must be made at each rate tendered, and each tender must be supported by a separate deposit. In order to avoid mistakes, the tender, or, at least, the name of the tenderer, and the amount and rate tendered, should be written in English. The rate tendered should be the whole amount per cent, not the premium or discount, thus: "One hundred and two," or "One hundred," or "Ninety-nine," not "Two per cent. Premium," or "Par," or "One per cent. Discount."

By order of the Governor-General in Council, R. B. CHAPMAN, Secretary to the Government of India.

‡ Here enter the name of Bank, Branch Bank, or Treasury.

§ Here insert "C. D."s address, which must be in India. This paragraph should only be inserted if A. B. does not reside in India.

USE NO SUBSTITUTE.—See perpetual injunction against imitators; also the unanimous judgment before the Lords Justices Bramwell, Brett, and Cotton, Jan. 22, 1878, in H. Lamplough's favour.
Important to all, more especially English Ministers, British Consuls, and Europeans seeking to reside in safety in Tropical and Foreign Climates.

Her Majesty's Representative, the Governor of Sierra Leone, in a letter of request for an additional supply of PYRETIC SALINE, states:—"It is of great value, and I shall rejoice to hear it is in the hands of all Europeans visiting the tropics."

SICKNESS, HEADACHE, and NAUSEA are in most cases immediately relieved by taking a teaspoonful of a tumbler of cold water. This can be repeated once or twice in two hours, if needful.

SEA VOYAGES.—It is a very valuable accompaniment, and should on no account be omitted. It instantly allays the sea or bilious sickness.

For BILIOUS CONSTITUTIONS, giving rise to vitiated secretions, Indigestion, and Eruptions on the Skin, a teaspoonful should be taken daily with the dinner in a tumbler of water, and the same quantity on going to bed. May be obtained of the Proprietor,

Summary and Review.

OUR advices by the Overland Mail, which our readers will remark has been longer in transit than usual, are, from Bombay, August 2; Allahabad and Madras, July 31; Calcutta, July 30.

THE Madras papers give most cheerful news regarding the prospects of the country. The famine may be said to be at an end. From everywhere, with few exceptions, come reports of the good done by the recent rains, and the Government are now relieved of their grave anxiety. Most provident arrangements had been made for relief works and additional famine officers, whose services, it may be hoped, will not now be required. The irrigation works in Coimbatore and Salem are stopped, as the channels are full, and the labourers are being sent to the south coast canal. Relief works will not have to be provided for many weeks longer, and it is expected all, save those continued as plans of public utility, will be closed in October. In Madras the on dit that the Governor intends soon to relinquish his office has called forth the hope that his Grace will continue his term of office "now that he has acquired experience." The North-Western relief projects have been made the subject of a Resolution, the text of which will be published in our columns, but the most recent telegram informs us that in view of the greatly improved aspect of affairs throughout the north-west, the local Government is authorised to carry out proposals for lowering the rate of relief wages and turning off the works all able-bodied people who refused to do a fair task in relief employment, and all able-bodied people for whom work exists in the fields. The rainfall in Bengal has been most capricious, on the whole. Except in parts of Burdwan, Orissa, and Chutia Nagpore the prospects were good. The reports from the Indigo districts are unfavourable. In Lower Bengal the only district that will do well is Jessor, which, to compensate for this, is suffering from a strange and most destructive murrain amongst the cattle, hundreds of which have died. From Assam the latest reports state that in the Surma Valley the weather was cloudy, with good rain, and the crops were doing well. Cholera had disappeared from Katigora in Kachar. In the Brahmaputra Valley the weather was seasonable, but the aus crop had been damaged to some extent in the districts of Kamrup, Nagaong, Sibsagar, and Lakhimpur by the unusual rising of the river. Tea was doing well, except in Sibsagar, where the prospects were not favourable. Two shocks of earthquake, the second of which was most severe, and lasted about ten seconds, were felt at Kamrup at half-past eight on the morning of the 5th July, travelling from north-west to south-east. Cholera had disappeared from Lakhimpur. The rains in Darjeeling have proved too much for the red spider; and a promising flush only waits for sun.

THE accounts given of the floods in Upper Sind prepare us to expect to hear of heavy losses. Under date of July 17 the correspondent of the Civil and Military Gazette writes that the Kashmir and Begari Bund, on which Government have spent more than ten lacs of rupees, has breached at the seventh mile. The breach is 400 feet long, and closing is hopeless. Thus once again the hopes of the cultivators will be blasted. The country will be overswept (is being), and all the kharif cultivation has been sown to a larger extent than usual. The Jacobabad zemindars who live and cultivate along the Begari will be utterly ruined, as they have all incurred large expenses this season in the clearing and forming branch canals, purchase of seed, &c., in full confidence that the stability of the bund had been quite secured. Large tracts of kharif land had been sown; other large portions were in preparation by the plough; money, seed, and labour—all are now gone; and the poor fellows ruined. The mischief is not confined to the Jacobabad district, but extends in a lesser degree to Shikarpoor and Sukkur, where the floods are gradually spreading. The "Sind" Canal, which is thirty-seven miles long and sixty feet wide, has breached near the mouth, submerged Abad Melani, and destroyed the standing kharif crops near Lakhi, a town of very ancient date. One zemindar alone had some 1,400 begas of rice and jowari cultivation destroyed. Some of the Begari breaches have been fortunately got under control, but the larger one in the Kashmir and Begari bund seems to be hopeless. The Ghotki bund has given way, and most probably the town of Ghotki will be submerged. Mr. Foreman, the Deputy Collector, left Sukkur for Ghotki on the evening of the 16th. The present floods seem to be nearly as bad as those in 1874, when the western let assumed such alarming proportions that there was little hope of saving Jacobabad from its devastating effects. The Bombay Gazette of the 2nd inst. states "that no danger to Jacobabad is at present apprehended."

THE work of the famine is nearly over, and the Governor-General in Council has placed on record the thanks of the Government to the gallant military volunteers for famine duty last year, who, to the number of eighty, answered the call for help from the distressed Presidency of Madras. We shall publish in our next the full text of the official papers. The Governor-General in Council "cordially endorses the acknowledgments expressed to the gentlemen who had gallantly, under a trying climate, and in spite of disease, done a soldier's part in the campaign against famine." The resolution states that special concessions will be made to those who have suffered in health. The Bombay Gazette adds to this that officers who were driven home by sickness are to be allowed six months' full pay up to Rs. 600 a month.

DECORATIONS and durbais, where loyal speeches express the gratitude of the recipients, are now almost a weekly item of news. The Times correspondent telegraphs that a Durbar was held at Jeypore on the 16th, in presence of the chief Sirdars and European officers, for the investiture of the Maharajah with the Order of the Indian Empire. Returning thanks, he said:—"I cannot express in adequate language my sense of gratefulness for the token of Imperial favour conferred upon me by the Queen-Empress. The infinite obligation she has placed me under demands my constant attachment and devotion to the Throne, and loyal duties to the Sovereign always remain uppermost in my mind."

THE death of Abdulla Jan, the favourite son of the Ameer of Kabul, and the acknowledged heir of his throne, must be expected to exert a material influence on the situation in Kabul. It will not obviate but rather augment the necessity for the Kabul mission. The Times telegram reports the present state of affairs from the Camp of Exercise near the frontier:—Golam Hussein Khan, formerly a Risaldar of Cavalry, now a Jagheerदार in the Dunnoo district, has arrived at Peshawur on his way to Kabul, the bearer of a letter from the Viceroy to the Ameer, announcing that a mission is about to visit Kabul. The departure of the mission will, however, be so timed that it may not reach its destination before the beginning of October, so as to allow the prescribed forty days' public mourning for the death of Abdulla Jan to intervene. It is possible, if the Ameer continues obstinate, that the Government may adopt an intermediate policy by sealing the Khyber Pass and carrying out its scheme for a permanent rectification of the whole north-west frontier boundary, in accordance with the policy initiated by the occupation of Quetta.

ATTENTION has been drawn by the Civil and Military Gazette to the guarded, not to say hostile, attitude which the Chinese exclusive policy still maintains on our Indo-Tibetan frontier, no British subject being allowed to cross the boundary line in any portion of the Himalayan range. The clause in the Chefoo convention stipulating for an exploring mission either through Tibet to China, or through China to Tibet, must be held to have become nugatory by the efflux of the limited period. But as the negotiations cannot be considered as concluded, it is to be hoped that provision may be made for some facilities for communication, and that not only in the interests of Assam trade. The Pall Mall Gazette pointed out the other day that an endeavour ought to be made to induce the Chinese Government to recognise the trading treaty that was entered into between the late ruler of Kashgar and Sir Douglas Forsyth, so as to prevent the loss of all the advantages of our ten years' intercourse. It certainly should be an object of our diplomatists to convince the Chinese Government that it is better for both parties that we should obtain as great advantages from the re-establishment of the Peking Government as from the maintenance of a rebel ruler.

A SOMEWHAT conjectural description of a visit projected under the leadership of Major Sandeman into the Khan of Khelat's territories and Beloochistan is given by the Bombay Gazette. Though some arrangement had been made for the despatch of the expedition without any delay, its immediate departure is postponed. Major Sandeman is still at Simla, but is ready to start at the most convenient opportunity. He will first of all, we believe, go to Dera Ghazee Khan, and thence to Jacobabad, where an escort of 250 men of Jacob's Rifles and 200 sabres of the 2nd Sind Horse will be ready to take him over the frontier. He will then, after perhaps visiting Dadur and Quetta, go to Khelat, where he will have an interview with the Khan; thence to Nal, westward of the great valley of Khozdar, which is extensive and well-watered, and in parts fertile and highly cultivated. Nal is the head quarters of the Bezanjee tribe, and is 3,390 feet above sea level. From Nal Major Sandeman will take a route hitherto quite unexplored, and probably where no European has before been, unless it was Mr. Masson some fifty or more years ago. The route to be taken will be from Nal to Panigur in Mekran. Panjur is the chief town of the district of the same name, which is one of the richest and most fertile districts in Mekran.

THE most recent despatches received from the Chargé d'Affaires at Peking on the subject of the famine in China, dated June 10, and just issued, give a more hopeful account of the prospects of the coming season. A fair quantity of rain, enough to permit the autumn crops to be sown, has fallen in all parts of North China, and a number of emigrants have been sent back from Tientsin to Shansi with a provision of seed-corn. Abundant rain has fallen in the Peking district, and the epidemic of typhus was reported as abating. This is an improvement on the accounts of the latter part of May, when it was feared that the famine in Shansi must continue through another year, no rain having fallen in Shansi, and but a scanty fall having been experienced in Honan. The surplus harvests of Southern Manchuria have availed but little to relieve the frightful distress of Shansi. The total of deaths is roughly calculated at 7,000,000, the province of Shansi alone having lost 5,000,000. In the districts where the distress is most severe "the people prey upon each other like wild beasts," and in hundreds, or even thousands of villages seven-tenths of the population had perished by the end of May. No words could enhance the terrible significance of these brief statements.

THE Resident at Aden reports that the roads between Zeylah and Hurar have recently been interrupted. Many of the Kaffilas which started from Zeylah for Hurar have been plundered on the way by the Esa tribe. A Kaffila belonging to the Egyptian Government conveying jowari from Hurar to Zeylah has also been plundered by them. When the last Kaffila, which contained valuable goods, viz., cloth, &c., belonging to the Arab merchants, was plundered whilst on its way from Zeylah to Hurar, Aboobekar Pasha, the Governor of Zeylah, sent his son, Kazi of Zeylah, with ten others to the Esa tribe to persuade them to stop plundering, and to inquire into their grievances. The Shaikhs of the Esa tribe replied that the honour they used to get before the occupation of the country by the Egyptian Government, is now no more accorded to them, but, on the contrary, they are dishonoured and oppressed by that Government in every way. There is also a report that some differences have arisen on account of the tax collections between the Egyptian authorities and the Somali tribes of Bursoog and Busteh, living two days' distance from Hurar, the Egyptian authorities sent a force to coerce them; a fight ensued, in which about 500 were killed on the side of the Egyptians and many on the side of the Somalis. No agreement nor settlement has been come to yet regarding the above disturbances. No news from Yeman or from the interior worth relating.

THE Commander-in-Chief having represented the faults of the present system of sending sick officers before final medical boards to the Government of India, a resolution has been issued to the effect that officers of the British Service, not employed on the staff, are to be in future exempted from examination by a medical board at the port of embarkation, provided they have been passed by a medical committee in the divisions or districts in which they may be serving, and recommended for leave to proceed homewards. In fact, the medical man attending a patient will be now heard as to whether change of air and scene are likely to be the best restorative. Special rules on the subject will be shortly published by the Adjutant-General.

THE annual distribution of prizes to the pupils of Bishop Cotton's schools at Bangalor took place on the 17th ult. Mr. J. D. Gordon, Chief Commissioner of Mysor, presided on the occasion, supported by Lieutenant-General Elmhirst and other officers. A medal was awarded to Miss E. A. Gow, the first girl pupil in Southern India who has passed the matriculation test. The Chairman commented on the satisfactory state of the schools, as shown by the increasing numbers, and the results attained, as an instance of the solid education furnished to the pupils under the teaching of Dr. Pope. He mentioned that a pupil of the schools had proceeded to England and surpassed five hundred competitors in his knowledge of English literature. The present want of the schools was a provision for scholarships, and the Chairman suggested an annual appeal for funds. We venture to add a suggestion to some of the old pupils of Dr. Cotton in England that this affords an opportunity for showing that affection for his memory that all, whether old Rugbeians or Marlburians, who were under his tuition must still feel.

THE Government of India has decided to open a Forest School at Dehra Dun, under the superintendence of Capt. Bailey, R.E. Hitherto, the Nancy Forest School has been the only institution available for training officers for service in the Forest department, and thus natives of India were unduly handicapped, though it has been considered desirable to employ them in all grades of the Forest service. The establishment of an Indian Forest School has, therefore, been looked upon for a long time past as a desideratum, and was the subject of a minute by Sir Richard Temple, when Lieutenant-Governor of Bengal. At first, the new school will be merely employed in training candidates for the Executive branch of the service, though ultimately it is probable that it will be concerned with the preparation of officers for the Controlling Branch likewise. For the present, natives of India only will be admitted as students of the new school. The forest divisions of Dehra Doon and Jaunsar, in the Meerut division, and the leased forests of the Native State of Garhwal, on the Tons and Jumna rivers, as well as a portion of the forests leased from the Bashahr State, will be attached to the school, and put under the control of Captain Bailey, who will rank as an additional Conservator of Forests on a salary of Rs. 1,000 a month. Captain Bailey will assume charge of the forests assigned to the school on the 1st of September next, but as it will not be possible by that date to organise the staff, which it is proposed to form, students will not be received into the school till the 1st of June next. For some time to come it will be necessary, the Government believe, to encourage the school by giving students advances of money under the authority of their local Governments or administrations to cover the cost of their education. Eight scholarships have also been sanctioned. These will be worth Rs. 120 a month in the aggregate; and they will be granted to any candidates who may be considered exceptionally promising. Eventually, however, it is intended that fees shall be charged for the instructions given in the school.

WE record for the information of the Royal Humane Society that a most gallant feat as performed by Captain Walter Ellis, of H.M.'s 48th Regiment, the other day. A coolie from a coffee estate near Palghat lost his way, and was wandering for four days on the banks of the Taekudy river (in the Annamully Forests), without food, but did not attempt to cross it. Captain Ellis, who was shooting in the vicinity, having been informed of the matter, immediately proceeded to the river, and giving one end of a rope to his shikarries, took the other end himself, and plunged into the stream to swim across. The current, however, was so strong, that although the gallant captain is a very powerful man, and good swimmer, he was washed down the river for more than a hundred yards, and it was with the greatest difficulty that he succeeded in getting across. Nothing daunted by this experience of the strength of the stream, Captain Ellis fastened the rope around the coolie's waist, and conveyed him about half way through the river, where, however, the current was so powerful that Captain Ellis was washed down the stream. The shikarries on the other side, however, pulled the coolie safely to land by the rope the gallant captain had fastened round his waist. The coolie was then taken care of by his gallant preserver, and gradually restored to health after his narrow escape from death by starvation, which but for Captain Ellis's bravery must have been his fate.

THE hailstones that effected so much damage at Futteghur during the storm of April 13 have been made the subject of a memorandum by the Executive Engineer of the Agra Division. The corrugated iron roofs were pierced in twenty-five places, one rent apparently measuring four inches in diameter. The piece of iron thus pierced has, however, been brought to England, and therefore the exact measurement cannot be given. Holes of two inches diameter have been actually measured. The roofing was only eighteen months old, and in perfectly good condition. Three-fourths of the tiles of an adjoining foundry were broken by the hailstones, which all observers agreed in describing as being as large as a man's two fists put together. A cowherd was reported to have been killed, and a soldier received a very bad cut on the back of his head.

OFFICIAL reports from Resht state that the silk crop in Ghilan is expected to be worse even than last year's crop, which was the smallest hitherto known. It seems that most of the silk-worms' eggs imported from Khorassan turned out to be spurious; while as for those of Ghilan itself, the microscope showed beforehand that they were worthless. The failure of silk in Ghilan is an old story. Once the province exported over 5,000 tons of raw silk, worth a million sterling and more; and then the quantity fell to 500 tons.

THE Bombay Gazette of 2nd inst. contains the statement that telegrams had been received in Bombay announcing that the Island of Socotra has been formally annexed to the dominions of her Majesty Queen Victoria. The most recent Times telegram, however, contradicts the occupation of Socotra. We must therefore suppose that Sultan Allah Bin Abdalla Bin Saad Bin Salim Bin Towari Bin Afreer still rules undisturbed over his insular dominions.

AN interesting report has been submitted by the Commissioner of Arakan, relating to the localities in which india-rubber is procurable within or adjacent to the territories of British Burma:—The Commissioner says, that "the rubber which has this dry season been brought down for the first time to our Northern frontier by clans of the little-known Shandoo or 'poor' race, is alleged by them to be received in barter from the 'Looshair,' but as these Shandoo clans are of the wildest and most suspicious character, it has been undesirable to press them too closely on the point of the locality from which they obtain the same, as several had never before seen an European. If too much eagerness is evinced on the subject on first introduction to our new visitors, they will leave with the impression that, if we learn the source of the product, Government may occupy their country, and hence the information, meagre as it is, elicited from them on the point in course of casual conversation (for direct queries are out of the question), has to be received quantum valeat. The tribes who have recently brought down the trade mostly reside to the south and north of the Blue Mountain and some in territory, a large portion of which is unsurveyed and undefined." The Commissioner remarks that his own impression is "that the Ficus Elastica is indigenous to the above tract of country, and that the theory of their obtaining the same from the Looshais is a blind, because the natural outlet of the rubber trade from the Looshai country is Demigeri, in the Chittagong hill tracts. The relationship of the above referred to Shandoo tribes with the Looshais is the reverse generally of that intimate and friendly kind which would allow of their obtaining the rubber for which the Looshais, for some years, have had a good mart in the Chittagong hill tracts. Indirect information supplied to the Commissioner points to the fact that the Ficus Elastica is to a limited extent indigenous to the tract of country about half a degree south of the Blue Mountain."

A TELEGRAM from Cyprus, dated August 25, announced that the last batch of Indian troops were to sail to-day. The English regiments had (August 14) about 10 per cent. on the sick list suffering from light fever, owing, according to the Times correspondent, to "maintenance in a land of extreme heat, of habits suitable to a temperate atmosphere." The social atmosphere has been also over heated, and riotous reprisals on Turkish officials at Kyrenia, and serious crimes, especially in Papho, call for an exercise of speedy and effectual justice. A timely warning is conveyed to eager speculators that for a long time to come prospects for commercial enterprise will hardly be encouraging, there is no one to consume imported goods beyond the present supply, and as the garrison will only consist of two regiments, even Mr. Thomas White, of Aldershot, who has visited the island, has returned to England in disgust. Lord Gifford from Ceylon, and Capt. McCalmont, of the 7th Hussars, have arrived and commenced their duties as Aide-de-Camp. General Watson has sailed for England on leave. Difficulties are experienced from the want of competent translators of the Government proclamations.

The transport s.s. Bangalore, Capt. E. Stead, arrived in Bombay harbour on 27th ult., from Malta, whence she sailed on 8th July. She brought seventy-nine invalids and camp-followers, and three warrant officers, under command of Major Cruickshank, with Dr. Street in medical charge. She experienced sultry weather in the Red Sea, the thermometer indicating ninety-seven degrees day and night. Two invalids died before reaching Aden.

A RUMOUR has reached us, possibly suggested by a paragraph in last week's issue of the Homeward Mail, that Dr. Leitner is likely to be transferred from his rectorial chair in the Punjab to a post under the Administration of Cyprus. The eminence that the learned Doctor has attained as an oriental scholar and a philologist, as well as the power of imparting knowledge that he has displayed, may point him out as a fit auxiliary in the future regeneration of the Levantine population, among whom his early training would make him thoroughly at home.

STUDENTS of the geographical and topographical features of Cyprus will find them most carefully delineated on the large map published by Mr. Wyld, and appropriately dedicated to the Earl of Beaconsfield, K.G. Small marginal maps show the agricultural and geological divisions, as well as the anchorages of our new dependency, of which this admirable specimen of cartography affords a complete panorama.

Odds and Ends.

AWADB-IN-UMUR SULTAN NAWAZ JUNG, Bahadoor, Chief of Chahar Arabia, when in Poona, presented to his Excellency Sir Richard Temple, Bart., four valuable Arab horses. Another valuable Arab horse was presented by the above Chief to the Honourable James Gibbs, member of his Excellency the Governor's Council. The local papers state that all the horses have been sent to Messrs. Ludda, Ebrahim, and Co., for the purpose of being disposed of by public auction on account of Government.

H. H. AGA KHAN has adopted measures to unite the two factions of the Khojahs and for removing the misunderstanding that now prevails. He invited to his house the members of the families of the murdered man and of the murderer, and spoke to them seriously on the unprofitableness of maintaining such hatred against each other. They seemed convinced by what was said, and it is expected that all violence will henceforth cease between the two parties.—Friend of India.

THE report on Excise Administration in the North Western Provinces for 1876-77 states that there was substantial increase in most of the heads of excise revenue. The receipts from opium fell, as well as those from country spirits; but the former is said to be attributable to frauds to an enormous extent in the opium-growing districts.

THE barque Vimera was to leave Madras about the 25th ult. with a batch of emigrants for Port Natal. This shipment will be closely followed up by another, the local agent having a pretty large stock on hand in the Depot at Cassemode. The employment of "recruits" appears to have worked a marked improvement in the system of collecting emigrants.

THE Pioneer says that the King of Burmah's obstinacy has prevailed, and that the murderer of Mr. Cooper is to be removed to British territory for execution.

THE Bombay Gazette announces that H. E. the Gaekwar of Baroda's marriage will take place next month, and Tarabae's (his adopted sister) the following month. Great tamashas are expected on each occasion.

2. The Notification of this Department, No. 917, dated 26th May, 1874, is hereby cancelled.

NEW RAILWAYS.—The various projects for light railway extension, which have been so frequently discussed within the last two years, are rapidly taking definite shape. The railway budget of the local Government for the current financial year brings up our information to a late date. The expenditure on the Muttra and Hattas line up to the 1st April last has been ten lakhs and a half. For the present it is not proposed to extend the line, and the only allotment of funds to this railway for 1878-79 is Rs. 40,000 for the purchase of more rolling-stock. The next project in order of completion is the short line from Ghazipore to Dildarnugger. Capital to the amount of nearly five lakhs will be locally subscribed, and by the end of 1878-79 the line should be more than half finished. The survey has been completed, and the necessary land taken up. During the current year the construction of the permanent roadway and the line will be pushed on, and the building of the station commenced. In 1879 the first trains should run through this part of the province, which hitherto has never heard the sound of the steam whistle. Ghazipore is in every way well suited for an experiment in light railways. It is the opium warehouse for India, and the cloth-trade is larger than that of any other town in the province. But the Cawnpore and Farukhabad Railway is the one on which the resources of the local Government are to be concentrated this year. The total estimate for the line amounts to thirty-four lakhs. Of this sum over eleven lakhs are to be spent during 1878-79, and if all goes well the line should be opened in 1880. Great expectations have been formed about the success of this project. At one end of the line is Cawnpore, the wealthiest city in North India, and one that bids fair to become the Manchester of these provinces. The other terminus is a city great in the commercial memories of the past, still retaining a good deal of the cloth trade of the surrounding districts. Three other lines are also under survey; the Manikpore and Banda, the Cawnpore and Man Ranipore, and the Sitapore, Lucknow and Rai Bareilly.

The Letter on the Indian Budget is unavoidably postponed.

TO CORRESPONDENTS.

All Letters for insertion in Allen's Indian Mail should be legibly written on one side of the paper only, and accompanied with the real name and address of the writer, not necessarily for publication, but as a guarantee of good faith. ## ALLEN'S INDIAN MAIL, TUESDAY, August 27, 1878.

INDIA IN PARLIAMENT.

NOTWITHSTANDING the paucity of the numbers present at the discussion on the Indian Budget, it cannot be argued that the affairs of India have met with scanty consideration during the 136 days on which the House of Commons sat in the course of the past Session. The intimate connection, the solidarity of Indian and British interests may be fairly said to have been made more patent not only to the English public, but to the world at large, during the eventful months from January 18 to August 16 than ever before. The paragraph in the Queen's Speech which spoke of the Famine in India, and the munificent response of British sympathy to the call for assistance from our Indian fellow subjects, was a fitting prelude to the constant attention paid to the material progress of India. In like manner the debates on the Address to the Crown struck the keynote of our policy, in the words of the Duke of Argyll, that "at any cost we would prevent interference with our access to India."

We will not inflict on our readers the statistics of the questions asked, the papers moved for and the Blue-books printed referring to greater or lesser Indian interests. Any one who has assiduously followed the Parliamentary proceedings will not fail to have observed that there is a steady increase in the number of members who, with more or less knowledge, and more or less success, devote themselves to the various problems of Indian policy and economy, or even the individual grievances of Anglo-Indians or natives. From one or two of them, who seem to delight in thrusting themselves into such subjects, their clients may well pray to be defended; "non tali auxilio, nec defensoribus istis" is strongly applied by the Indian Press to the volunteer advocacy of certain members of the Irish Obstructive party. But putting such aside, we hail with satisfaction the growing disposition of members of the Imperial Parliament to take up even minor details of Indian Administration; just as we see with satisfaction that the natives of India are learning to bring their grievances, real and imaginary, before the Houses of Lords and Commons, sure, at least, of a patient and impartial hearing. Perhaps some of our readers will disagree with this sentiment; we deprecate, with Mr. Fawcett, interference in the internal details of administration, but we think that no "highly mischievous interference with Indian affairs is likely to result," especially if his admirable rule be strictly adhered to, that such affairs shall not be made a subject for party discussion or manoeuvre. Whether it be in the nature of things that such a rule should be rigidly followed, or whether the last session has furnished striking examples of the contrary, we will not pretend to determine. Government has to administer, Opposition has to criticise, and both functions have been well exercised during the past Session in regard to Indian affairs. If the Session may be almost said to have terminated with the Indian Budget, we must look back, and we shall see that the question of Indian Finance touched on in the debate on the Address was made an early subject of discussion. The universal feeling that India must, if possible, be guarded against famine, found an early vent in the Government motion for the appointment of a Select Committee on Public Works, when the wholesale plans for irrigation advocated by Sir A. Cotton were the cause of a smart skirmish. With the exception of Mr. Bright, who confined himself to a defence of himself, and the plans he advocated, the principal speakers on the subject of Indian Finance enunciated their opinions much as they have done on several subsequent occasions. Mr. Fawcett attacked Sir J. Strachey's finance, and laid down the axiom that a shilling saved in India was better than a pound saved in England (which shilling, by the way, was, in our last issue, carelessly converted by us into a penny). Sir George Campbell attacked the irrigation plans, and Sir George Balfour took up the cause of Madras. The result was a compromise, and the Committee of Public Works, the result of whose labours we still expect. Three days later Sir George Campbell attacked the increase of the Salt-tax in Madras and Bombay, which was gallantly defended by Lord George Hamilton, seconded by Mr. Grant Duff, who passed a generous encomium on Lord Lytton's administrative powers. Dr. Playfair enforced the need of sufficient salt for health, while Sir George Balfour opined that "we had in every way insulted the Madras Presidency;" and Mr. O'Donnell, with a truly Hibernian contempt for the possibilities of finance, objected to all the Indian taxes. This discussion anticipated the formal announcement of Sir J. Strachey's financial statement, which in principle and detail was formally attacked by the three resolutions moved by Mr. Fawcett on April 2, when, as the Under-Secretary for India plaintively remarked, the House for the third time in ten weeks considered the Indian Budget of 1878-79. On this occasion, though the division lists showed a muster of 163 to 87 and 159 to 96 against the first and second resolutions respectively, aimed at the increase of the Salt-tax and the Licence-tax, the audience was but scanty. The Income-tax was advocated by Mr. Grant Duff, who believed that it was a necessary part of any permanent scheme of Indian taxation, and by Sir George Campbell, who declared that it had only been abolished because of Lord Northbrook's prejudice against it. The cause of economy, ably advocated by the mover of the resolutions, was supported by Mr. Smollett, who charged Lord Salisbury with "revelling in profuse expenditure in India." The financial scheme of the Indian Government was thoroughly expounded by Lord George Hamilton, who declared it to be "comprehensive and statesman like, and so balanced that to veto any part of it would upset the equilibrium of the whole." We are sure that the promise then given, that the working of the Salt-tax, as affecting the health of the people, will be faithfully kept by the ministers who in the subsequent change have succeeded to the Indian portfolios. The subsequent debate in the House of Lords on Lord Northbrook's motion, and that upon the Indian Budget in the Commons, could not add anything to the arguments advanced on both sides, save the welcome assurance given by Lord Cranbrook as to the adjustment of the Home charges, and the improved prospects described by Mr. Stanhope. Throughout the discussions to which the brief conversation on the possible or impossible means for remedying the loss on Indian exchange, initiated by Sir George Campbell, must be added, we are struck by the diametrical contradictions; or rather, we may say, that the opposing statesmen do not fairly meet each other. The stern needs of economy have been well enforced by Professor Fawcett, but the application of the principle must be a work of time. The means of fairly distributing taxation, of making some of the hoarded wealth which is said now to enjoy immunity contribute to the wants of the country, may be yet discovered. But it cannot be charged on the legislation that the all-important questions of governing without burdening the people, of reconciling Imperial expenditure with the well-being of the subjects, have not been thoroughly discussed, even to repetition and bewilderment, during the past session.

The employment of the Indian contingent can hardly be considered as an Indian subject, in so far as the long debates thereupon are concerned. As an historical point of departure, and as a practical realisation of the intimate union of the Empire of India with Great Britain, it has an unsurpassable interest; but in the debates of Parliament it can only be regarded as affording an opportunity for measuring the strength of the two great parties. Interposed, as by force of circumstances it was, between the first excitement caused by the news of the Vernacular Press Act, and the debate on Mr. Gladstone's motion relative thereto, it furnished an opportunity for the loud expression of a difference of opinion between the native Press and their champion. What the Opposition so loudly reprobated, the native Press with one voice praised; we must not, however, be supposed to hint that the eloquence of Mr. Gladstone was at all chilled or restrained by the dissonance of the utterances of his clients in India and his supporters in England. The difficulties of dealing with, even of reviewing, the acts of the Indian administration in the House of Commons were most strikingly evidenced on that occasion. When the Vernacular Press Act was first brought to the knowledge of the public in England Mr. O'Donnell promptly rushed to the front, on March 20, with a fierce condemnatory resolution, which, however, was withdrawn at the instance of Mr. Gladstone, "On the score of prudence and fairness, and a sense of Parliamentary propriety, he had almost said decency." The same member moved a strongly-worded amendment to the mild motion with which Mr. Gladstone delivered his soul on July 23, when, after the whole hearings of the case had been fully understood, Lord Cranbrook's judicious action was approved as necessary, however repugnant to the English desire of affording absolute liberty of the Press to all.

One other topic of vital importance to India was handled during the session, viz., the constitution of the Native Army. We do not refer to the several questions asked, or to the contemptible effort to make the Indian army one of the subjects of motions introduced to obstruct public business, by retarding the Mutiny Act. That occasion is only memorable for the success of Dr. Kenealy in insulting the whole body of officers, as on another occasion Sir W. Lawson cast obloquy on the soldiery. The present organisation was assailed by Lord Waveney on July 16, when Lords Cranbrook and Northbrook concurred in upholding it, and deprecating any attempt to reopen the question. The Duke of Cambridge took the opportunity of declaring the Indian troops to be "well-qualified and worthy to take their position among the Imperial forces of her Majesty." The question, however, of the organisation will form a connecting link between this and next Session, as Sir H. Havelock has given notice that he will on an early day call attention to the subject, a purpose which he has been prevented from carrying out by the exigencies of the public interests during the Session of 1878.

MONOPOLIES.

TO THE EDITOR OF "ALLEN'S INDIAN MAIL."

SIR,—I beg you to bring to the notice of the Indian Government the dangers of monopolies in the salt trade. In page 762 of your paper of the 10th inst. you have quoted from the Madras Times the news that the authorities in the Salt department are about to supply the Vizagapatam district with salt from Vedarniem, in the Tanjore district. Vedarniem lies in north latitude 10deg. 24sec., while a great part of the Vizagapatam district lies north of the 18th degree of latitude. The Salt department intends that communication between the two districts shall be in country vessels.

Now, what security is there that one or more of the vessels be not wrecked, and, if such a calamity should occur, how are the loyal subjects of her Majesty to obtain salt without cheating her Government of the duty? If the Kupily salt station near Bimlipatam, in the Vizagapatam district, is to be closed, would it not be better to get the necessary supplies of salt from Liverpool? Why should the Tanjore and South Arcot districts have a monopoly of supplying a distant part of the country with one of the necessities of life?

On the 23rd of February last I pointed out in your columns the danger of leaving a great part of Northern India dependent on the Ajmere-Agra railway for salt. On Government's taking away some of the State railway waggons up went the prices of salt for forty millions of people, at least for that fraction of the forty millions who prefer to eat duty-paid salt. If inquiries be instituted it will, I believe, be found that loyal natives living in longitude 85deg. look for their supplies of duty-paid salt from the Sambhur Lake, ten degrees west of them.

If Government should persevere in its design to make a monopoly of Sambhur salt, it is its duty to establish depots of that salt within one hundred miles of each other, where any quantity of salt could be bought at a fixed price all the year round.

Aug. 13.

THE LATE LIEUT. COLONEL ROBERT CHALMERS.

TO THE EDITOR OF "ALLEN'S INDIAN MAIL."

SIR,—I trust you will permit me to place on record in your columns the gallant services of an officer who passed away on August 11. Lieut. Colonel Robert Chalmers, commanding 14th Bengal Lancers, was one of that class who faithfully and unobtrusively perform their duty without thought of reward beyond that approval of conscience which Governments can neither give nor take away. Colonel Chalmers, who joined the Indian Army in 1849, saw active service both before and after the Indian Mutiny, but it was during that memorable struggle, when so many reputations were made and marred, when mediocrity and imbecility displayed itself in high places no less than genius—it was during that greatest of epochs in our Indian rule that Robert Chalmers showed the stuff of which he was made. In 1857 he was attached to the 1st Oudh Irregular Infantry, which mutinied at Peshadeepore on the 10th June. After narrowly escaping with his life, and enduring many privations and escapes, Lieutenant Chalmers reached Allahabad, where he joined the Ferozepore Regiment of Sikhs, forming part of the small column which marched, on 30th June, under Major Renaud, who had orders to push on at all hazards to the relief of Cawnpore. At Lohangah, forty-four miles in advance of Allahabad, Major Renaud received intelligence of the massacre of the Cawnpore garrison; and Lieutenant Chalmers, on learning that he was in want of a messenger to carry the news to General Neill, at Allahabad, and obtain fresh instructions, immediately volunteered to perform the service, an office which Major Renaud gladly accepted, though he did not conceal from him "the almost desperate nature of the task he had undertaken," as the country through which he had forced his way was teeming with a hostile population, and "the insurrection had immediately closed in on his track as soon as he passed." Lieutenant Chalmers, nothing daunted, succeeded in accomplishing the perilous duty, and after escaping numerous dangers, rode into Allahabad soon after midnight on the 2nd July. "It is scarcely possible," writes Sir Henry Havelock, "to imagine a service of greater risk, one requiring greater determination and adroitness, or involving more important results to the force, whose movements and very existence depended on a speedy reply to the letter." Lieutenant Chalmers now joined Havelock's Volunteer Cavalry raised by Major Barrow, and participated in the following actions:—Futtehpoore, 12th July; Oung and Pandoo Nuddee, 15th July; battle and recapture of Cawapore, 16th and 17th July; and Bhitoor, 18th July. On the first advance to the Relief of Lucknow, the actions of Oonas and Bussacut Gunge on the 1st, 2nd, and 3rd; and at the second advance, the actions of Mungelwur, 21st, Alumbagh, 23rd, and first Relief of Lucknow, 25th September. He was engaged in its subsequent defence for two months, served under Sir James Outram throughout the severe fighting at Alumbagh from 25th November, 1857, to 18th March, 1858, and was present at the final capture of Lucknow. Lieutenant Chalmers, who was twice wounded, and had a horse shot under him, was mentioned by name for his services with the Volunteer Cavalry, in which, like Outram and many officers without regiments, he served in the capacity of a trooper. "The value," writes Sir Henry Havelock, "of the services of that small band of officers, who constituted the only cavalry of the force, cannot be over-estimated, nor can the hardships and privations they endured for months, while taking every duty that falls to the lot of a private soldier in the field, and that, too, not in any ordinary degree, but to an extent that has perhaps never been paralleled, as their small numbers and the exigencies of the very peculiar service in which they were engaged allowed them no rest or relief night and day, while they were incessantly exposed, without covering, to drenching rain or burning sun, and deprivation of food, such as no other portion of the force was subject to."

For his services Lieutenant Chalmers was appointed second in command of the Jat Horse, which formed part of the column operating under Colonel Kelly in the Azimgurh district and on the Nepaul frontier. At the action of Ruttunpoore, near Bootwal, on the 25th March, 1859, Lieutenant Chalmers performed an act of brilliant gallantry. He was in command of a squadron of Jat Horse on the extreme left of the line, and seeing a large body of the enemy, cavalry and infantry, advancing rapidly down a hill, from which two of their guns were firing, he, without a moment's hesitation, charged up the hill at the head of his squadron, forced back the rebels, then wheeled to the right, and after a hand-to-hand mêlée, captured a gun which continued firing until taken, and finally drove the enemy into the jungle. Major G. C. Henry, R.A., commanding a battery, who witnessed the affair, writes:—"The service performed by Lieutenant Chalmers was a desperate one, because both men and horses were exhausted by a long march under a burning sun, while the opposing forces were quite fresh. The charge was made up hill against overwhelming numbers of the enemy, and against a gun firing from position and strongly supported. Indeed, the rebel force was so large and showed such a bold front that I hardly expected to see Lieutenant Chalmers return alive. In this charge the squadron of Jat Horse lost nearly one-fourth of its number in killed and wounded."

Three native officers and four troopers were decorated with the Order of Merit, but Lieutenant Chalmers, who was the only European officer present, and killed two men with his own hand, was denied the Victoria Cross, which he had so well earned. He received no reward or recognition, and not until several years after the mutiny, at the urgent and repeated solicitations of Lord Strathnairn (ever anxious to reward merit in the army he commanded), Captain Chalmers was promoted to a brevet majority. For nineteen years this meritorious officer remained second in command of the Jat Horse (now known as the 14th Bengal Lancers), and not until last February did he receive command of the regiment he had led with such undaunted valour in many a headlong charge. Colonel Robert Chalmers is now beyond the reach of praise, but this notice of his services will be gratifying to his numerous friends in England and India.—I am, Sir, your obedient servant,

C. R. Low, Lieutenant (late) Indian Navy.

CYPRUS.*

The most recent contribution to the literature which has been rapidly supplied to meet the craving for information as the last British acquisition, is an interesting work, the merits of which we find it hard exactly to distribute between the traveller and the translator. In the spring of last year, a Bavarian traveller, Herr von Löher, paid a visit to this island. Little foreseeing that in a few months so great a change would pass over the fortunes of Cyprus, he recorded his impressions of the country and people in a small volume which was published at Stuttgart. This forms the groundwork of Mrs. Batson Joyner's "Cyprus, Historical and Descriptive." To the vivid observations of the German explorer she has added supplementary knowledge drawn from the accounts of General de Cesnola, and other sources. The whole forms a most readable volume, which will instruct the curious—and who is not?—as to the past history, the present condition and even the possible future of the "gem of the Syrian Sea." The natural beauty and fertility of the island seem to have made a strong impression on the German traveller. More fortunate than the special correspondents who have drawn such dreary pictures of the country, he viewed it first in spring time, when the environs of Larnaka "formed an oriental picture of great beauty, and he could not help exclaiming to himself, "if this is the worst part of the country, what a paradise the interior must be." With German thoroughness he visited almost every part of the island, even climbing, to the wonder and disgust of his attendants, to the castle of Buffavento and the deserted summits of Mount Olympus; but though everywhere he found abundant proofs of the natural fertility of the country, his description of the plain of Messaria occupying nearly half the island, describes the impression left on his mind by the general desolation and neglect, however relieved by oases of luxuriant beauty.

It "two centuries ago was one highly-cultivated field, filled with corn, vines, fruit, and vegetables. Numerous cotton and silk-weaving establishments also formerly flourished here. Every year this once fruitful plain becomes more unfit for cultivation. Nothing fills the mind of the traveller in Cyprus with sadder reflections than the sight of this general ruin and rapid decay." He does not give an encouraging account of the Greek population, whose virtues seem to be like the manners of the Tartars, notwithstanding that for thirty years the Greek clergy have been actively promoting education. The simplicity of the wants of the rural population and the ready fertility of the soil are viewed by him as the causes of their supine neglect of industry. His account of the mode in which Signor Mattei succeeded in ridding the country of the annual ravages of the invading swarms of locusts would yield some useful hints to our officials in Southern India. The chapter on the "devastation of her beautiful forests" is most instructive, and oaks, pines, fig-trees, and nut-trees covered the entire island. Under the Lusignans and Venetians the supplies of timber were taken with due precaution; but, commencing with the Turkish conquest, the reign of waste and destruction has gone on till the once well-clothed mountains are bare. The pines are destroyed for the sake of resin and pitch, and the shepherds amuse themselves by burning trees; yet, "should a tract of country be left unravaged for three years, trees of every variety again rear their heads." Even with the drawbacks of the injurious effects on irrigation thus produced, and the lazy farming of the inhabitants, the wheat, wine, and olive oil, as in ancient times, the silk which was introduced in the sixth century, the sugar cane and the cotton, which testify the wisdom of the Templars, are still produced in comparative abundance. The brief summary of the climate, which is given in the Appendix, says that in September the great heat sets in but does not continue long; this hardly enables us to realise the discomforts of the season described by Herr von Löher, when "not a drop of water remains in the brooks and river sources, and travelling is only possible during the night. Business is at a standstill, and people do nothing but inquire how long it will be before the rain comes again." But for fuller particulars, both of the pleasures of the spring and the miseries of the "heated time" in Cyprus, we recommend a perusal of the pages of Mrs. Joyner's "Adaptation." The sketch of the history which is interwoven with Herr von Löher's peregrinations is aptly concluded by a summary of his enthusiastic description of the unfortunate Frederick the Second's attempt to establish his authority over Cyprus; and as a fitting finale the pious patriotism of the adapter has added a sketch of the projects for new routes from the Syrian Sea to the Persian Gulf. Two carefully compiled maps and an index will be found material helps to the reader.

LATE INDIAN EXPERIENCES.*

It is a matter of regret that books written to suit the taste of the million, and to provide pastime and means of diversion for ordinary readers, should so frequently take the lead among publications of the season, simply because the author's name and style, or the particular subject chosen, or the "judicious" use of the advertising trumpet happens to accord with the prevailing humour. We do not for a moment wish to withhold credit from recent successful literary labours, whether in the form of essay, poem, novel, record of travel, biography, and so forth; nor do we deny that success in these cases does, in a great measure, depend on the possession of a certain literary power, without which few writers can win the public. But the general craving for something to amuse and interest, rather than something to edify or be of real use, is not a healthy sign of the days in which we live. And how common is the neglect and misapplication of the many valuable facts and ideas put before us from day to day by competent advisers and thinkers, whose instructive aims are marred in the consideration of their works as mere "books to read" and no more!

We have now before us two volumes by an Indian Ex-Civilian, ably and sensibly written, full of sound reason and common sense, which we make no doubt have been read, and will yet be read, by many in the light of every-day books, and will thus be found, according to the reader's tastes and antecedents, interesting, amusing, or pleasant, as well as uninteresting, tedious, or dreary. Those who seek a story will be disappointed; those who look for new and vivid sketches of character and scenery will not find much to satisfy them; those who wish to gain an insight into a Covenanted Civilian's life and duties in India will be gratified; those who already know India, and have its welfare at heart, will be charmed by the perusal of these pages. Especially may they be commended to the notice of those, in England or abroad, who exercise any authority over our Eastern possessions; for the recorded experiences are indicative of existing abuses, and suggestive of reasonable reforms.

The passages which we are about to quote are taken almost at random. Here is one pregnant with truth and meaning, and, if rightly comprehended, worthy of attention by revisers of the Penal Code, and legislators on the liberty of the Press in Simla and Calcutta:—

Abuse (in Hindustani, g'd'i) is looked upon with great dread in India by native gentlemen. Instead of considering that it defiles the man from whom it proceeds, they think that the person against whom it is levelled is irreparably injured by it, and shrink from it more than they would from a blow. The stain of dishonour caused by the receipt of an abusive epithet cannot be effaced.

Granted that Englishmen are prone to resent abuse as they would a blow, by conventional action, retaliatory or otherwise; yet might circumstances arise when silence would be the conventional as well as Christian course. The native mind, however, is hardly susceptible of the higher morality here contemplated. This extract may be continued:—

I recollect a native gentleman calling on me, and telling me that he thought he ought to pay a visit of ceremony to a young Assistant Superintendent of Police who had recently arrived at the Station; but, he said, 'I am afraid. He is young and hasty, and how do I know but that some word may come out of his mouth which will disgrace me without his meaning anything.' Admitting that the offensive word might not be intended, perhaps, even if not understood, by the person uttering it, the effect on the person addressed would be the same.—(Vol. I., p. 158.)

The following contains a practical hint for the possible guidance of Examining Committees:—

Full marks for each paper were 160; and to pass, it was necessary to get 100. Lawson's plan was to see who had got ninety-seven, or thereabouts, and give them an additional four or five marks each, so as to bring them over the 100. Alison and the Deputy Magistrate had already marked the papers carefully and conscientiously, no doubt, and it remained for Coldham and Lawson to do the same, when an average would be struck by adding the marks given by all the examiners together, and dividing by four. Lawson's theory was, that it was a waste of labour to make four men look over one paper; and that if a man got ninety-seven marks he must know enough about it to make him fit to pass, and therefore, so far as he was concerned, he passed him. It so happened that I had plenty of marks in both papers, so that I did not want any assistance; but it occurred to me that it would be rather hard for other examiners if members of other Local Committees did not happen to hold the same views.—(P. 176.)

Hence may be gathered the moral that discretionary power cannot be wisely, unless justly exercised; or that justice to the few may be injustice to the many.

Who among Indian officials, civil and military, will not attest the fidelity of this description, recalling the period of their initiations into the mysteries of a kachahri:—

On going to office, the first thing was to listen to the reports of a miscellaneous nature sent through the police, cattle-pound keepers, districts postal officials, chowkedarree (why not chaukidari?) tax darogahs, &c., on the Magisterial side; and on the Collectorate side the various reports from the nazir and the ameens sent out in cases of settlement and butwarrah (partitions of estates). The second clerk, Jugdeo Sahai by name, read these out in a glib way; and though I understood their purport, I found it uncommonly difficult to pass orders on each sur le champ, so he (who, of course, knew what a novice I was) suggested the orders to be passed on each. This at first I was inclined to resent, but as I had nothing else to propose, I ended by saying "achchh" (very well); and he dictated the order to the third clerk, sitting next to him, who wrote it on the back of the report, and then it was handed to me for signature. E.g., the pound-keeper of Rowsara, sent in a report that the pound was very much out of repair, and solicited permission to put it in order. I had not the slightest idea what to order; and Jugdeo suggested that the pound-keeper should be ordered to report when the pound had been last repaired, and also to send an estimate of the probable cost of the proposed new repairs. This seemed common sense when suggested, and so did all the other suggestions; but it was annoying to feel one's ignorance and want of savoir faire in the matter, and it took me some little time to obtain the experience necessary to get on without him.—(P. 205.)

Fortunate would it be, in our estimation, if every public man had his Jugdeo Sahai at his elbow at all times and in all places. It is not so easy to find one on an emergency, and emergencies will happen in Europe as in India. Nothing can well be more mischievous than the common occurrence of mistaking a pretender for the real Jugdeo.

A man had been killed by lightning; and the police officer had come to hold an inquest, so as to put the Magistrate in full possession of the particulars of casualty. But the proceedings had to pass through divers prescribed channels, or in the language of the Ex-Civilian:—

As there was no Assistant Superintendent of police at Durbhungah, the formal report had to be sent in to the District Superintendent at Mozufferpore, and from him back again to the Court Inspector, or police officer attached to my Court. Thus, after the lapse of a week, I received the report, stating how the man had been killed, and that his Highness Gordon Sahib, the "Assistant" Magistrate of Durbhungah, had brought the splendour of the day to the spot, and seen the corpse with his own blessed eyes.

In default of space we can only ask attention to the pages headed "Castes and Clothing," "An Execution," and "A Substituted Corpse" (pp. 29, 37, and 109, Vol. II.), as characteristic of the people among whom the author of "Life in the Mofussil" has moved. Lest it should be imagined, however, that his volumes contain only a sober and quasi-educational record of Indian experiences, let us state, in conclusion, that such is far from the case. The book is fluently and well written, and should be found easily readable from beginning to end.

THE TRUTH ABOUT QUETTAH.

As the scheme for the separation of the Frontier from the Punjab—as decided upon between the Viceroy and Secretary of State for India—bears development, the question of the re-occupation of Quettah is likely enough to cause further comments and discussion in the Press here and at home. An impression appears to have fixed itself in the minds of several writers that this re-occupation has been, as it were, the result of a thought of yesterday, and the fore-runner of an entirely new policy as regards our North-West Frontier. How far this impression is correct may be gathered from a perusal of certain papers which have been embodied in a Blue-book prepared by order of Parliament, and by attention to a simple narrative of facts which we have put together, so that those who run may read. Three years ago the condition of affairs in Biluchistan was of so disturbed and troublesome a nature that the Secretary of State for India, in a despatch addressed to Lord Northbrook, declared that unless relations with the Khelat Government could be restored on the old friendly footing, Khelat itself must cease to be an independent State. It may be as well here to describe briefly the constitutions of the Khelat Government. When Sir Alexander Burnes was accredited to Khelat by Lord Auckland, he found that the Government there was a constitutional and not a despotic one. The Khan was simply the head of a confederacy of Chiefs, and could only exercise power according to known precedents which were accepted by all, and as a rule unhesitatingly obeyed. Now and then a powerful Sirdar would perhaps endeavour to act independently, but this was the exception to the rule. The Chiefs as a body held by and obeyed the State laws. There were certainly frequent quarrels and fights between the Sirdars and the Khan, but these generally arose from the attempt on one side or the other to evade the responsibilities enjoined upon them by the constitution. The present Ruler nearly lost his throne by inaugurating a policy opposed to the one framed by his predecessors. He aimed at becoming a despotic Prince, which so roused the just fears of the Sirdars, that they rose in rebellion, and temporarily deposed him, restoring him to his throne only after his promise to entirely change his attitude towards them, and to observe the constitution. This promise he failed to keep, and the consequence was that affairs in Biluchistan and on the Sindh frontier became so seriously disturbed as to necessitate the penning of the Secretary of State's despatch to which we have referred. The Government of India considered that an immediate interference was necessary—an interference which would restore tranquillity not only in Khelat, but secure quiet on the Sind border. This led to the mission of Major Sandeman, who, sent by Lord Northbrook to Khelat, succeeded in bringing about a satisfactory settlement of difficulties, ensuring peace amongst the disputants, and saving the threatened independence of Biluchistan. Lord Lytton, on succeeding to the Viceroyalty, availed himself of the opportunity afforded by Major Sandeman's report of renewing and re-affirming the former treaty with the Khan and his Sirdars, securing to both parties their ancient inheritance. By this treaty the Khan guaranteed to the Sirdars the old State Constitution, the Sirdars on their part again taking the oath of allegiance to the Khan, and both sides swearing on the Koran to observe the State laws. Both Khan and Chiefs requested that the British Government might arbitrate between them in any future quarrels, declaring that such a step would preserve the permanence of peace. Lord Lytton hesitated to accept this responsibility without obtaining some clear and decisive proof that both sides were in earnest. They were informed that they must appear together at Jacobabad, and there, in the presence of the Viceroy, sign the new treaty and renew their engagements. The Khan readily accepted this proposal, and attended by every Chief of note in his State, met Lord Lytton at Jacobabad, and in his presence all parties ratified their engagements towards each other and with the British Government. Upon this the Viceroy consented to accept, on behalf of the latter, the position of arbitrator, should differences again arise between the Sirdars and their Ruler. It was at this time that the question was mooted as to the locality where the troops which were to be under the orders of the Governor-General's Agent in Biluchistan should be stationed. After full inquiry and deliberation Quettah and Mitri were fixed upon as the most suitable places. Mustang and Munguchur were named, but the advantages offered by Quettah outweighed all others. In the first place, it commands the Bolan Pass, and a force quartered there can always act as a check against the bellicose propensities of the Biluch and Pathan races. Again, at Quettah the territories of the Biluch tribes and those of the Khan of Khelat terminate, and those of the Amir of Afghanistan commence. Reliable news of all that is transpiring in Kabul and the other Khanates of Central Asia can be obtained at Quettah, and at the present time this of itself is no little advantage. It has been urged by Lord Lawrence and writers of the "masterly inactivity" school, that the occupation of Quettah means really the permanent occupation of Biluchistan and an ultimate advance to Herat and Kandahar. But this is discounting the future. Sufficient unto the day is its evil or its good. There is no intention of moving beyond the strong outpost which a vigorous policy has now put into our hands. Timid counsels have advised instead a retrograde move; but this advice, we are glad to know, only meets with the derision it deserves. Quettah will not be given up. Its occupation by British troops has given peace to Biluchistan, after broils and disturbances extending back to twenty years, and it has lent tranquillity to our own frontier. All parties have benefited. The Khan is secure in the inheritance derived from his ancestors; the Sirdars have been guaranteed their estates; cultivation in Khelat has become quadrupled, and trade is flourishing to an extraordinary degree. "Peace hath her victories no less renowned than war" and this triumph of diplomacy is one of them, thanks to the exhibition of a vigorous policy, and the tact, judgment and courage of the agent employed to carry it out—Major Sandeman. Without bloodshed, without seizure of territory or hostages, the Government of India has secured to itself all the benefit that could have accrued to the Indian Empire by the taking of Khelat, but without incurring any of the evils or responsibilities of annexation.—Civil and Military Gazette, July 15.

STATION TALK.

LUCKNOW, July 21.—The Jumma Musjid, about which I wrote to you some time ago, seems in a baddish way. At the entrance gate there are sets of rooms on either side. The verandah and side wall on the right hand as you enter look very unsteady. The arch in the side wall is cracked, and the front wall pushed out of its perpendicular. The roof is sunk and the rafters bent. The solitary minaret which is left standing appears to have been an after-thought, and not built at the same time as the rest of the mosque; a large crack meanders about where the foundation of this minaret joins the mosque plinth, and the native residents assert that, in a high wind, the minaret itself playfully sways about in the breeze. The crack between the main building and the minaret is probably due to this wobbling of the minaret and the vibration caused thereby; if this be correct, we may expect to see the crack increase, the minaret spire go out of perpendicular, and then down will come minaret No. 2. The mosque itself has a vaulted roof with three main arches. The arches are all cracked, and there is a longitudinal crack along the vaulted roof which supports the three domes above. The left hand side arches are a good deal knocked about, owing to a portion of the minaret which fell the other day having fallen against these side arches. The domes above the roof are very much out of repair, and out of these domes sprout several young trees. I am afraid it will cost a lot of money to repair and preserve this old landmark of Lucknow.—Pioneer Correspondent.

Miscellaneous.

THE LIEUTENANT-GOVERNOR left Calcutta last Wednesday for a lengthened tour en route for Darjeeling. Sikkim Rajah will meet him at Damsang. He desires advice and assistance with reference to the conduct of Nepaulese immigrants in obstructing the collection of rents.—Times' Telegram.

JUGGURNAUT is said to be in a bad way since the imprisonment of the hereditary protector of sacred affairs. The late Car Festival was a complete failure. It is in contemplation to hand over the great god to the tender mercies of a most useful institution—the Court of Wards, though Juggurnaut can hardly be said to be still in his minority.—Ibid.

THE quantity of salt of every description cleared in the fourth quarter of 1877-78 from the Bengal market amounted to 2,174,904 maunds 16 seers 11 chittacks, and the duty levied thereon aggregated Rs. 6,445,047-8-1, both showing an increase over those of the previous quarter as well as the corresponding quarter of the preceding year.

RELIEF WAGES.—Surgeon-Major Townsend, who has been making a special tour of inquiry in the North-West, at the instance of the Famine Commission, has reported that the large gangs of labourers employed on the relief-works at Agra and Muttra are in excellent condition, and that the rate of wage allowed—which has been so much discussed and in some quarters so freely condemned—appears to be ample.

THE FAMINE COMMISSION.—The Commission will continue its sittings at Simla till towards the commencement of the cold weather. By that time it hopes to have received answers to the voluminous Famine catechism which it circulated some time ago, and, having digested these, it will endeavour to narrow its inquiries to certain leading points of main importance. It is then proposed to take advantage of the cold weather to visit the various provinces, to collect information on the spot, and to examine witnesses viva voce.

THE DEATH OF MR. BATCHELOR.—The friends of the late Mr. Batchelor will read with interest the following telegram which has been received by the Agent in Calcutta:—From Private Secretary to the Governor-General, Simla, to Agent East India Railway, Calcutta, dated 25th July 1878:—"Viceroy has heard with deep regret of the death of Mr. Batchelor, and desires me to request you will be good enough to communicate to his family and friends the expression of his Excellency's sincere sorrow and sympathy."

KAKHYEN HILLS.—The Rangoon Times learns that a consignment of the King of Burmah's produce, consisting of several hundred mules' loads of cotton proceeding from Bhamo to South-Western China, had to be brought back to Bhamo by the officials in charge, in consequence of the disturbed state of the Kakhyen hills, where desultory fighting was going on when the last accounts left.

CALCUTTA UNIVERSITY.—The Senate of the Calcutta University have at length determined to admit women to their degrees, and the last Gazette of India publishes the conditions under which this acknowledgment of women's rights is to take effect. From these rules it may be at once seen that the examinations are not to be conducted on the principle of place aux dames; with slight modifications, the subjects and method of examination will be the same for males and females.

ORDERS have at last been received at Moradabad in reference to the late unfortunate occurrences in the 28th Native Infantry. It is not yet known what the Commander-in-Chief will do about the charges preferred by Colonel Hamilton against Major Constable, but meanwhile Major Hills has been recalled from Shahjehanpore and directed to take over the command of the regiment and station of Moradabad from Colonel Hamilton. This was done on the 28th July. Major Constable, by orders from head-quarters, was released from arrest, though not directed to resume his ordinary duties. —Pioneer.

VACCINATION RETURNS.—During 1877-78 there were 704,055 persons vaccinated in the North-West Provinces, and the average annual number of deaths from small-pox during the previous five years was 54,697; while nineteen persons out of every thousand of the population were successfully vaccinated. Vaccination in Oudh appears not to be in a satisfactory condition; but this is probably the result of the small number of vaccinators, there being only one to every 180,000 of the population.

EDUCATION IN BURMA.—The annual report on public instruction in British Burma for 1876-77 has been submitted to the Secretary of State, who regards it, on the whole, as very favourable. That the work of education in Burma is progressing rapidly is shown by the fact that in 1872-73 there were only 20 schools of all kinds and 2,817 pupils, while in the year now reported on the schools had increased to 1,310 and the pupils to 47,757.

CURRENCY NOTES.—Following the example lately set at Lahore, and which is probably coming into force generally, the Bengal Bank (Lucknow Branch) has issued notices declining to accept Calcutta currency notes at their full value, unless commission be paid for exchange. The two other Lucknow banks have followed suit. Therefore, commission has to be paid on Calcutta, Bombay, and Madras currency notes. The Bengal Bank only issues currency notes of the Allahabad circles.

THE ALLAHABAD BANK (LIMITED) affords a very fair illustration of the saying that nothing succeeds like success. The first dividend it paid, some thirteen years ago, was at the rate of 5 per cent. per annum, and now it is about to declare a dividend of 16 per cent.—that is to say, of 8 per cent. for the last half-year. And in addition Rs. 5,000 is to be carried to the Reserve Fund and Rs. 6,312 to the new account. Its paid-up capital is 3 lakhs of rupees, and its working capital more than 17 lakhs, whilst the amount of its reserve fund is close upon Rs. 70,000.

MEYWAR BHEEL CORPS.—The much-coveted command of the Meywar Bheel Corps, vacant by the recent death of Major Gunning, is to be given by Colonel C. R. Blair, Commandant of the Mhairwarra Battalion, but at present officiating for Colonel Carnell, now absent on furlough, in the command of the Erinpoorah Irregular Force. The change will not, however, take place until Colonel Carnell's return. Meantime Major F. W. Boileau will continue Acting-Commandant of the Meywar Bheels, and perhaps eventually obtain the Mhairwarra Battalion, which Colonel Blair is to vacate.

PRIZES AT HORSE SHOWS.—The Government of India, on the recommendation of Mr. Hallen, the General Superintendent of Horse-breeding Operations, has sanctioned the expenditure of a sum of Rs. 16,500 for prizes at the Metropolitan horse fairs and horse shows in the North-Western Provinces, the Punjab, and Rajputana during the year 1878-79. This gives an increase of Rs. 2,600 as compared with the current year, but Rs. 1,500 of the difference is to be applied to new district horse-shows at Bareilly, Lahore, and Multan, the balance being devoted to increasing the value of the prizes at Aligarh, Bulandshahr, Hardwar and Shahpur. —Times of India.

A LADY SANSKRIT SCHOLAR.—Recently, on the occasion of a certain ceremony in the house of a well-known Pundit of Calcutta, a young Mahratta woman was invited along with others. This young lady, apparently not older than twenty-two, manifested an extent of Sanskrit scholarship at which the most eminent Pundits of the town invited on the occasion simply stood aghast. She could not only recite and explain any passage from Bhagavat, one of the most difficult books in Hindu classics, but improvise Sanskrit verses on any text proposed on the occasion. A challenge was made before the whole assembly for anybody present to compose Sanskrit verses with as much readiness and accuracy as the fair Mahratta scholar, but no one was found gallant enough to come forward and take up the challenge. Roma Bye—that is the name of the young lady—comes from the Carnatic, though she is a Mahratta by birth. We are told she is unmarried, and is on a pilgrimage to Juggernath with her brothers. —Mirror.

THE FIRE AT MANDALAY.—A curious confirmation of a current Burmese superstition was given by the late fire at Mandalay. In a letter dated from that city on July 1, and published in the Rangoon Gazette, disasters in that city by fire were anticipated in that month—the anticipation being based upon some traditional or religious belief prevailing among the people. The writer said, "Whenever the first day of the month commences with a Saturday, the Burmese put the month down for one in which fire will be the reigning element. The present month of Wahzoe began with a Saturday, and as the Burmese have it, we had a fire in the outskirts of the town, in which I am told an old man was burned to death." Four days after this was written 4,750 houses were reduced to dust and ashes by the conflagration which "commenced from a shanty near the Mekhara Prince's premises, situate about the S.W. corner of the city, and with a strong southerly breeze it swept off every building, brick, wood and bamboo, up to the northern city walls. It also burnt down the western gate, and had it not been for timely aid the houses outside the city northward would also have been destroyed."

CONSULAR AGENTS.—Major Sherman, British Consular Agent at Pondicherry, and Major Bowness Fisher, Consular Agent at Karikal, have been permitted to exchange appointments.

DEATHS FROM SUNSTROKE.—Another surgeon of the Madras Army, making the fifth within a month—Surgeon G. A. Ross, of the 20th Native Infantry, has died of sunstroke at Nangong, where he was in charge of a small-pox camp.

G.I.P. RAILWAY.—It is stated that Mr. Barnett, Agent of the G.I.P. Railway, will shortly proceed to England on a few months' leave, and that Mr. Wilson Bell, the Chief Engineer, will act for him during his absence.

ACCIDENT AT THE GOVERNORS' DEPARTURE.—A dangerous accident occurred at the departure of his Grace the Governor for Ootacamund, on the 27th ult., when the Prince of Arcot and a number of ladies and gentlemen had assembled at the station. The horses of a waggionette which formed part of the cortège, took fright, and dashed into the rank of carriages three of which were much damaged; one unfortunate coachman was severely injured.

THE "MADRAS ATHENÆUM."—The Madras Athenæum of the 31st ult. contains an announcement that "the oldest paper in Madras has passed into new hands." The proprietor, not being able to devote to it the necessary time and attention, has disposed of it to the manager of the Lawrence Asylum Printing-Press, and Mr. Rowlandson, solicitor.

LIBEL CASE.—In the case of General and Mrs. Morgan v. The Neilgherry Press Company, the Commissioner has delivered judgment. He found the paragraph in the South of India Observer libellous, and allowed damages five hundred rupees. Consideration was duly given to the fact that the Editor seemed to have regretted what had passed in his absence, to have desired to make amends. An appeal to the High Court is certain.—Madras Times.

RAJAMUNDY PROVINCIAL SCHOOL.—The Secretary of State has sanctioned a proposal of the Madras Government that the Provincial School at Rajamundry be raised to the status of a Provincial College, and that certain additions be made to the salaries of the head master and his assistants. The additional cost involved will be met by reductions in other educational establishments of the Presidency.

FAMINE SERVICES.—The Madras Government have furnished the Supreme Government with a list of the military officers and others who distinguished themselves during the recent famine campaign, with a view to an official expression of thanks being published. We believe that in some cases—cases, for instance, in which men have broken down and gone home sick—certain recommendations have been made to the Financial Department, which are still under discussion, and the result of which may serve to emphasise the publication referred to.—Pioneer.

MADRAS MEASURE.—Some time ago, under the orders of the Government of India, the Board of Revenue was entrusted with the power of examining and reporting upon the different measures in use in the districts of the Madras Presidency. Such an examination was considered essential, owing to the different standard measures used in the districts and sometimes in the same district. After a good deal of correspondence, the Board of Revenue ruled that the Madras measure should be 117 tola in weight. The local measure was usually 120 tola, and in accordance with the Revenue Board's orders it was reduced from 120 to 117 tola. The reduction in the capacity of the measure is about a fortieth part of it, or three tola. Introduced from the 1st July, 1878, the beginning of the fusly year.

PROSPECTS IN MYSOR.—Very good news has at length reached us, says the Bombay Gazette of Aug. 2nd, from Mysor, the rainfall having, says the latest official report, now extended over the western districts that have hitherto suffered from want of moisture. The early crops have in consequence revived, transplanting has begun, and the district officers see no present cause for further anxiety. Light showers have been general through the province, and the agricultural prospects everywhere are now good. Locusts seem to have nearly disappeared. Prices in the eastern districts continue to show a slight improvement; and the tendency to rise in the West has been checked. But all grain is still very dear, and weeding operations have scarcely commenced; there is no decrease in the numbers still on relief. Imports of grain by rail amounted to 1,370 tons, or 109 tons less than last week. From Bangalore 342 tons, or 14 tons more than in the previous week, were exported to the interior. On Civil Relief Works there were 3,874 labourers, or an increase of 74. On professionally supervised works there were 29,254 relief labourers, being more by 149 than in the preceding week. There were besides 11,047 employed on the ordinary D.P. works.

SOUTH INDIAN RAILWAY.—The sanction of the Government of India to the proposal for connecting Chingleput with Conjeveram by a line, as a part of the South Indian Railway system, has not been granted; but further information has been requested on the following points:—The facts as to the traffic on the Arconum-Conjeveram Line for 1876. The local traffic of the Madras-Arconum Section of the Madras Railway for 1876. The road traffic between Conjeveram and Madras and Chingleput, passengers and goods, for any convenient recent period. The local traffic on the Madras-Chingleput Section of the South Indian Railway from the date of opening up to the latest date, that for 1877 being separately shown on account of the famine. The through traffic over the last mentioned section. The through traffic over the section of the Madras Railway between Madras and Arconum. At present Conjeveram is connected with Madras by sixty-two miles of railway, with a break of gauge at Arconum which can be of no real moment to passengers. From Conjeveram to Madras via Chingleput would be fifty-six miles. There may therefore be some abstraction of traffic from the Madras line, and possibly also from the existing section of the South Indian Railway between Madras and Chingleput by the construction of the link. Some attempt to estimate this should be made.

DIRECT MAIL SERVICE TO KARACHI.

Taking advantage of the opportunity afforded by the consideration of the Overland Mail contract we understand that the Chamber of Commerce at Karachi two months ago addressed an application to the Postmaster-General at home, to the effect that in any new contract for the conveyance of Indian mails provision might be made for a direct service between Aden and Karachi. The Chamber in their letter draw attention to the altered position in which Sindh, the Punjab and most of the North-Western Provinces, Rajputana and other adjoining territories, will be placed as regards postal communication with Europe consequent on the working of the Indus Valley Line. They argue that, as a first consequence of the use of this line, Karachi will become the natural and nearest sea-port for all places north of Delhi. Bombay, they say, is 1,648 miles from Aden, Karachi about 1,435, from which it is apparent that a steamer bringing mails to Karachi direct will be able to do so in nearly a day less than is occupied to Bombay, and assuming that a faster rate of speed is arranged for. The extent of country which would thus be benefited comprises Simla, Lahor, all the stations on the Punjab Northern State, and Sindh, Punjab and Delhi Railways, the military positions on the North-West frontier, and Karachi itself for whose advancing commercial importance the Chamber claim special consideration. The economy which would thus be effected for Karachi as compared with the present system would be from four to five days, Multan three to four days, and places between Lahor and Peshawar two. Further, it is argued that an alternative line over the most dangerous part of the ocean is also a recommendation in favour of a regular steam branch service between the two ports, the distance from Allahabad to Aden, via Karachi, being 2,957 miles, against 2,940 via Bombay. The variations of the monsoon also favour such a route, whilst the general benefit from the acceleration of State despatches and ordinary correspondence would be very great. The Chamber also point out that there would be a large saving in home mails for and from the Persian Gulf; and they urge that if their suggestions be adopted and a line established, the same speed may be stipulated for as that of the main line. In forwarding this communication to the Government of India (to whom apparently it ought to have been originally addressed), the Secretary of State desires that, after consultation with the Director-General of Post Offices in India, the Government will, at their earliest convenience, favour him with their opinion on the Chamber's application.

Miscellaneous.

SUICIDE AT WANOWRIE.—The Poona Observer states that Orderly-room Sergeant William Ward, 2-11th Regiment, stationed at Wanowrie, committed suicide by discharging the contents of a loaded rifle at himself at Mosloch on the morning of the 23rd ult. The cause of this rash act is unknown.

ROBBERY OF THE OODEYPORE TREASURE CHEST.—The treasury of the Rana of Oodeypore was lately plundered on its way from Ahmedabad to Oodeypore by a gang of fifty men. Some armed men were in charge of the treasury, but they were overpowered, and the robbers carried off as much as they liked. On the same road a merchant was plundered of Rs. 7,000.—Deccan Herald.

PUBLIC HEALTH.—The rate of mortality in Bombay last week rose again to 42·92 a thousand of the population per annum. There were 188 deaths from remittent fever, and thirty from cholera.

BARODA.—The Baroda correspondent of the Bombay Gazette writes, 27th and 28th ult., that the Viswamuntree and its feeders had overflowed their banks, and that the country was flooded. Since the rainfall has commenced the numerous starving emigrants had returned to their villages. Ten deaths from cholera were reported in week ending 24th.

CHOLERA.—The reports of the Bombay season for the week ending July 24, give a favourable account of the prospects. Much damage has resulted to crops from floods in Sind. Cholera, however, is reported as very prevalent in many parts. In Poona 46 deaths, and number of cases increasing; in Ahmednagar, 104 deaths; in Sattara, 507; in Khandeish, 78 deaths.

REPORTED SHIPWRECK.—It is reported by the Port Officer, Chittagong, that two Maldivian lascars have informed him of the loss of a large European ship laden with salt from Bombay. The men were able only to speak their own language, and the evidence gained from them, therefore, has been but slight. No salt was expected, and he has been unable consequently to identify the vessel; but the straightforward manner in which the men submitted their statements inclines him to believe that some ship has been really lost on the eastern coast of Bengal.

The recent heavy rains in Guzerat caused a great rise in the Nerbudda and Taptee rivers. Fears were entertained that a portion of the city of Surat would be flooded by the overflow of the Taptee; but the water has subsided, and all danger is over for the present. A portion of the old railway bridge over the Nerbudda, near Broach, has been washed away, but communication was soon restored. The last occasion on which a similar accident occurred was in 1876, when nearly half the bridge was swept away.—Times of India.

THE ICE SUPPLY.—After having endeavoured for half a century to secure a regular supply of ice, the Government of Bombay have officially notified their intention not to renew the lease of the Government ice-house, which expires on May 14, 1879. After that date the ice-house will be put up for sale by public auction. The Bombay Gazette thinks that, as however stringent the provisions of the lease as to constant supply seem to have been easily evaded, the public will lose nothing by the supply of ice passing altogether into the ordinary conditions of supply and demand.

MAHARANI SURNOMOYE.—Bombay has held a solemnity for the purpose of investing Maharanie Surnomoye with the Insignia of the Imperial Order of the Crown of India. This lady is the Burdett-Coutts of India, and of all natives the most eminently distinguished for her noble and enlightened benevolence. She has contributed over £20,000 to famine charities, by the Commissioner from 1871 to 1877, and bestowed over £50,000 in works of charity and public utility. During that period she had expended in charity one-sixth of her whole income. Worthily indeed has this noble woman, by great personal merit, earned the high distinction bestowed upon her by the Queen.

SURAT.—A telegram from Surat states that the prosecution against the Surat editors commenced on the 19th inst. Immense crowds swarmed around the court and grounds. One witness, on being examined, stated that despite the loss of a million lives, despite that the extent of land under cultivation this year was larger than in any previous year, the province of Mysor was growing in population faster than its means of support. While the people, he said, increased in geometrical ratio, the produce of the land fails to increase in any measure equal to that of the population.—Time's Telegram.

THE SURAT RIOTS.—In his reply to the Government of India's letter regarding the late Surat riots, the Secretary of State expresses his full approval of the course followed by the Government of India in establishing under the provisions of the Bombay District Police Act a punitive post of 110 men in addition to the ordinary police of the city. His Lordship expresses his regret that some persons of better social position than those of whom mobs are ordinarily composed appear to have been engaged in the Surat riots. Of the officials actually concerned in the repression of the disturbances the Secretary of State writes:—"Mr. Ollivant, the officer in charge of the office of District Magistrate, appears to have acquitted himself, in a position of considerable responsibility, with great judgment and temper, and to have been ably supported by the Superintendent of Police, Mr. Scannell. I notice, too, with satisfaction, that the latter officer and Messrs. Younghusband and White conducted themselves most creditably under very trying circumstances. I regret that two lives should have been lost, but both Police and Military behaved, in my opinion, with firmness and patience."

THE KARACHI ROUTE.—The following information as to the route to England, via Karachi, is furnished by the Labor paper, in reply to numerous inquiries, and may be useful to outward-bound passengers; also the line from Sukkur to Kotri will, it is hoped, be opened on the 1st of August, completing the communication from Multan to Karachi, excepting the break at Sukkur, which will be supplied meantime by a steam ferry. Travelling by the Indus Valley Railway in the hot season is trying; but now that the train runs during the night, the route is preferable to that by Bombay for Punjab travellers, and especially so for those from Multan and the frontier. The distance from Multan to Bombay is nearly 1,800 miles, while that from Multan to Karachi is little over 600 miles. The journey might be broken at Sukkur, where there are two travellers' bungalows, or at Kotri, where there is a good bungalow and an excellent cook. There are good refreshment rooms at the principal stations along the line. There is a large, though not very comfortable, travellers' bungalow at Karachi, but as yet no hotel.

RESULTS OF TEST CENSUS.—The conclusions drawn from the test census taken in January last are stated in an official communication to the Government as follows:—1. That the new Census taken in the talukas or tracts of country selected as the worst or most distressed by the famine does seem to show a diminution in the population. 2. That this diminution is in a considerable degree apparent only, as arising from migration, and partly real, as arising from mortality. 3. That the mortality arose partly from sickness other than famine—sickness extending not only throughout the year 1877, that is, the year of famine, but also throughout the two previous years 1876 and 1875, which were not years of famine—and partly also from famine. 4. That the mortality arising from famine itself cannot be exactly estimated, but probably it was not considerable, or was rather comparatively inconsiderable.

GUJRATI PRIZES.—The Cutch Council of Regency have resolved that:—"It appears highly desirable to encourage the study of Gujarati, the vernacular language of Gujrat and Cutch, and to assist those who endeavour to improve the Gujarati language and literature by publishing original works or translations from English or Sanscrit. His Highness the young Rao has also expressed his wish to encourage the laudable task of forming and developing the current dialect of H.H.'s territories. With the object of carrying out the wishes of H.H. the Maharaja and the desire of the Council of Regency, it has been decided that two prizes should be given after open competition, through the Gujrat Vernacular Society at Ahmedabad, every year. The value of the prizes, which shall be called the Rao Shree Kengarji Prizes, will be from Rs. 200 to Rs. 400 each. H.H. the Rao desires to pay for one of these prizes every year, and the Council of Regency will give the other. The essays shall be on original composition, and a translation from English or Sanscrit."—Bombay Gazette.

THE LATE SIR COWASJEE JEHANGIER, KT., C.S.I.—The benefactions of the late Sir Cowasjee Jehangier amounted, according to the Bombay Gazette, to eighteen lakhs expended on public charities, and four lakhs in private benevolence. The following table shows the catholic and practical character of his principal benefactions and donations:—

SOLDIERS' NEXT-OF-KIN.—Some thousands of pounds of unclaimed soldiers' balances, we observe from the latest War Office Army List, are now lying idle at the War Office. Is there anyone who can claim next-of-kin to the late Sergeant William Fitzwallen, of the 67th foot, now located at Bangalore? There is a nice little sum of £137. 14s. 6d. awaiting his claim at the War Office. There are also, amongst other amounts, sums of £148. 17s., £111. 1s. 11d., £295. 8s. and £107. 10s. 2d. awaiting claimants to the estates of Private Inker, 4th Hussars, Private Riordan, 103rd (Royal Bombay Fusiliers), Schoolmaster Green, of the 5th brigade, Royal Artillery, St. Thomas' Mount, and Sergeant Baxter, 1-17th foot, which should be sufficiently tempting to awaken inquiry.—Madras Times.

A BABOO ON HIS DIGNITY.—The writer of the Englishman's "Week" has the following good story:—"Everyone knows how utterly careless the native mind is of the value of time, but I have seldom heard of a better instance of this than the following, which was lately told me by a gentleman who had been travelling on the East Indian Railway. My informant, another European, and a Baboo, who said he was an agent or head clerk to a European firm of contractors, were travelling second-class per down mail. On arrival at a station on the Chord Line, the Baboo inquired if such was its name; the gentleman replied in the affirmative, whereupon the Baboo called for the porter to open the door and take out a small office box. The gentlemen told the Baboo he had better look sharp as the train stayed only a few minutes; finding no porter coming, one European opened the carriage door, while the other offered to hand out the office box to the Baboo; but this would not suit Baboodom in authority; he replied: 'Oh, if no porter came he could travel on to the next station, eleven miles, and there porters would do the needful,' and he could return by a return train. He fully carried out these splendid plans. Whether he was provided with a pass, or his employer had to pay his return journey, or he paid none at all, my informant was unable to state."

THE BRITISH ASSOCIATION.

At the meeting of the Geographical Section on the 20th inst. Mr. A. Burrell, M.R.A.S., F.S.S., of London, read a paper on "The Geographical Distribution of the Tea Plant." Tea, as a beverage, was known in Europe in the beginning of the sixteenth century, became a regular article of consumption in the seventeenth, formed one of the largest imports from China in the eighteenth, and was now the special beverage of all English-speaking peoples, both in the New World and the Old. The botany, method of culture, and modes of manipulation were, however, little known here till about forty years ago. The Jesuit missionaries in China and Japan were our first informants of the virtues of tea. The Portuguese and the Dutch, who, long before our East India Company was established, traded with these countries, introduced it commercially to Europe, and there was evidence of its use in England in 1610, during the reign of James I., possibly introduced by his Portuguese Queen. The tea plant at first reached Europe in 1763, when the great botanist, Linnæus, received a seedling which, however, notwithstanding the most assiduous care, soon perished. The earliest plant that had really flowered and produced seed was at Zion House, near London, in 1768. In China the tea plant was in common use from the seventh century; in Japan from the eighth. It grew in these countries between 40° and 42° of North latitude, and was capable of being grown as far of South latitude, though the best tea was produced in China between 27° and 30° North latitude. Up to the first quarter of the present century all the tea consumption of the world was supplied from China. In 1827 the culture was introduced by the Dutch in Java, and has ever since proved a successful undertaking. In 1834, immediately after the abolition of the East India Company's monopoly of trade to the East, tea was introduced from China into India, not at first becoming a profitable undertaking. But next year the plant was discovered growing wild in Assam. Tea, both from the China plant and from this Assam kind, was now grown throughout all India, and with the result that, for variety of strength, pungency, and flavour, our great dependency was now producing tea which China could not rival, and that, great and growing as the demand was, India was destined to be the great tea producer of the future. He adverted to the fact that, beginning with a production of only four pounds in 1840 she now sent into this country forty millions of pounds—as great a quantity as was consumed in the whole of the United Kingdom in 1837. The author then took up the distribution of the tea plant in other countries. These were:—In Asia: the Corea, Tonquin, Cochin China, Annam, Ava, and Burmah, where the tea plant was cultivated to some extent, but only for native consumption. It had been introduced to Brazil in 1827. The French had attempted its cultivation in 1841. It was now growing in Mauritius, the Isle of France, St. Helena, at Singapore, in Ceylon, and our Australian Colonies. In the West India islands it had also been recently introduced, and the recent report of Kew gave a good account of its condition in Jamaica. Nor had our American cousins neglected it. They had sent to China in 1857 for plants, and tried the culture near Washington, in Virginia, and Carolina; quite recently they have tried it in California, and near Baltimore. Lastly, Mr. Burrell took up the question of the original home of the tea plant. In Japan it was admitted on all hands not to be indigenous. In China it was long held to be native to the soil, but more recent researches have thrown doubt on this point, and the balance of evidence seems to point to the Assam Valley of India along the course of the Brahmahpootra as the original seat of the plant. This is supported by the fact that, while in China the tea plant is never found thoroughly wild away from man's habitation, and is more of a herb than a tree; in Assam, on the other hand, and in the hill ranges surrounding that valley, it is found everywhere growing wild, and attaining great height as a tree, usually fifteen to twenty feet high, and even by a report just received from India, sixty to eighty feet high, and of the girth of three to four feet, among the secluded Naga hills. Mr. Burrell finished by citing from a variety of recent travellers in the vast stretch of country intervening between the frontiers of India and China, and on either side, evidence of the tea growing wild, and constantly of smaller dimensions as it approached to China, thus affording ground for his contention, which was further supported by the legends of China and Japan, that the tea plant was introduced there by a Buddhist missionary from India.

A discussion ensued, in which Sir George Campbell, M.P.; E. W. Cooke, R.A., F.R.S.; Mr. Marcus Moses, and other gentlemen took part. At the end of the proceedings about a hundred ladies and gentlemen adjourned to the adjoining committee room to refresh themselves with Indian tea, dispensed under the temporary presidency of Mrs. Burton, wife of the distinguished traveller.

Miscellaneous.

EXPORT OF SPECTE.—The Peninsular and Oriental steamer Mirzapore has left with £29,274 in dollars, £21,484 being for Hong Kong, and £7,790 for Shanghai.

BILLS ON INDIA.—The tenders for £300,000 in bills on India were received on Aug. 21 at the Bank of England. The amounts allotted were—to Calcutta, £252,200, at an average rate of 1s. 7-875d.; and to Bombay, £47,800, at an average rate of 1s. 7-875d. Tenders on both Presidencies at 1s. 7½d. will receive about 70 per cent.

RETIRING REGULATIONS.—The following Army Circular has been issued regarding the reckoning of officers' time at Addiscombe towards pension under Indian retiring regulations:—Clause 143; Officers of the Royal Artillery and Line regiments who formerly belonged to the Indian Army and are serving under Indian retiring regulations, and who resigned their cadetships at the seminary at Addiscombe to accept direct appointments in the Artillery and Infantry, will be entitled to reckon towards pension the time passed by them at that seminary after attaining the age of sixteen years.

INDIA MONEY ORDER DEPARTMENT.—From the report on the operations of the Money Order Department just issued, it appears that, in the case of money orders between England and India, much inconvenience is experienced from the defective addresses of payees, as furnished by remitters:—In 127 cases the London office had to ask for more definite addresses of payees than those originally furnished by the remitters, one only of these references having been necessitated by a clerical mistake in this office. In 118 of these cases more complete addresses were afterwards furnished; in two cases payment was transferred to other payees; in five cases repayment was desired by the remitters in India; while in two cases no steps could be taken in consequence of the remitters having left India. At the same time forty-four complaints were preferred by Indian remitters about the non-receipt of their remittances in England, and inquiry into these complaints showed that in forty-two cases payment had been duly made to payees, either direct or through banks, in one only of which there occurred some delay in consequence of the order having, by an oversight in the London office, been made payable to a different payee, who afterwards paid the money to the proper payee. One case is still under reference, while in another case the order was credited to Government under the following circumstances:—The payee had never applied for payment, and when the remitter's complaint reached London, the order had become void. So the remitter was directed by the Money Order Department, at the instance of the London office, to instruct his correspondent to make an application to the Controller, London, for the renewal and payment of the order. But as no steps were taken on this either by the remitter or the payee, the amount of the order was credited to Government. Only seven complaints were preferred by British remitters about non-payment of orders in India. In five of these cases payment had been duly effected; in one case payment was not applied for, and authority was afterwards given for its re-payment in England; and one case, the remitter of which is dead, is still under correspondence. Out of forty-four applications from British remitters for re-payment thirty-seven were granted by the office and seven refused in consequence of payment having been effected in India. Similarly, out of eleven applications for re-payment from Indian remitters, four have been granted, and six refused by the London office; while one is still undisposed of. Great difficulty is sometimes experienced in effecting payment of orders payable to persons on board vessels, who are constantly moving about. Out of the total of thirty-seven orders repaid in England, seventeen were payable to persons on board, to whom payment could not be effected. The office does all in its power to facilitate the payment of these orders by the utmost promptitude in attending to communications received from payees on board vessels, and often relaxing the proper procedure prescribed for money orders generally.
